1328. The Contingencies Fund.

A fund known as the Contingencies Fund<sup>1</sup> exists for providing temporary advances for the provision of any necessary working cash balances for various government requirements<sup>2</sup>. The fund has a permanent capital<sup>3</sup>, which may be increased by the Treasury issuing out of the National Loans Fund such sums as may be required for the purpose of temporarily increasing the capital of the Contingencies Fund<sup>4</sup>. The Treasury may direct when such sums are to be repaid<sup>5</sup>, and the sums remaining unpaid together with the permanent capital must not exceed an amount equal to two per cent of the authorised supply expenditure<sup>6</sup> for the year ending on the previous 31 March<sup>7</sup>.

1 See the Contingencies Fund Act 1970 s 1(1). The fund was formerly known as the Civil Contingencies Fund: see s 1(1), (2).

2 See the Miscellaneous Financial Provisions Act 1946 s 3(1). These include the requirements of the navy, army and air services: Contingencies Fund Act 1970 s 1(1).

1330. Guarantees in respect of loans.

Guarantees of Her Majesty's United Kingdom government have been given in respect of various loans, including:

- 100 (1) loans made to the governments of colonial territories by the International Bank for Reconstruction and Development<sup>1</sup>;
- 101 (2) tithe redemption stock<sup>2</sup>;
- 102 (3) stock and temporary borrowings of certain nationalised industries<sup>3</sup>; and
- 103 (4) certain borrowings of a new town development corporation or the Commission for the New Towns<sup>4</sup>.

Where a loan which may be redeemed before maturity at the option of the borrower is guaranteed by the Treasury, the Treasury may also guarantee a conversion loan issued solely for the redemption of the first loan<sup>5</sup>.

(ii) Reduction of the National Debt

1332. The National Debt Commissioners.

The Commissioners for the Reduction of the National Debt of the United Kingdom<sup>1</sup> (generally known as the National Debt Commissioners<sup>2</sup>) are: the Speaker of the House of Commons<sup>3</sup>, the Chancellor of the Exchequer<sup>4</sup>, the Master of the Rolls<sup>5</sup>, the Lord Chief Justice<sup>6</sup>, the Accountant General of the Supreme Court<sup>7</sup>, and the Governor and Deputy Governors of the Bank of England<sup>8</sup>. Any three commissioners may act for all of them<sup>9</sup>. Their functions are in fact exercised by the Comptroller General of the National Debt Office<sup>10</sup>. The National Debt Office is subject to investigation by the Parliamentary Commissioner for Administration<sup>11</sup>.

1 The name was first used in the Consolidated Fund Act 1816 s 13 (amended by the Statute Law Revision Act 1873; and the Statute Law Revision Act 1888). As to the meaning of 'United Kingdom' see PARA 2 note 3.

1333. Sinking funds.

The National Debt Commissioners<sup>1</sup> operate a number of specific sinking funds<sup>2</sup> issued to them for the redemption of specific securities out of the Consolidated Fund<sup>3</sup>. These funds are used for the discharge of the capital of terminable annuities charged upon the Consolidated Fund<sup>4</sup>, in providing for the sinking funds in respect of certain bonds and loans<sup>5</sup>. The National Debt Commissioners also operate the Account of Donations and Bequests towards reducing the National Debt<sup>6</sup>, which is used to purchase stock for cancellation<sup>7</sup>.

(iii) The National Loans Fund and the Consolidated Fund

1334. The National Loans Fund and the Consolidated Fund.

The National Loans Fund exists as a general fund for all central government borrowing operations and certain domestic lending transactions<sup>1</sup>, including the issuing of such sums as are required by the Public Works Loan Commissioners<sup>2</sup>. The National Loans Fund is closely linked with the Consolidated Fund, and both funds are operated by the Treasury<sup>3</sup>. All public moneys payable to the Exchequer are paid into the Consolidated Fund<sup>4</sup>, which is balanced daily by means of a transfer to or from the National Loans Fund; and where liabilities of the National Loans Fund exceed its assets or where its costs exceed its income, the Consolidated Fund may be called on.

The Local Loans Fund, which was established by the National Debt and Local Loans Act 1887, was wound up on 31 March 1968; certain loans were written off, and the cash balance was paid into the National Loans Fund: see the National Loans Act 1968 s 3(8), (9), (10), Sch 3 (all repealed).

(4) GOVERNMENT SECURITIES

(i) Government Stock

1335. Regulations as to registration, transfer and certificates.

The Treasury<sup>1</sup> has provided by regulations for the registration and transfer<sup>2</sup> of, and the issue of documents of title to, certain government securities<sup>3</sup>. The power to make regulations, and the regulations themselves, do not apply to government stock represented by any outstanding stock certificate issued under the National Debt Act 1870<sup>4</sup> or any other bearer security<sup>5</sup>, or to premium savings bonds<sup>6</sup>. The Treasury may also make regulations for, inter alia, the transfer in law by instrument in writing or otherwise of certain government securities and as to the issue, except in such cases as appear to the Treasury to be appropriate, of documents of title<sup>7</sup>. Further, the Treasury may make provision by regulations for the operation of a computer-based system for the transfer of securities issued by the government to be established by the Bank of England<sup>8</sup>, and for the paperless transfer of title to securities, including government securities<sup>9</sup>.

The Treasury may also by regulations<sup>10</sup> provide:

- 110 (1) for the administration of such stock and bonds (including the registration of holders) by such one or more persons as the Treasury may appoint in accordance with the regulations and the closure of any register<sup>11</sup>;
- 111 (2) for the redemption of such stock and bonds<sup>12</sup>;

- 112 (3) for the exchange of any such stock and bonds (whenever issued) for strips of them<sup>13</sup>;
- 113 (4) for exchanges by which such strips (whether deriving from the same security or from different securities) are consolidated into a single security of a specified description<sup>14</sup>;
- 114 (5) as to the issue except in such cases as appear to the Treasury to be appropriate of documents of title relating to such stock and bonds and as to evidence of title to them<sup>15</sup>; and
- 115 (6) for any incidental, supplementary or transitional matters relating to such stock and bonds, and to transactions connected with them, for which it appears to the Treasury to be necessary or expedient to provide<sup>16</sup>.

Regulations made by virtue of head (3) or head (4) above<sup>17</sup> may: (a) provide, for the purpose of authorising the making of exchanges, for any stock or bonds to be treated as issued on such terms as may be specified in the regulations<sup>18</sup>; (b) contain such provision as the Treasury thinks fit about the circumstances in which and the conditions subject to which exchanges may be effected<sup>19</sup>; and (c) contain any such provision as could be contained in the Treasury rules as to exchange of securities<sup>20</sup>. However, the regulations made by virtue of head (3) or head (4) above may not make provision for the exchange of any stock or bonds, or of any strips, in any cases other than those where the exchange is at the request of the holder or in accordance with an order made by a court<sup>21</sup>.

Persons appointed for the administration of stock and bonds<sup>22</sup> are appointed on such terms (including terms as to the making of payments by the Treasury) as the Treasury considers appropriate, and the persons so appointed include the Bank of England<sup>23</sup>.

Regulations<sup>24</sup> may make different provision for different cases and contain such exceptions and exclusions as the Treasury thinks fit<sup>25</sup>. When the Treasury proposes to make any such regulations<sup>26</sup>, it must lay a draft before Parliament; and if either House of Parliament within the period of 40 days beginning with the day on which the draft of the regulations is laid before it resolves that the regulations are not to be made, no further proceedings may be taken, but without prejudice to the laying of new draft regulations before Parliament<sup>27</sup>.

The Treasury may also make regulations modifying enactments which apply in relation to government securities or to any description of such securities, or for any other purpose refer to such securities or to any description of them, in connection with the issue or transfer of strips or the consolidation of strips into other securities, and such regulations may, inter alia, impose a charge to tax<sup>28</sup>. Any statutory provision applying in relation to all or any strippable government securities also applies in relation to every strip of any government securities<sup>29</sup>. This, however, does not apply to any statutory provision relating to any tax under the care and management of the Commissioners for Her Majesty's Revenue and Customs<sup>30</sup>, or where the context otherwise requires<sup>31</sup>.

2 As to the purposes for which the Treasury may create and issue securities see PARA 1329. As to the transfer of stock see PARA 1339.

3 See the Finance Act 1942 s 47(1)(a), (2) (s 47(1)(a) amended by the Stock Transfer Act 1982 Sch 2 para 2); the Finance Act 1942 Sch 11 Pt I (amended by the Finance Act 1963 Sch 14 Pt VII; the National Loans Act 1968 Sch 6 Pt II; the Statute Law (Repeals) Act 1986; and the Finance Act 1989 Sch 17 Pt XIV); and the Government Stock Regulations 2004, SI 2004/1611. The regulations apply to stock. 'Stock' means any amount of stock or registered bonds of any of the descriptions specified in the Finance Act 1942 Sch 11 Pt I: Government Stock Regulations 2004, SI 2004/1611, reg 2(1). Those descriptions are: 2½% and 2¾% Annuities, 2½% Consolidated Stock, 3½% Conversion Loan, 3½% War Loan, 4% Consolidated Loan, Guaranteed 4½% Bonds, stock and registered bonds issued or deemed to be issued under the National Loans Act 1939: Finance Act 1942 Sch 11 Pt I. However, in the Government Stock Regulations 2004, SI 2004/1611, reg 7(1) (see PARA 1337), regs 12-15 (see PARAS 1339-1342), and reg 29 (see PARA 1345), 'stock' does not include any strip: reg 2(1). For these purposes, 'strip' means a security representing any amount, being one penny or any multiple thereof, payable under one or more strips within the meaning of the Finance Act 1942 s 47 (see note 13), of any stock, regardless whether that amount corresponds to the total amount payable under any security issued for the purpose of effecting any particular exchange of stock for strips: Government Stock Regulations 2004, SI 2004/1611, reg 2(1).

13 Finance Act 1942 s 47(1)(bc) (added by the Finance Act 1996 s 202(1)). For the Finance Act 1942 s 47(1), 'strip', in relation to any stock or bond, means a security issued under the National Loans Act 1968 which: (1) is issued for the purpose of representing the right to, or of securing: (a) a payment corresponding to a payment of interest or principal remaining to be made under the stock or bond; or (b) two or more payments each corresponding to a different payment remaining to be so made; (2) is issued in conjunction with the issue of one or more other securities which, together with that security, represent the right to, or secure, payments corresponding to every payment remaining to be made under the stock or bond; and (3) is not itself a security that represents the right to, or secures, payments corresponding to a part of every payment so remaining: s 47(1B) (s 47(1B)-(1F) added by the Finance Act 1996 s 202(2)). For these purposes, where the balance has been struck for a dividend on any stock or bond, any payment to be made in respect of that dividend is, at times falling after that balance has been struck, to be treated as not being a payment remaining to be made under the stock or bond: Finance Act 1942 s 47(1C) (as so added). As to the meaning of 'strip' see also the Income Tax (Trading and Other Income) Act 2005 s 444(1)-(4); and INCOME TAXATION.

1336. Appointment of registrar.

The Treasury<sup>1</sup> may from time to time appoint a person for the purposes of the administration of stock<sup>2</sup>, including the registration of holders<sup>3</sup>. A person so appointed is known from the date on which the appointment takes effect (the 'transfer day'), as the 'Registrar of Government Stock' (the 'registrar')<sup>4</sup>.

From the transfer day, the new registrar<sup>5</sup> must administer stock and maintain the register<sup>6</sup>. Save where the previous registrar<sup>7</sup> has been appointed as the new registrar, the previous registrar must, before the beginning of the transfer day, transfer to the person appointed to become the new registrar:

- 116 (1) the register; and
- 117 (2) the record of uncertificated general public sector securities<sup>8</sup>, as at the close of the last business day preceding that transfer day<sup>9</sup>.

Where, before the transfer day, a valid instrument in writing for the transfer of stock has been delivered to the previous registrar but the previous registrar has not given effect to the transfer, the instrument is deemed to have been delivered to the new registrar on the day of its delivery to the previous registrar<sup>10</sup>.

Where the previous registrar has not been appointed as the new registrar, the previous registrar must, as soon as is reasonably practicable on or following the transfer day, provide to the new registrar all relevant records<sup>11</sup> which:

- 118 (a) are in the possession of the previous registrar immediately before the transfer day<sup>12</sup>; and
- 119 (b) are reasonably required by the new registrar for the purposes of the administration of stock, including the registration of holders<sup>13</sup>.

Any relevant records which are received by the previous registrar on or after the transfer day must, as soon as is reasonably practicable, be forwarded to the new registrar<sup>14</sup>.

The previous registrar must provide to the person appointed to become the new registrar such relevant records at such time or times before the transfer day as that person may reasonably require, in order to ensure that he can properly commence the administration of stock (including the registration of holders) on the transfer day<sup>15</sup>.

1 As to the Treasury see PARA 3; and CONSTITUTIONAL LAW AND HUMAN RIGHTS vol 8(2) (Reissue) PARA 512 et seq.

2 As to the meaning of 'stock' see PARA 1335 note 3.

3 Government Stock Regulations 2004, SI 2004/1611, reg 3(1). Appointments made under this provision take effect from the date specified by the Treasury in, or for the purpose of, that appointment: reg 3(3).

4 Government Stock Regulations 2004, SI 2004/1611, regs 2(1), 3(2). The Bank of England was deemed appointed by the Treasury as the first registrar on 1 July 2004 (see regs 1, 3(4)), but Computershare Investment Services PLC took over as the registrar on 20 December 2004. As to the Bank of England see PARA 793 et seq.

5 'New registrar' means a person appointed as the registrar with effect from the transfer day: Government Stock Regulations 2004, SI 2004/1611, reg 2(1).

6 See the Government Stock Regulations 2004, SI 2004/1611, reg 4(1). For the purposes of Pt II, 'register' means the registers required by reg 7 (see PARA 1337) to be kept in respect of each description of stock: reg 2(1).

7 'Previous registrar' means: (1) in relation to the first transfer day, the Bank of England; and (2) in relation to any subsequent period, a person holding the appointment as the registrar immediately before the transfer day: Government Stock Regulations 2004, SI 2004/1611, reg 2(1). 'First transfer day' means the day on which the first appointment made by the Treasury under reg 3 took effect (see the text and note 4): reg 2(1).

8 Ie within the meaning of the Uncertificated Securities Regulations 2001, SI 2001/3755, reg 21(2) (see COMPANIES vol 14 (2009) PARA 425): see the Government Stock Regulations 2004, SI 2004/1611, reg 4(2)(b).

9 Government Stock Regulations 2004, SI 2004/1611, reg 4(2). 'Business day' means any day other than: (1) a Saturday or Sunday; (2) Good Friday or Christmas Day; (3) a day which, in England and Wales, is a bank holiday under the Banking and Financial Dealings Act 1971 (see PARA 832); (4) a day specified in an order under the Banking and Financial Dealings Act 1971 s 2(1) (see PARA 832) and declared by that order to be a non-business day; or (5) a day appointed by Royal proclamation as a public fast or thanksgiving day: Government Stock Regulations 2004, SI 2004/1611, reg 2(1).

10 Government Stock Regulations 2004, SI 2004/1611, reg 5.

11 In the Government Stock Regulations 2004, SI 2004/1611, reg 6, 'relevant records' includes any records, data, documents, information or communications (including any electronic communication) or copies of the same in the possession of the previous registrar, which relate to the transfer or registration of stock or to any associated transaction or to the record of uncertificated public sector securities referred to in reg 4(2)(b) (see note 8): reg 6(5).

1337. Stock registers.

The registrar<sup>1</sup> must keep in respect of each description of stock<sup>2</sup> registers wherein is entered the name and address of each person who is for the time being a holder of stock of that description and the amount of that stock which he holds, but, if more than four persons are joint holders of any stock, the names and addresses of only four such persons are required to be entered in the register<sup>3</sup>.

The registrar must keep in respect of each description of strips<sup>4</sup> registers wherein is entered the name and address of each person who is for the time being a holder of a strip of that description and the amount payable under that strip<sup>5</sup>.

Where the terms subject to which the relevant strips are held provide for the members of any class of strips described therein (or in accordance therewith) to be indistinguishable one from another, or to become so indistinguishable on the happening of some contingency, each such class, the members of which are for the time being required to be so indistinguishable in accordance with those terms, is treated as a separate description of strips<sup>6</sup> and, accordingly<sup>7</sup>:

- 120 (1) separate registers must not be kept in respect of different categories of strips comprised within any description, whether by reference to the description of the parent stock or any other circumstance<sup>8</sup>; and
- 121 (2) where, in accordance with those terms, strips of any description are required to become indistinguishable from strips of any other description, the registers of those descriptions are to be amalgamated and a single register kept thenceforth in respect of the new description<sup>9</sup>.

Any register so kept<sup>10</sup> is prima facie evidence of any matters directed or authorised<sup>11</sup> to be entered therein and of the title of the persons whose names are entered therein as holders of stock<sup>12</sup>.

In the event of the redemption of any stock<sup>13</sup> the register relating to that stock may be closed for transfers for not more than one month immediately preceding the redemption date<sup>14</sup>.

Every register required to be kept under these provisions<sup>15</sup> must be made of paper or of any material in or on which the information required can be recorded and from which such information can be reproduced on paper, or partly of paper and partly of any such other material; any information required to be entered in a register under these provisions must be so entered or recorded<sup>16</sup>.

2 As to the meaning of 'stock' see PARA 1335 note 3.

3 Government Stock Regulations 2004, SI 2004/1611, reg 7(1). The account may be designated in such manner as the stockholder may specify (see reg 23(1)), but the bank may decline to register an unreasonably long or elaborate designation (see reg 23(3)(a)). The stockholder may be described in the register as trustee of a specified trust, or as trustee without specifying a trust, or in any other manner indicating the capacity in which he holds the stock: reg 23(1). Where he occupies an office or official position, his official description may be registered in lieu of his name: see reg 23(2). The bank need not register both the official description and the name: see reg 23(3)(b). Apart from this, no notice of any trust may be entered in any register, or in any certificate, or be receivable by the registrar: see reg 24. Notwithstanding that the stockholder is described as mentioned in reg 23, the registrar is not required to inquire into the propriety of anything done in relation to the stock: see reg 24.

1338. Stock certificates.

Every person whose name is entered in a register as a holder of stock<sup>1</sup> is entitled, without payment, to a certificate representing that stock<sup>2</sup>. This certificate is prima facie evidence of the title of the person named in it to the stock specified in it<sup>3</sup>. Where there is more than one joint holder only one certificate is issued<sup>4</sup>. On a transfer of part of a holding, the holder is entitled to a certificate representing the part retained<sup>5</sup>. If a certificate is lost or destroyed, the registrar may, on receipt of such evidence and indemnity as the registrar may require, and on the surrender of the certificate in a case in which the certificate is defaced, issue a duplicate of it, and may charge a fee<sup>6</sup>.

Stock or registered bonds issued under the National Loans Act 1968 are subject to the provisions of the National Debt Act 1870<sup>7</sup>.

The Treasury is empowered to make regulations in respect of all or any description of government securities for which bearer bonds are available<sup>a</sup>.

1339. Transfer of stock.

Government stock<sup>1</sup> is generally transferable by instrument in writing in accordance with the Stock Transfer Act 1963<sup>2</sup> delivered to the registrar<sup>3</sup>. However, units of stock which are recorded on a register kept by the operator of a relevant system under the Uncertificated Securities Regulations 2001<sup>4</sup> are transferable only by means of that system<sup>5</sup>. A strip<sup>6</sup> is transferable only by means of a relevant system operated by an operator in accordance with those regulations<sup>7</sup>.

The registrar gives effect to a transfer by entering the requisite particulars in the appropriate register<sup>8</sup>. The registrar need not give effect to a transfer until the expiration of ten clear days after the day on which the registrar receives the written instrument of transfer<sup>9</sup>. The transferor remains the holder until the transfer is effected<sup>10</sup>. The registrar may decline to give effect to a transfer unless evidence of the transferor's right to make the transfer is produced<sup>11</sup>. The registrar may also decline to give effect to a transfer of any stock by instrument in writing unless: (1) the transfer is accompanied by the certificate showing that the transferor is the holder of the stock<sup>12</sup>; or (2) evidence of the certificate's loss or destruction is furnished to the registrar together with an indemnity<sup>13</sup>; or (3) the transfer is accompanied by a certificate showing that the transferor is the holder of part of the stock being transferred, and as to the residue there is furnished to the registrar such evidence as the registrar may require that a certificate showing that the transferor is the holder of such residue has been lost or destroyed and there is given to the registrar such indemnity in respect of such lost or destroyed certificate as he may require<sup>14</sup>. These rights and duties are modified in the case of stock transferred by means of a relevant system<sup>15</sup>.

Stock registered in the name of a deceased person is transferable by his personal representative<sup>16</sup>, but if there is more than one personal representative the registrar may require all of them to execute the transfer<sup>17</sup>. Where any stock is entered in a register in the name of a deceased person the production to the registrar of any document which is by the law of the place where the register is kept sufficient evidence of probate of the will, or of letters of administration of the estate, or confirmation as executor to the estate, of that person having been granted to some person, is to be accepted by the registrar as sufficient evidence of the grant<sup>18</sup>. Where the total value of all holdings of stock entered in the register in the name of a deceased person at the time of his death does not exceed £5,000, and probate of his will, or letters of administration of his estate, or confirmation as executor to the estate is not or are not produced to the registrar within such time as the registrar thinks reasonable in the circumstances of the case, the registrar may transfer the stock or any part of it: (a) to a person appearing to the registrar to be entitled to take out such probate, letters of administration or confirmation; or (b) to any other person appearing to the registrar to be a fit and proper person to receive it<sup>19</sup>.

Special provisions apply to the transfer of registered bonds transferable in fixed denominations<sup>20</sup>.

The certification by the registrar of a transfer of any stock or of a stock transfer or broker's transfer under the Stock Transfer Act 1963 relating to any stock is to be taken as a representation by the registrar to any person acting on the faith of the certification that documents showing a prima facie title to the stock in the transferor have been produced to the registrar, but not as a representation that the transferor has any title to the stock<sup>21</sup>.

The transfer of stock may in appropriate circumstances be restrained by a charging order or by a stop order or stop notice<sup>22</sup>.

1 As to the stock to which these provisions apply see PARA 1335 note 3.

2 The simplified form of transfer under the Stock Transfer Act 1963 applies to all securities issued by the United Kingdom government except stock or bonds in the National Savings Stock Register and except national savings certificates: see s 1(4)(c) (amended by the Finance Act 1964 Sch 8 para 10, Sch 9; and the Post Office Act 1969 s 108(1)(f)). As to the meaning of 'United Kingdom' see PARA 2 note 3.

3 Government Stock Regulations 2004, SI 2004/1611, reg 15(1). The registrar must retain any such instrument that is delivered to him: reg 15(1). Any instrument retained may be destroyed at any time after the expiry of 12 years after the date when particulars of the stock transfer were entered in the register: reg 15(2). As to the registrar see PARA 1336.

MONEY/(4) GOVERNMENT SECURITIES/(i) Government Stock/1340. Purchase of stock on application to registrar.

1340. Purchase of stock on application to registrar.

Stock<sup>1</sup> in the register<sup>2</sup> may be purchased on application to the registrar<sup>3</sup>. The Treasury<sup>4</sup> may from time to time indicate the descriptions of stock available for purchase by: (1) notice in writing sent to each person who is for the time being registered as a holder of stock, which: (a) is sent to his address for the time being recorded on a relevant register<sup>5</sup>; and (b) where stock is registered in the names of more than one person being joint holders, is sent to all such persons; or (2) notice published in the London, Edinburgh and Belfast Gazettes<sup>6</sup>. Application to purchase stock must be made by delivering to the registrar an application in the approved form accompanied, except where the registrar otherwise directs, by a sum sufficient to include the purchase price of the stock and the proper amount payable<sup>7</sup> by way of commission on the purchase<sup>8</sup>. As soon as practicable after receiving such an application, the registrar must give instructions to the Treasury, which must<sup>9</sup> effect the purchase of the stock<sup>10</sup>.

If the sum received by the registrar in respect of an application to purchase stock is insufficient to defray the aggregate of the purchase price of the stock and the commission payable, the Treasury is not required to effect the purchase of the stock; however, if the Treasury does so, the registrar must send to the applicant a notification of the amount of the deficiency, and, if that amount is not received within seven days after the day on which the notification was sent, the Treasury may effect the sale of the stock and may, before paying the proceeds of that sale to the applicant, deduct from those proceeds the amount of the deficiency, and the amount payable by way of commission on the sale<sup>11</sup>. If the sum received by the registrar in respect of an application to purchase stock exceeds the sum required to defray the amount of the purchase price of the stock and the commission payable in respect of the purchase, the registrar must return to the applicant the amount of the excess<sup>12</sup>.

MONEY/(4) GOVERNMENT SECURITIES/(i) Government Stock/1341. Sale of stock on application to registrar.

1341. Sale of stock on application to registrar.

Stock<sup>1</sup> in the register<sup>2</sup> may be sold on application to the registrar<sup>3</sup>. The Treasury<sup>4</sup> may from time to time indicate the descriptions of stock available for sale by: (1) notice in writing sent to each person who is for the time being registered as a holder of stock, which: (a) is sent to his address for the time being recorded on a relevant register<sup>5</sup>; and (b) where stock is registered in the names of more than one person being joint holders, is sent to all such persons; or (2) notice published in the London, Edinburgh and Belfast Gazettes<sup>6</sup>. Application to sell stock must be made by sending to the registrar an application in the approved form accompanied, except where the registrar otherwise directs, by any certificate relating to the stock<sup>7</sup>. As soon as practicable after receiving such an application, the registrar must give instructions to the Treasury and as soon as practicable thereafter the Treasury must effect the sale of the stock<sup>8</sup>, but the registrar may decline to give such instructions to the Treasury unless there is furnished to the registrar such evidence as he may require of the right of the applicant to authorise the sale<sup>9</sup>.

On completion of the sale of any stock, the registrar must, before paying the proceeds of the sale to the person entitled to it, deduct the amount payable<sup>10</sup> by way of commission on the sale<sup>11</sup>.

1343. Payments.

When the Treasury imprest for the payment out of the National Loans Fund has been issued<sup>1</sup>, the registrar must without delay apply the money in payment of dividends on the stock<sup>2</sup>. Where a dividend warrant is sent by post to a stockholder in accordance with regulations<sup>3</sup>, the posting of the warrant is, as respects the liability of the registrar, the Bank of England or any previous registrar, equivalent to delivery of the warrant to the stockholder<sup>4</sup>.

The registrar, the Bank of England and any previous registrar is not liable in respect of any payment duly made or act duly done in accordance with the Government Stock Regulations 1965<sup>5</sup> or the Government Stock Regulations 2004<sup>6</sup>; and any such payment, subject to the provisions for saving the rights of third parties<sup>7</sup>, is deemed to have been a valid payment, and the receipt of the person to whom the money was paid is a full discharge to the registrar, the Bank of England or, as the case may be, any previous registrar, for the amount of the payment<sup>8</sup>. Where a warrant for payment of any amount payable in respect of any stock is sent by post in accordance with the provision relating to the redemption of stock by the registrar<sup>9</sup>, the posting of the letter containing the warrant is, as respects the liability of the registrar, the Bank of England or, as the case may be, any previous registrar, equivalent to the delivery of the warrant to the person entitled to receive it<sup>10</sup>.

An order or decree of any court in the United Kingdom is sufficient authority to the registrar to pay dividends in accordance with that order or decree<sup>11</sup>.

1 Sufficient money to pay dividends is issuable out of the National Loans Fund and payable on the order of the Treasury: see the National Debt Act 1870 s 12 (amended by the National Loans Act 1968 Sch 5), and the National Debt Act 1870 s 14(1) (s 14 substituted by SI 2004/2744). As to the Treasury see PARA 3; and CONSTITUTIONAL LAW AND HUMAN RIGHTS vol 8(2) (Reissue) PARA 512 et seq. As to the National Loans Fund see PARA 1334; and CONSTITUTIONAL LAW AND HUMAN RIGHTS vol 8(2) (Reissue) PARA 727 et seq.

2 National Debt Act 1870 s 15 (substituted by SI 2004/2744). Any person who, at the time of the balance being struck for a dividend on stock, is entered in a relevant register as a stockholder is, as between himself and any transferee of the stock, entitled to the then current half-year's or quarter's dividend: see the National Debt (Stockholders Relief) Act 1892 s 2 (substituted in relation to dividends for which the balance is struck on or after 21 March 1997 by the Finance Act 1997 s 108; and amended by SI 2001/3755; and by SI 2004/1662). Where any stock is exchanged for strips of that stock and that exchange takes place after the balance has been struck for a dividend on that stock but before the day on which that dividend is payable, any person who would have been entitled to that dividend but for the exchange remains entitled to that dividend notwithstanding the exchange: see the National Debt (Stockholders Relief) Act 1892 s 2A (added by the Finance Act 1996 s 202(3)). As to the registrar see PARA 1336.

3 The Treasury may from time to time make regulations for the payment of dividends on stock either by sending warrants by post or by payment through a banker: National Debt Act 1889 s 4(1) (substituted by SI 2004/1662). These provisions apply to all stock of any company or corporation, funds or annuities, transferable in the registers kept by the registrar in accordance with regulations under the Finance Act 1942 s 47 (see the Government Stock Regulations 2004, SI 2004/1611, reg 7; and PARA 1337), or in the manner provided by those regulations: National Debt Act 1889 s 4(6) (amended by SI 2004/1662).

4 National Debt Act 1889 s 4(2) (amended by SI 2004/1662). As to the Bank of England see PARA 793 et seq.

6 Ie the Government Stock Regulations 2004, SI 2004/1611.

7 Nothing in the regulations for the protection of the registrar, the Bank of England, or any previous registrar in respect of any act done or any money paid operates to prevent the recovery by any person or his representative of any stock or money lawfully due to him from the person to whom that stock was transferred or that money was paid by or under the direction of the registrar, the Bank of England, or any previous registrar, or from the representatives of that person, or affect the rights which any person or his representatives may have in respect of any stock against a third party: see the Government Stock Regulations 1965, SI 1965/1420, reg 22B (revoked); and the Government Stock Regulations 2004, SI 2004/1611, reg 33.

8 See the Government Stock Regulations 2004, SI 2004/1611, reg 32.

9 See the Government Stock Regulations 1965, SI 1965/1420, reg 3B (revoked); and the Government Stock Regulations 2004, SI 2004/1611, reg 11. See PARA 1351.

1344. Government stock held by minors.

Where the holder or a joint holder of government stock<sup>1</sup> is a minor, the registrar may, if he thinks fit, pay the dividends on it in accordance with the written instructions of a parent or guardian of the minor<sup>2</sup>. If satisfied that the minor has attained the age of seven<sup>3</sup>, the registrar may pay any redemption money payable in respect of the stock in accordance with the written instructions of the minor and of a parent or guardian of his<sup>4</sup>, and may give effect to a transfer of the stock in accordance with such instructions<sup>5</sup>. Any such payment discharges the bank's liability<sup>6</sup>, and any such transfer is not revocable at the minor's instance except where it would be revocable apart from the minority<sup>7</sup>.

Where a minor is the sole survivor in an account, or where a minor holds stock jointly with a person under disability, or where stock has by mistake been brought in or transferred into the sole name of a minor, the registrar, at the request in writing of the minor's parent, guardian or litigation friend, may receive the dividends and apply them to the purchase of like stock which must be added to the original investment<sup>8</sup>.

1 'Government stock' means any registered securities issued by the United Kingdom government: see the Finance (No 2) Act 1975 s 73(4). As to the meaning of 'United Kingdom' see PARA 2 note 3.

2 Finance (No 2) Act 1975 s 73(1)(a) (s 73(1)-(3) amended by SI 2004/1662). As to the registrar see PARA 1336. 'Minor' means a person under the age of 18: see the Family Law Reform Act 1969 s 1; and CHILDREN AND YOUNG PERSONS vol 5(3) (2008 Reissue) PARA 1.

3 Finance (No 2) Act 1975 s 73(2) (as amended: see note 2).

1345. Exchange of securities.

For the purpose of carrying out any arrangement made by it for the exchange of any government securities, whether on or before maturity, and whether with or without any further payment, the Treasury<sup>1</sup> may create and issue such other securities<sup>2</sup> as it thinks fit<sup>3</sup>. The Treasury has made rules with respect to the surrender, issue or exchange of securities in pursuance of such arrangements<sup>4</sup>. These rules prescribe the procedure for the acceptance of offers of exchange<sup>5</sup>, the person by whom acceptance may be made in special cases<sup>6</sup> and the persons to whom acceptances must be made<sup>7</sup>, and prescribe for the application to the new securities of trusts, charges, rights, stop notices and restraints affecting the old securities<sup>8</sup>. Protection is also given to the registrar, the Bank of England and any previous registrar in relation to acting on evidence authorised by the rules<sup>9</sup>.

1 As to the Treasury see PARA 3; and CONSTITUTIONAL LAW AND HUMAN RIGHTS vol 8(2) (Reissue) PARA 512 et seq.

2 See securities under the National Loans Act 1968 s 12: see PARA 1329.

3 National Loans Act 1968 s 14(2).

4 See the Exchange of Securities (General) Rules 1979, SI 1979/1678, made under the National Loans Act 1968 s 14(3). Note that the Exchange of Securities (General) Rules 1979, SI 1979/1678, do not apply to the exchange of any stock for strips, or to the exchange of any strips for stock: Government Stock Regulations 2004, SI 2004/1611, reg 29. As to the meanings of 'stock' and 'strip' see PARA 1335 note 3. Rules may require holders of securities which are to be redeemed desiring cash repayment to apply accordingly (National Loans Act 1968 s 14(4)(a)), and may secure that if no application is duly made the holder is to be deemed to have accepted the offer of securities in exchange for the securities which are to be redeemed (s 14(4)(b)).

5 See the Exchange of Securities (General) Rules 1979, SI 1979/1678, r 6 (amended by SI 1985/1147; SI 1998/2505; SI 1999/1207; SI 2001/3755; SI 2004/1662).

6 See the Exchange of Securities (General) Rules 1979, SI 1979/1678, r 7 (amended by SI 2004/1662). Acceptance on behalf of joint holders may be made by a majority of them: Exchange of Securities (General) Rules 1979, SI 1979/1678, r 8. Acceptance where a stop order is in force may be made by any person who would be entitled to accept if the notice were not in force: r 9. As to stop orders see CIVIL PROCEDURE vol 12 (2009) PARA 1486 et seq.

7 Acceptances in respect of securities registered with the registrar and bearer bonds are to be lodged with the registrar; acceptances in respect of all securities registered in the National Savings Stock Register are to be lodged with the Director of Savings: see the Exchange of Securities (General) Rules 1979, SI 1979/1678, r 5(1) (amended by SI 1998/2505; SI 2004/1662). Acceptance forms may be lodged with the Treasury for onward transmission to the person to whom the acceptance is required to be lodged; and where acceptances are required to be lodged by any particular time, it is sufficient if the acceptance is lodged with the Treasury by that time: Exchange of Securities (General) Rules 1979, SI 1979/1678, r 5(2) (added by SI 1998/2505). The person to whom the acceptance is to be made may accept, as evidence of any fact on which the validity of an acceptance depends, a statutory declaration of that fact made by one or more competent persons, but this imposes no obligation to require proof by statutory declaration of any fact of which he has other satisfactory evidence: Exchange of Securities (General) Rules 1979, SI 1979/1678, r 10. As to the Director of Savings see PARA 810 et seq.

MONEY/(4) GOVERNMENT SECURITIES/(i) Government Stock/1346. Unclaimed dividends and redemption money.

1346. Unclaimed dividends and redemption money.

The registrar<sup>1</sup> must from time to time pay to the National Debt Commissioners<sup>2</sup> the balance of all money due on government stock<sup>3</sup> which has been entrusted to him for payment but which is unclaimed<sup>4</sup>. Where the registrar, having paid unclaimed money to the commissioners, subsequently pays it to the person entitled, the commissioners must repay it to the registrar<sup>5</sup>.

Unclaimed redemption money paid to the commissioners must be invested by them in such government stock as the Treasury directs and the investments must be placed to the credit of their account of unclaimed redemption money<sup>6</sup>. The commissioners also keep an account of unclaimed dividends to which there must be paid all unclaimed sums paid to the commissioners by the registrar, other than unclaimed redemption money<sup>7</sup>, and all dividends on the investments of the commissioners' account of unclaimed redemption money<sup>8</sup>. Any deficiency on the account of unclaimed dividends is to be issued out of the National Loans Fund, and any surplus<sup>9</sup> is to be paid into the National Loans Fund<sup>10</sup>.

Certain provisions of the National Debt Act 1870 and other enactments continue to have effect in relation to the retransfer of stock transferred as being unclaimed to the commissioners<sup>11</sup> before 27 July 1955<sup>12</sup>, and unclaimed dividends and sums unclaimed on coupons paid to the commissioners before that date<sup>13</sup>.

1 As to the registrar see PARA 1336.

2 As to the National Debt Commissioners see PARA 1332.

3 'Government stock' includes 2½% Consolidated Stock ('Consols'); 2½% and 2¾% Annuities; Guaranteed 2¾% and 3% Stock; 3½% War Loan; Guaranteed 4½% Bonds; any securities issued under the War Loan Act 1919 (repealed); the National Loans Act 1939; Finance Act 1935 s 28 (repealed) or s 29 (repealed); the Bank of England Act 1946 s 1; the Coal Industry Nationalisation Act 1946 s 21 (repealed) or s 32 (repealed); or the Cable and Wireless Act 1946; any such stock as is mentioned in the Iron and Steel Act 1967 s 26(1) (repealed); and any securities issued under the National Loans Act 1968 other than national savings certificates, premium savings bonds, national savings stamps, national savings gift tokens and such securities as the Treasury may specify by order: National Debt Act 1972 s 15(1) (amended by the Finance Act 1989 Sch 17 Pt XIV); definition applied by the National Debt Act 1972 s 15(2). As to the Treasury see PARA 3; and CONSTITUTIONAL LAW AND HUMAN RIGHTS vol 8(2) (Reissue) PARA 512 et seq.

4 See the Miscellaneous Financial Provisions Act 1955 s 5(2) (s 5(1)-(5), (8) amended by SI 2004/1662). For this purpose money must be treated as unclaimed if it has not been claimed for five years or, in the case of redemption money, two years after it fell due and may be so treated earlier: see the Miscellaneous Financial Provisions Act 1955 s 5(3) (as so amended). The Treasury may empower the registrar to investigate the title to unclaimed sums, and may allow just compensation for the registrar's trouble and expense: see s 5(8) (as so amended).

5 See the Miscellaneous Financial Provisions Act 1955 s 5(4) (as amended: see note 4). Repayments in respect of dividends come out of the commissioners' account of unclaimed dividends (s 5(5) (as so amended)), and repayments in respect of redemption money out of their account of unclaimed redemption money or, if that is insufficient, out of the unclaimed dividend account (s 5(7)).

6 Miscellaneous Financial Provisions Act 1955 s 5(6). Investments made under the Finance Act 1921 Sch 3 para 6 (repealed) also stand to the credit of this account: Miscellaneous Financial Provisions Act 1955 s 5(6).

7 Miscellaneous Financial Provisions Act 1955 s 5(5) (as amended: see note 4).

9 Ie any surplus above £100,000, or such other figure as the Treasury may determine: Miscellaneous Financial Provisions Act 1955 s 5(9).

10 Miscellaneous Financial Provisions Act 1955 s 5(9) (amended by the National Loans Act 1968 Sch 5). As to the National Loans Fund see PARA 1334; and CONSTITUTIONAL LAW AND HUMAN RIGHTS vol 8(2) (Reissue) PARA 727 et seq.

11 Ie transferred under the National Debt Act 1870 s 51 (repealed), and former Acts: see s 67. Dividends on stock so transferred are payable to the commissioners and must be held by them for the public subject to the claims of parties entitled to them: s 54 (amended by the Finance Act 1949 Sch 11 Pt VII). The registrar may re-transfer any stock transferred under the National Debt Act 1870 Pt VII (ss 54-67) to any person showing his right to it to the registrar's satisfaction, and pay the dividends due on it, as if the stock or dividends had not been transferred or paid to the National Debt Commissioners: see s 55 (amended by SI 2004/1662). If the claim is not admitted by the registrar, the claimant may apply for an order by petition served on the Attorney General and on the National Debt Commissioners, and the court may make such order, including costs, as seems to be just: National Debt Act 1870 s 55 (as so amended). As to advertisements of claims exceeding £20, and the withholding of payment for three months after advertisement, on the direction of the registrar see the Finance Act 1937 s 28(1) (amended by SI 2004/1662).

1347. The National Savings Stock Register.

The Director of Savings<sup>1</sup> must cause such entries to be made in the National Savings Stock Register<sup>2</sup> as are necessary to show the name and address of every holder of stock and the denomination of stock held by him<sup>3</sup>.

Certain government stock<sup>4</sup> may be registered in the National Savings Stock Register<sup>5</sup>. The register is governed by regulations made by the Treasury<sup>6</sup>. Since 1 July 2004 the registrar has been required to keep a register of persons holding strips of government stock<sup>7</sup>.

Since 20 July 1998 the National Savings Stock Register has been closed to gilts<sup>8</sup>. All gilts registered in the register at the beginning of that day were transferred to the books of the Bank of England<sup>9</sup>. Similarly, all the rights and duties of the Director of Savings arising before 20 July 1998 in relation to the registration of gilts or any associated transaction with them were transferred to the Bank of England<sup>10</sup>.

1 As to the Director of Savings see PARA 810 et seq.

2 The register was originally established as the Post Office Register by the War Loan (Supplemental Provisions) Act 1915 s 1 (repealed). Such stock registers as by virtue of the Savings Banks Act 1880 (repealed) had been established by savings bank authorities were amalgamated with the Post Office Register by the Savings Banks Act 1929 s 12(2) (repealed), and its name was changed to the National Savings Stock Register by the Post Office Act 1969 s 108(1). It is continued in existence by the National Debt Act 1972 s 2(1). As to the Post Office see POST OFFICE.

3 National Savings Stock Register Regulations 1976, SI 1976/2012, reg 4(1). On 20 July 1986 the parts of the register kept by the trustee savings banks had to be closed and all the stock registered in those parts had to be transferred to that part of the register kept by the Director of Savings: Trustee Savings Banks Act 1985 s 3(9), Sch 1 para 13; Trustee Savings Bank Act 1985 (Appointed Day) Order 1986, SI 1986/1219.

4 I.e. any description of government stock which is not for the time being included in the Finance Act 1942 s 47(1)(a), Sch 11 Pt I (see PARA 1335): National Debt Act 1972 s 2(3) (substituted by SI 1998/1446). As to the meaning of 'government stock' see PARA 1346 note 3.

5 See the National Debt Act 1972 s 2(3) (as substituted: see note 4). In practice, the range of stock and securities on the register is limited, largely to those issued through the Post Office, being stock or securities not inscribed or registered in the holders' names in the books of the Bank of England. As to the Bank of England see PARA 793 et seq.

6 See the National Savings Stock Register Regulations 1976, SI 1976/2012 (as originally enacted); and PARA 1348. As to the Treasury see PARA 3; and CONSTITUTIONAL LAW AND HUMAN RIGHTS vol 8(2) (Reissue) PARA 512 et seq.

7 See the Government Stock Regulations 2004, SI 2004/1611; and PARA 1335 et seq. The definition of 'stock' in the Government Stock Regulations 2004, SI 2004/1611, includes for most purposes strips of gilts: see note 8; and PARA 1335 note 3. As to the registrar see PARA 1336.

8 See the Bank of England Act 1998 s 33; and the National Savings Stock Register (Closure of Register to Gilts) Order 1998, SI 1998/1446, arts 2(1), 3. 'Gilts' means stock or bonds of any of the descriptions included in the Finance Act 1942 Sch 11 Pt I (see PARA 1335 note 3): National Savings Stock Register (Closure of Register to Gilts) Order 1998, SI 1998/1446, art 2(1).

9 See the National Savings Stock Register (Closure of Register to Gilts) Order 1998, SI 1998/1446, art 4. The National Savings Stock Register (Closure of Register to Gilts) Order 1998, SI 1998/1446, also makes consequential, incidental and supplementary provisions in connection with the closure of the register to gilts and includes provision amending primary and secondary legislation. In particular the order makes provision for: applications and proceedings relating to gilts (see arts 6-15); existing rules and arrangements to be preserved in certain cases (see arts 16-21 (arts 16, 18-20 amended by SI 2004/1662)); unclaimed gilts and moneys (see the National Savings Stock Register (Closure of Register to Gilts) Order 1998, SI 1998/1446, arts 22-24); existing certificates to be imputed to the registrar (see art 25 (substituted by SI 2004/1662)); previously issued warrants (see the National Savings Stock Register (Closure of Register to Gilts) Order 1998, SI 1998/1446, art 26); payment without grant of representation where the holder dies before 20 July 1998 (see art 27); the Director of Savings to provide relevant records to the Bank of England (see art 28); indemnity (see art 29 (amended by SI 2004/1662)); and various consequential amendments, repeals and revocations (see the National Savings Stock Register (Closure of Register to Gilts) Order 1998, SI 1998/1446, art 30, Schs 1, 2).

1350. Nomination and payment out on death.

A holder of stock<sup>1</sup> registered on the National Savings Stock Register, if he was a holder who had attained the age of 16, had power to make a nomination before 1 May 1981 directing that, on his death, his interest in any stock then held by him and registered in his name should devolve on the persons specified, and in the portions or fractions specified, in the nomination<sup>2</sup>. Where, on the death of the holder of any stock so registered, any payment is made in accordance with the law of the place where the holder resided at the date of his death, the payment is to be deemed to have been duly made unless, before the payment was made, the Director of Savings had been notified in writing that the holder was at that time domiciled elsewhere<sup>3</sup>. Subject to certain exceptions, the production of a statement from the Commissioners for Her Majesty's Revenue and Customs as to the payment of tax chargeable on death is required before any payment or transfer may be made on the death of a holder the aggregate value of whose specified assets exceeds £50,000<sup>4</sup>.

In the case of stock so registered the Director of Savings may require evidence to be given to his satisfaction of the identity of any person or the title of any person to any stock, document or money<sup>5</sup>. A statement or information that a person has not been heard of for seven years or more may be accepted as conclusive proof of death<sup>6</sup>.

Where the value of the holding at the time of the holder's death does not exceed £5,000 or, as the case may be, the amount due to the depositor at the time of his death does not exceed £5,000 exclusive of interest, payment may be made to the appropriate person entitled without requiring probate or letters of administration<sup>7</sup>.

1 For these purposes, 'stock' means stock or securities registered in the National Savings Stock Register: National Savings Stock Register Regulations 1976, SI 1976/2012, reg 2(1). As to the National Savings Stock Register see PARA 1347.

2 National Savings Stock Register Regulations 1976, SI 1976/2012, reg 32(1) (amended by SI 1981/485). A nomination made after 30 April 1981 is of no effect: National Savings Stock Register Regulations 1976, SI 1976/2012, reg 32(1) (as so amended). A nomination may provide: (1) that the interest of the nominator in the whole of the stock registered in his name at the date of his death is to devolve on any one or more persons specified in the nomination; or (2) that the interest of the nominator in any specified portion or fraction of the stock is to devolve on any nominee or nominees so specified; or (3) where there is more than one nominee, that the interest of the nominator in different specified portions or fractions of the stock is to devolve on different nominees: reg 32(2). The nomination must be in a form approved by the Director of Savings, must be signed by the nominator and witnessed, and must be dispatched to the Director of Savings during the nominator's lifetime: reg 33. It is revoked, inter alia, by the nominee's death in the nominator's lifetime, by the nominator's marriage or formation of a civil partnership, by written notice of revocation or by a subsequent inconsistent nomination: see reg 36 (amended by SI 1981/485; SI 1998/1446; SI 2005/2114). As to the record of nominations see the National Savings Stock Register Regulations 1976, SI 1976/2012, reg 34 (amended by SI 1981/485). As to the effect on nomination of transfer of stock to another part of the register see the National Savings Stock Register Regulations 1976, SI 1976/2012, reg 35. As to the particulars to be furnished by the nominator to the Director of Savings see reg 37. As to the operation of nomination see reg 38. As to nominations made before 1 October 1921 see reg 39 (amended by SI 1998/1446). As to the Director of Savings see PARA 810 et seq.

No nomination may be effected after 30 April 1979 in respect of stock in that part of the register kept by the trustees of trustee savings banks: see the Trustee Savings Banks Regulations 1972, SI 1972/583, reg 11 (amended by SI 1975/1802; SI 1979/259). That part of the register kept by the trustees savings banks was closed on 20 July 1986: see PARA 1347 note 2.

1351. Redemption of stock by registrar.

When the registrar is carrying out the redemption of any stock the following procedure is to be followed<sup>1</sup>. Not less than eight weeks before the redemption date of stock of a particular description the registrar must<sup>2</sup> send to each person who is for the time being registered as a holder of stock of that description at his registered address<sup>3</sup> a notice in writing containing the following particulars<sup>4</sup>: (1) the redemption date of the stock<sup>5</sup>; and (2) notice<sup>6</sup> that, unless a request<sup>7</sup> to the contrary in writing signed by the holder is received by the registrar on or before a date<sup>8</sup> specified in the notice, a warrant<sup>9</sup> in respect of the redemption moneys drawn in favour of the holder will be sent to him by post at his registered address<sup>10</sup>.

The registrar has a right in any case to require the consent in writing of the holder or holders of any stock before making any payment in respect of the redemption of the stock<sup>11</sup>.

1352. National savings certificates.

The Treasury's power to borrow<sup>1</sup> extends to raising money under the auspices of the Director of Savings, including the issue under his auspices of national savings certificates<sup>2</sup>, bearing such rate of interest<sup>3</sup> and subject to such conditions as to repayment or otherwise as the Treasury thinks fit<sup>4</sup>. The principal of, interest<sup>5</sup> on, and issuing expenses of the certificates are chargeable on the National Loans Fund with recourse to the Consolidated Fund<sup>6</sup>. The Treasury may direct that the expiration date of any savings certificates be prolonged to such extent and on such conditions as to interest as it directs<sup>7</sup>.

The Treasury may make regulations with respect to the manner in which and the conditions under which money may be raised under the auspices of the Director of Savings by (among other things) the issue of national savings certificates<sup>8</sup>.

1     le under the National Loans Act 1968 s 12: see CONSTITUTIONAL LAW AND HUMAN RIGHTS vol 8(2) (Reissue) PARAS 728-729. As to the Treasury see PARA 3; and CONSTITUTIONAL LAW AND HUMAN RIGHTS vol 8(2) (Reissue) PARA 512 et seq.

2     Post Office Act 1969 s 109 (amended by the Income and Corporation Taxes Act 1988 Sch 16). National savings certificates were originally issued under the Finance Act 1920 s 59 (repealed), and subsequently under the National Debt Act 1958 s 7(1) (repealed) and the National Loans Act 1968 s 12(5)(a) (see note 1). Money raised by the issue of certificates under those provisions by the Post Office is treated as having been raised under the National Loans Act 1968 under the auspices of the Director of Savings: National Debt Act 1972 s 11(3)(c). See also the National Loans Act 1968 s 12(6)(b). As to the Director of Savings see PARA 810 et seq. As to the Post Office see POST OFFICE.

1352 National savings certificates

NOTE 2--National Loans Act 1968 s 12(5)(a) amended: SI 2009/1941.

NOTE 8--SI 1991/1031, SI 1991/1407 further amended: SI 2010/291.

Halsbury's Laws of England/FINANCIAL SERVICES AND INSTITUTIONS (VOLUME 48 (2008) 5TH EDITION, PARAS 1-589; VOLUME 49 (2008) 5TH EDITION, PARAS 590-1619; VOLUME 50 (2008) 5TH EDITION, PARAS 1620-2586)/5. MONEY/(4) GOVERNMENT SECURITIES/(ii) Savings Certificates/1353. War savings certificates.

1353. War savings certificates.

War savings certificates<sup>1</sup> held immediately before 9 August 1972 continue to be held on the conditions applicable to them before that date<sup>2</sup>. The principal of, interest on<sup>3</sup>, and redemption expenses of war savings certificates are chargeable on the National Loans Fund with recourse to the Consolidated Fund<sup>4</sup>.

1 'War savings certificates' means the certificates issued by that name under the War Loan Act 1915 s 1 (repealed) or the Finance Act 1916 s 58 (repealed); National Debt Act 1972 s 9(3).

2 National Debt Act 1972 s 9(1). The Savings Certificates Regulations 1991, SI 1991/1031 (see PARA 1352 note 8) apply to war savings certificates, for 'certificate' in the regulations includes a war savings certificate: see reg 2(1); and PARA 1354 note 1.

3 As to the exemption from corporation tax see the Income and Corporation Taxes Act 1988 s 46; and INCOME TAXATION vol 23(2) (Reissue) PARA 1225.

4 National Debt Act 1972 s 9(2). As to the National Loans Fund see PARA 1334; and CONSTITUTIONAL LAW AND HUMAN RIGHTS vol 8(2) (Reissue) PARA 727 et seq. As to the Consolidated Fund see PARA 1334; and CONSTITUTIONAL LAW AND HUMAN RIGHTS vol 8(2) (Reissue) PARA 711 et seq; PARLIAMENT vol 78 (2010) PARA 1028 et seq.

Halsbury's Laws of England/FINANCIAL SERVICES AND INSTITUTIONS (VOLUME 48 (2008) 5TH EDITION, PARAS 1-589; VOLUME 49 (2008) 5TH EDITION, PARAS 590-1619; VOLUME 50 (2008) 5TH EDITION, PARAS 1620-2586)/5. MONEY/(4) GOVERNMENT SECURITIES/(ii) Savings Certificates/1354. Purchase of savings certificates.

1354. Purchase of savings certificates.

Applications to purchase a certificate<sup>1</sup> must be made in such manner as the Director of Savings may approve<sup>2</sup> and certificates are to be issued at such places as the Director of Savings determines and by such persons as he authorises<sup>3</sup>. A savings certificate may be purchased and held by any person<sup>4</sup> aged seven or upwards who is under no legal disability other than by reason of age<sup>5</sup>, by a friendly society<sup>6</sup>, or by any other body of persons approved for the purposes by the Director of Savings<sup>7</sup>, or by any two or more such persons or bodies jointly<sup>8</sup>. Subject to these provisions, a certificate may be purchased:

- 122 (1) on behalf of and in the name of any person or persons entitled<sup>9</sup> to purchase and hold a certificate, by any other person or persons<sup>10</sup>;
- 123 (2) on behalf of and in the name of a person or persons under the age of seven years, by any other person or persons<sup>11</sup>; and
- 124 (3) on behalf of and in the name of a person who lacks capacity<sup>12</sup>, by his deputy<sup>13</sup>, and any certificate so purchased is deemed to be held by the person or persons on whose behalf it is purchased<sup>14</sup>. However, no certificate may be purchased under head (1) above by any person or persons on behalf of any body of persons (other than a friendly society), whether corporate or unincorporate, without the approval (either general or limited) of the Director of Savings<sup>15</sup>.

Further, a certificate may be purchased and held by a trustee or by two or more trustees jointly<sup>16</sup>. A certificate may also be purchased by a person acting as trustee on behalf of any person not under disability otherwise than by reason of his age, and in the joint names of the trustee and beneficiary, in which case the certificate is to be held by them jointly<sup>17</sup>. Savings certificates may also be purchased in instalments<sup>18</sup>.

An index-linked national savings certificate issued before 7 September 1981 may be purchased and held only by a person who, if a man, has attained the age of 65 or, if a woman, has attained the age of 60, or by two or more such persons jointly<sup>19</sup>. These age restrictions no longer apply.

A certificate purchased or held by any person not so entitled to do so or in excess of the maximum holding<sup>20</sup> may be forfeited at the discretion of the Director of Savings<sup>21</sup>.

1 'Certificate' means a certificate issued under the name of a war savings certificate or a national savings certificate by the Treasury through the department of the Postmaster General or under the auspices of the Director of Savings for the purpose of raising money authorised to be raised by any Act: Savings Certificates Regulations 1991, SI 1991/1031, reg 2(1). As to the Treasury see PARA 3; and CONSTITUTIONAL LAW AND HUMAN RIGHTS vol 8(2) (Reissue) PARA 512 et seq. As to the transfer of functions from the Postmaster General see POST OFFICE vol 36(2) (Reissue) PARAS 1-4. As to the Director of Savings see PARA 810 et seq.

2 See the Savings Certificates Regulations 1991, SI 1991/1031, reg 3(2). The applicant must deliver such documents and other information to the Director of Savings in writing as he may require: reg 3(2). As to the manner approved by the Director of Savings see PARA 1359.

3 Savings Certificates Regulations 1991, SI 1991/1031, reg 3(1). The names of all holders of certificates must be recorded: reg 3(3).

4 As to the restrictions which apply to the persons entitled to hold index-linked certificates purchased before 7 September 1981 see the Savings Certificates Regulations 1991, SI 1991/1031, reg 4(6), Sch 1 Pt I (amended by SI 2007/1898). 'Index-linked certificate' means a certificate issued under the name of an index-linked national savings certificate: Savings Certificates Regulations 1991, SI 1991/1031, reg 2(1).

5 Savings Certificates Regulations 1991, SI 1991/1031, reg 4(1)(a).

6 Savings Certificates Regulations 1991, SI 1991/1031, reg 4(1)(b). For these purposes, 'friendly society' means a friendly society registered under the Friendly Societies Act 1974 or a branch registered under it of a friendly society so registered: reg 2(1); and see reg 34(a). As to friendly societies see further PARA 2081 et seq.

7 Savings Certificates Regulations 1991, SI 1991/1031, reg 4(1)(c).

8 Savings Certificates Regulations 1991, SI 1991/1031, reg 4(1). When a holder attains the age of seven the Director of Savings may subsequently require a specimen signature: reg 4(5).

9 Is entitled under the Savings Certificates Regulations 1991, SI 1991/1031, reg 4(1): see the text to notes 4-8.

12 'Person who lacks capacity' means a person who lacks capacity within the meaning of the Mental Capacity Act 2005 (see MENTAL HEALTH): Savings Certificates Regulations 1991, SI 1991/1031, reg 2(1) (definition added by SI 2007/1898); and see the Savings Certificates Regulations 1991, SI 1991/1031, regs 34(b), 35(2)(a), 36(2)(a), (3)(a) (all amended by SI 2007/1898). If any person holding, or having an interest in, any certificate is a person who lacks capacity or is under legal disability for any other reason except his age alone, anything which under the regulations is required or authorised to be done by or to the holder of the certificate must or may be done by or to the deputy (see note 13) or other person having power in law to administer his estate: Savings Certificates Regulations 1991, SI 1991/1031, reg 18 (amended by SI 2007/1898).

13 Savings Certificates Regulations 1991, SI 1991/1031, reg 4(2)(c) (amended by SI 2007/1898). 'Deputy', in relation to England and Wales, means, in relation to any decision made by a person who lacks capacity, a deputy appointed by the Court of Protection (see MENTAL HEALTH vol 30(2) (Reissue) PARAS 676, 681 et seq) for that purpose with power to make decisions in relation to the matters in question: Savings Certificates Regulations 1991, SI 1991/1031, reg 2(1) (definition added by SI 2007/1898); and see the Savings Certificates Regulations 1991, SI 1991/1031, regs 34(c), 35(2)(b), 36(2)(b), (3)(b) (all amended by SI 2007/1898).

15 Savings Certificates Regulations 1991, SI 1991/1031, reg 4(2) proviso.

16 Savings Certificates Regulations 1991, SI 1991/1031, reg 4(3)(a). However, no certificate may be purchased under reg 4(3)(a) by a trustee or trustees on behalf of any body of persons (other than a friendly society), whether corporate or unincorporate, without the approval (either general or specific) of the Director of Savings: reg 4(3) proviso. The regulations do not affect the mutual rights of joint holders (reg 32(1)) or authorise trustees to act otherwise than in accordance with the trust instrument and the law relating to the trust (reg 32(2)). The records kept by the Director of Savings may describe a trustee under reg 4(3)(a) as such, with or without specifying the trust (reg 4(4)), but otherwise no notice of a charge, trust or other equitable interest is receivable by the Director of Savings who is not affected by notice of any trust or of the fiduciary character of the holder (see reg 25(1), (2)).

18 See the Savings Certificates (Yearly Plan) Regulations 1984, SI 1984/779 (amended by SI 1985/1035; SI 1986/2001; SI 1988/1357; SI 1989/1521; SI 1991/75; SI 1992/3114; SI 1993/3132, SI 1997/1863; SI 2004/1662; SI 2005/2114; SI 2007/1898).

19 See the Savings Certificates Regulations 1991, SI 1991/1031, Sch 1 Pt I para 1. Such a certificate may be purchased on behalf of such a person, if he is a person who lacks capacity, by his deputy, and is then deemed to be held by that person: see reg 4(2) (amended by SI 2007/1898); and the text to note 14.

20 As to the maximum holding see PARA 1355.

21 See the Savings Certificates Regulations 1991, SI 1991/1031, reg 21 (amended by SI 1994/343).

UPDATE

1354 Purchase of savings certificates

NOTE 18--SI 1984/779 further amended: SI 2010/291.

Halsbury's Laws of England/FINANCIAL SERVICES AND INSTITUTIONS (VOLUME 48 (2008) 5TH EDITION, PARAS 1-589; VOLUME 49 (2008) 5TH EDITION, PARAS 590-1619; VOLUME 50 (2008) 5TH EDITION, PARAS 1620-2586)/5. MONEY/(4) GOVERNMENT SECURITIES/(ii) Savings Certificates/1355. Maximum holding.

1355. Maximum holding.

A person may not purchase any certificates<sup>1</sup> of a unit series<sup>2</sup> or hold any such certificates purchased on his behalf<sup>3</sup>, if the total number of units which will be held by him<sup>4</sup> immediately after the purchase, whether solely or jointly with any person, will exceed the prescribed limits<sup>5</sup>.

1 As to the meaning of 'certificate' see PARA 1354 note 1.

2 'Unit series' means any series of certificates which is not a money value series: Savings Certificates Regulations 1991, SI 1991/1031, reg 2(1) (definition added by SI 1994/343). 'Money value series' means any series of certificates issued under a prospectus which permits certificates to be issued for amounts which are neither a unit nor a multiple of a unit; and 'money value certificate' means a certificate of such a series: Savings Certificates Regulations 1991, SI 1991/1031, reg 2(1) (definition added by SI 1994/343). 'Unit' means, in relation to certificates of any series, the minimum amount for which a certificate of that series may be issued (regardless of whether, in particular circumstances, a certificate may be issued only for a greater amount) or would, apart from the minimum purchase requirement applicable to non index-linked certificates issued after 31 March 1977 but not later than 28 January 1979, have been issued: Savings Certificates Regulations 1991, SI 1991/1031, reg 2(1) (definition amended by SI 1992/1835).

3 I.e. under the Savings Certificates Regulations 1991, SI 1991/1031, reg 4(2) or under Sch 1 Pt I para 2: see PARA 1354.

4 As to the calculation of the total number of units that a person holds see the Savings Certificates Regulations 1991, SI 1991/1031, reg 5(5). Trusteeship is treated separately from personal capacity: see reg 5(2). For the purposes of reg 5, each holding of certificates in the name of the Accountant General of the Supreme Court is to be treated separately: reg 5(4).

5 See the Savings Certificates Regulations 1991, SI 1991/1031, reg 5(1) (amended by SI 1994/343). The limit depends on the date of issue. In the case of index linked certificates issued after 30 June 1985 and certificates, not being index linked certificates, issued after 25 September 1985, the maximum number of units which may be purchased is that specified in the prospectus relating to the certificates: Savings Certificates Regulations 1991, SI 1991/1031, reg 5(1)(a), (b). In the case of other certificates, the maximum number of certificates which may be purchased is set out in Sch 1 Pt II. As to the forfeiture of excess holdings see reg 21; and PARA 1354. A person may not purchase any money value certificates, or hold any such certificates purchased on his behalf under reg 4(2) (see PARA 1354) if, immediately after the purchase, he will hold (whether solely or jointly with any person) certificates the aggregate purchase price of which will exceed the sum specified by or in accordance with the prospectus as the maximum value of certificates, in terms of purchase price, which may be held by any one person in relation to that description of certificate (and such prospectus may provide that different maximum values are to apply in different circumstances): see reg 5(1A), (1B) (added by SI 1994/343).

The Savings Certificates Regulations 1991, SI 1991/1031, reg 5(1) does not apply to the transfer of a certificate to a person in accordance with reg 13(7) (see PARA 1356), but in relation to any subsequent purchase by him or on his behalf certificates so transferred are to be included for the purpose of calculating the number of units he holds: reg 5(3).

Halsbury's Laws of England/FINANCIAL SERVICES AND INSTITUTIONS (VOLUME 48 (2008) 5TH EDITION, PARAS 1-589; VOLUME 49 (2008) 5TH EDITION, PARAS 590-1619; VOLUME 50 (2008) 5TH EDITION, PARAS 1620-2586)/5. MONEY/(4) GOVERNMENT SECURITIES/(ii) Savings Certificates/1356. Transfer of certificates; nominations.

1356. Transfer of certificates; nominations.

Every transfer of a certificate<sup>1</sup> must be effected, on written application<sup>2</sup>, by the Director of Savings causing the name of the transferee to be recorded as the holder<sup>3</sup>.

Since 1 May 1981 it has not been possible for the holder of a certificate to make a nomination directing that on his death his interest in any certificate is to devolve on persons specified by him in his nomination<sup>4</sup>.

1 As to the meaning of 'certificate' see PARA 1354 note 1. The Director of Savings may in his discretion refuse to transfer a certificate, but if he does so he must send an intimation of his refusal to the person desiring the transfer: Savings Certificates Regulations 1991, SI 1991/1031, reg 13(2). As to the Director of Savings see PARA 810 et seq.

2 See the Savings Certificates Regulations 1991, SI 1991/1031, reg 13(3). Application must be made by the holder in a manner approved by the Director of Savings and accompanied, save where the Director of Savings otherwise directs, by the certificate: reg 13(3). As to the manner approved by the Director of Savings see PARA 1359.

3 Savings Certificates Regulations 1991, SI 1991/1031, reg 13(1). See also reg 13(4). The holder may also apply for other persons to be recorded as joint holders with him: see reg 13(5). As to transfers between trustees and beneficiaries see reg 13(6). So far as applicable, reg 13 applies to transfers on death: see reg 13(7).

4 As to nominations made before 1 May 1981 see the Savings Certificates Regulations 1991, SI 1991/1031, reg 37, Sch 2 (amended by SI 2005/2114).

Halsbury's Laws of England/FINANCIAL SERVICES AND INSTITUTIONS (VOLUME 48 (2008) 5TH EDITION, PARAS 1-589; VOLUME 49 (2008) 5TH EDITION, PARAS 590-1619; VOLUME 50 (2008) 5TH EDITION, PARAS 1620-2586)/5. MONEY/(4) GOVERNMENT SECURITIES/(ii) Savings Certificates/1357. Repayment of certificates.

1357. Repayment of certificates.

The holder of a certificate<sup>1</sup> may apply in a manner approved by the Director of Savings for the payment of the amount repayable<sup>2</sup> in respect of it<sup>3</sup>, or, subject to the Director of Savings' approval, may authorise another person to apply for or receive that amount<sup>4</sup>. Payment is made by means of a warrant except to the extent that:

- 125 (1) payment is made by any other means in accordance with the terms and conditions subject to which the certificate is held;
- 126 (2) the Director of Savings otherwise directs; or
- 127 (3) the applicant requests that all or part of the amount repayable be used to purchase another certificate, or a national savings bond, and the Director of Savings consents<sup>5</sup>. Any such warrant which is crossed ranks as a cheque drawn on the Director of Savings, but is not negotiable<sup>6</sup>. An uncrossed warrant must not be paid until the receipt for the amount payable has been duly signed by the payee or some person authorised by him to receive payment<sup>7</sup>. Except where the Director of Savings otherwise directs, a warrant may not be paid until the certificate in respect of which the repayment is to be made has been delivered to him<sup>8</sup>. An uncrossed warrant is payable at the place named in it or otherwise in accordance with the directions contained in it<sup>9</sup>. Where the Director of Savings is unable for any reason to obtain a valid discharge for any payment he may open an account in the National Savings Bank in the recipient's name and retain the amount due in that account<sup>10</sup>.

1 As to the meaning of 'certificate' see PARA 1354 note 1.

2 'Amount repayable' includes: (1) in relation to any money value certificate, any part of the purchase price of that certificate which is repayable separately from the rest of that price under the relevant prospectus, and any interest or bonus or other sum which has accrued due in respect of that certificate or that part of the purchase price which is to be repaid as the case may be; and (2) in relation to any certificate of a unit series, any interest or bonus or other sum which has accrued due in respect of that certificate: Savings Certificates Regulations 1991, SI 1991/1031, reg 2(1) (definition substituted by SI 1994/343). As to the meaning of 'money value certificate' see PARA 1355 note 2. For the purpose of determining the amount repayable, the payment of that amount is deemed to be effected on the date appearing on the warrant: Savings Certificates Regulations 1991, SI 1991/1031, reg 7(7). That date will not be more than 21 days from the date on which application for payment is received by the Director of Savings, unless the holder has requested a later date: reg 7(8). If the Director is satisfied that it is or was not practicable to dispatch the warrant to enable payment to be made in time, then the date appearing on the warrant will be no later than the earliest date by which he is satisfied it would be practicable for the payee to obtain payment: see reg 7(7), (9), (10). As to the Director of Savings see PARA 810 et seq.

Where, in accordance with the prospectus relating to any money value series, a partial repayment of the purchase price is made (together with payment of such interest or bonus or other sum which may have accrued due in respect of the portion repaid under that prospectus), a replacement certificate must be issued showing as its purchase price the amount of the original purchase price that has not been repaid: reg 6(2A) (added by SI 1994/343).

3 Savings Certificates Regulations 1991, SI 1991/1031, reg 6(1). Where repayment is requested on a specified date the application may not, unless the Director of Savings otherwise agrees, be made more than two months before that date: see reg 6(1). Unless the Director otherwise directs or agrees, applications must be made to Savings Certificates and SAYE Office, Durham: reg 6(1). In the case of a multiple certificate, application may be made for the repayment of any number of the units: reg 6(2). 'Multiple certificate' means a certificate representing more than one unit certificate: see reg 2(1). In general, no repayment may be made if the holder is under the age of seven: reg 9(1). Where the holder is a person who lacks capacity his deputy must apply for repayment: reg 9(2) (amended by SI 2007/1898). As to the meaning of 'person who lacks capacity' see PARA 1354 note 12. As to the meaning of 'deputy' see PARA 1354 note 13. Where the holder is under seven the Director of Savings has a discretion to make a repayment to any proper person: see the Savings Certificates Regulations 1991, SI 1991/1031, reg 9(3). Where the Director is satisfied that any person holding, or having an interest in, a certificate is a person who lacks capacity in respect of whom no deputy has been appointed, the Director may, if he thinks fit, pay the whole or part of the amount repayable in respect of the certificate to any person who satisfies him that he will apply the payment for the maintenance or otherwise for the benefit of the person who lacks capacity: reg 9(4) (amended by SI 2007/1898). As to repayment of certificates held jointly see the Savings Certificates Regulations 1991, SI 1991/1031, reg 10 (amended by SI 2007/1898). As to repayment to friendly societies and other bodies see the Savings Certificates Regulations 1991, SI 1991/1031, reg 11. As to repayment to the official receiver or trustee in bankruptcy where the holder is bankrupt see reg 12. The Director of Savings may require evidence of the identity or title of any person: see reg 30(1). As to the official receiver see COMPANY AND PARTNERSHIP INSOLVENCY vol 7(3) (2004 Reissue) PARA 503 et seq. As to the trustee in bankruptcy see BANKRUPTCY AND INDIVIDUAL INSOLVENCY vol 3(2) (2002 Reissue) PARA 316 et seq.

4 Savings Certificates Regulations 1991, SI 1991/1031, reg 6(3). Where a warrant is issued in good faith and without negligence to some person other than the holder or person entitled, and the issue is attributable to some act or omission on the part of the holder or person entitled, it is deemed to have been duly issued to a person entitled, but subject to reg 28 (which saves the rights of third persons): reg 27(2).

5 Savings Certificates Regulations 1991, SI 1991/1031, reg 7(1) (substituted by SI 2000/3110). In the absence of such a request or direction, and subject to the terms and conditions subject to which the certificate is held, every application for payment of the amount repayable in respect of a certificate is treated as implying an authority to the Director of Savings to issue a warrant for that amount and pay it in accordance with the terms of the warrant, or to make payment by such other means as may be provided for in those terms and conditions: Savings Certificate Regulations 1991, SI 1991/1031, reg 7(1A) (added by SI 2000/3110). The death of any person who made an application for payment of the amount repayable in respect of a certificate does not of itself determine such authority, but if the Director of Savings receives notice that the applicant has died or has countermanded such authority, the Director of Savings: (1) may not issue a warrant, or, if such warrant has already been issued, he must take all reasonable steps to stop repayment of it; and (2) may not initiate the making of payment by other means or, if such payment has already been initiated, must take all reasonable steps (if any) as may, having regard to the nature of the means of payment concerned, be within his power to prevent completion of the payment: Savings Certificate Regulations 1991, SI 1991/1031, reg 7(1B) (added by SI 2000/3110).

For the purposes of determining the amount repayable in respect of a certificate where repayment is not made by warrant because the proceeds are used to purchase another certificate or a national savings bond, repayment will be deemed to be effected on the date entered in the records kept by the Director of Savings as the date of purchase of the new certificate or bond: Savings Certificate Regulations 1991, SI 1991/1031, reg 8.

6 See the Savings Certificates Regulations 1991, SI 1991/1031, reg 7(2), which applies the Bills of Exchange Act 1882 ss 76, 77(1), (3)-(6), 78-81 (see PARAS 1411, 1499, 1560, 1575; and also PARAS 838, 839, 880); and the Cheques Act 1957 ss 3, 4 (see PARAS 900-901).

7 Savings Certificates Regulations 1991, SI 1991/1031, reg 7(3). The receipt operates as a full discharge to the Treasury and the Director of Savings, subject to reg 28 (which saves the rights of third persons): reg 27(1). Where an uncrossed warrant is paid to a person purporting to be the payee or his authorised agent then, even if the receipt is signed by someone else, the making of the payment is a full discharge to the Treasury and the Director of Savings if the payment is made in good faith and without negligence and the making of the payment is attributable to some act or omission on the part of the holder, the payee or authorised agent: reg 7(3) proviso. Where an uncrossed warrant is made payable to the holder, it may be paid to another person who signs the receipt and forthwith reinvests the money in certificates in the name of the holder: reg 7(4). As to the Treasury see PARA 3; and CONSTITUTIONAL LAW AND HUMAN RIGHTS vol 8(2) (Reissue) PARA 512 et seq.

8 Savings Certificates Regulations 1991, SI 1991/1031, reg 7(5).

9 Savings Certificates Regulations 1991, SI 1991/1031, reg 7(6). The Director of Savings may dispatch the warrant to the place named in it, and where he does so he must dispatch a notice informing the payee that he has done so: reg 7(6). The posting of a warrant or the notice referred to in reg 7(6) to any person at the last address furnished to the Director of Savings will, as regards the liability of the Treasury or the Director of Savings, be equivalent to the delivery of the warrant or notice to that person: see reg 7(11).

10 See the Savings Certificates Regulations 1991, SI 1991/1031, reg 19(1). However: (1) if the person to whom the payment is due has an account in the National Savings Bank, the Director of Savings may, if he thinks fit, instead of opening a new account, credit the amount payable to the existing account; and (2) in the case of an account opened by the Director of Savings: (a) no sum is to be received by way of deposit for the credit of the account except in pursuance of the Savings Certificates Regulations 1991, SI 1991/1031; and (b) the regulations requiring a declaration to be made by a depositor in the National Savings Bank do not apply with respect to any payment into the account by the Director of Savings: reg 19(1) proviso. Any sum credited under reg 19(1) is ignored in relation to the rule limiting the amount which may be deposited in a savings bank account: see reg 19(2). As to the National Savings Bank see PARA 810 et seq.

1358. Death of holder.

On the death of the holder of a certificate<sup>1</sup>, the production of probate or letters of administration, or a certified copy, granted in respect of personal estate including the certificate by a court in the United Kingdom<sup>2</sup>, the Isle of Man<sup>3</sup> or the Channel Islands<sup>4</sup> is sufficient authority to the Director of Savings to pay the amount repayable<sup>5</sup> on the certificate, or to transfer the certificate to or to the direction of the grantee<sup>6</sup>.

On the death of the sole holder of certificates in respect of which the amount repayable does not exceed £5,000, the Director of Savings may pay the amount repayable, without the production of probate or letters of administration<sup>7</sup>, to the person appearing to him to be entitled to take out probate or letters of administration<sup>8</sup>, or, where the holder made a will<sup>9</sup>, to the person to whom, in the Director of Savings' opinion, the amount would be repayable on probate or administration with the will annexed<sup>10</sup>, or to a person who satisfies the Director of Savings that he is entitled to receive the amount or any part of it in right of his being the person who paid the funeral expenses, or a creditor, or a person having a beneficial interest in the estate<sup>11</sup>, or to some other specified person<sup>12</sup>.

Where the aggregate value of specified assets<sup>13</sup> of a deceased holder of certificates, not being a person holding solely as a trustee, exceeds £50,000, the Director of Savings must, before payment or transfer, and subject to certain exceptions<sup>14</sup>, require the production of a statement as to payment of inheritance tax on death<sup>15</sup>.

1 As to the meaning of 'certificate' see PARA 1354 note 1.

2 As to the meaning of 'United Kingdom' see PARA 2 note 3.

3 As to the application of the Savings Certificates Regulations 1991, SI 1991/1031, to the Isle of Man see reg 35 (amended by SI 2007/1898).

4 As to the application of the Savings Certificates Regulations 1991, SI 1991/1031, to the Channel Islands see reg 36 (amended by SI 2007/1898).

5 As to the meaning of 'amount repayable' see PARA 1357 note 2. As to the Director of Savings see PARA 810 et seq.

6 Savings Certificates Regulations 1991, SI 1991/1031, reg 14(1). If it subsequently appears that the grant was invalid or deficient, the payment or transfer is nevertheless deemed to have been duly made: reg 14(2). The Director of Savings may require evidence of the identity or title of a payee: see reg 30(1). He may accept as conclusive proof of the holder's death any evidence establishing that the holder has not been heard of for at least seven years; and 'holder of the certificate' includes any person beneficially interested at any time, whether absolutely or contingently, in the personal estate of the deceased holder of a certificate: reg 30(2).

9 'Will' includes a codicil: Savings Certificates Regulations 1991, SI 1991/1031, reg 15(4).

10 Savings Certificates Regulations 1991, SI 1991/1031, reg 15(1)(b). Recipients under reg 15(1)(b) or reg 15(1)(c) (see the text and note 11) who are aged 16 or over may give valid receipts: see reg 15(2). In making any payment under reg 15(1)(b) or reg 15(1)(c), the Director of Savings must in general have regard to the rules of law as to the distribution of estates of deceased persons, but, if he is of the opinion that hardship or inconvenience would be thereby caused, he may depart from those rules in such manner and to such extent as he considers just: reg 15(3). Where a person to whom reg 15(1)(b) or reg 15(1)(c) applies has died before payment has been made to him, that sum or any part of it may be paid to any person to whom it might have been paid if the first mentioned person had, immediately before his death, been the sole holder of the certificates in question: reg 15(3) proviso. As to distribution on intestacy and as to administration with the will annexed see EXECUTORS AND ADMINISTRATORS.

11 Savings Certificates Regulations 1991, SI 1991/1031, reg 15(1)(c). See note 10.

12 As to the recipient where the deceased was a British citizen whose next of kin reside outside the United Kingdom, the Isle of Man and the Channel Islands see the Savings Certificates Regulations 1991, SI 1991/1031, reg 15(1)(d). As to the recipient where the deceased was a foreign seaman or foreign subject see reg 15(1)(e), (f). As to the recipient where the estate devolves on the Crown see reg 15(1)(g). Payment made in accordance with the law of the holder's residence at the time of his death is deemed to have been duly made unless before making payment the Director of Savings received notice that the holder was at the time of his death domiciled elsewhere: reg 16. As to British citizenship generally see BRITISH NATIONALITY, IMMIGRATION AND ASYLUM vol 4(2) (2002 Reissue) PARA 7 et seq.

13 The 'specified assets' are the following assets (not being assets in respect of which it is shown to the satisfaction of the Director of Savings that the deceased holder had no interest otherwise than as a trustee):

- 6 (1) the total amount which would have been repayable (if repayment had been demanded) at the date of the death of the holder in respect of all certificates recorded in his name alone or in his name jointly with any other person (Savings Certificates Regulations 1991, SI 1991/1031, reg 17(2)(a));
- 7 (2) the total amount (including interest) which, at the date of the death of the holder, stands to the credit of all accounts in his name alone, or in his name jointly with any other person, in the National Savings Bank (reg 17(2)(b));
- 8 (3) all stock and securities registered on the National Savings Stock Register at the date of the death of the holder in his name alone or in his name jointly with any other person (reg 17(2)(c));
- 9 (4) any amount repayable and any other sum payable in respect of all premium savings bonds recorded in the holder's name (reg 17(2)(d));
- 10 (5) the total amount (including any bonus or interest) which would have been repayable (if repayment had been demanded) at the date of the death of the holder in respect of all savings contracts entered into by him and registered by the Director of Savings under a contractual savings scheme certified by the Treasury in accordance with the Income and Corporation Taxes Act 1988 s 326(2) (repealed) (see now the Income Tax (Trading and Other Income) Act 2005 ss 703(2), (3), 704(2), 705(1)) (see INCOME TAXATION) (Savings Certificates Regulations 1991, SI 1991/1031, reg 17(2)(e));
- 11 (6) the total amount (including interest) which would have been repayable (if repayment had been demanded) at the date of the death of the holder in respect of all agreements entered into or certificates held by the holder in accordance with the Savings Certificates (Yearly Plan) Regulations 1984, SI 1984/779 (see PARA 1354 note 18) (Savings Certificates Regulations 1991, SI 1991/1031, reg 17(2)(f)).

For these purposes, the value of the stock and securities referred to in head (3) above is: (a) in the case of stock which is of a description corresponding to stock or securities transferable in the registers kept by the Government Stock in accordance with regulations under the Finance Act 1942 s 47 (see the Government Stock Regulations 2004, SI 2004/1611; and PARA 1335 et seq), the market value thereof at the date of the death of the holder; and (b) in all other cases, the total amount (including interest and any other sum payable) which would have been repayable (if repayment had been demanded) at the date of the death of the holder: Savings Certificates Regulations 1991, SI 1991/1031, reg 17(3) (amended by SI 2004/1662). As to the National Savings Bank see PARA 810 et seq. As to the National Savings Stock Register see PARA 1347. ### 1359. Documents.

The loss or destruction of any document issued by or under the auspices of the Director of Savings in pursuance of the Savings Certificates Regulations 1991<sup>1</sup> must be notified in writing to him as soon as practicable by the person entitled to possession of the document<sup>2</sup>. If it appears to the Director of Savings that any document so issued has been issued in error, lost, destroyed or tampered with, or is in such a condition as to render it desirable that it should be replaced by a new document, he may issue<sup>3</sup> a new document in lieu of the old document to any person who satisfies him that he is entitled to the possession of the document<sup>4</sup>.

Where any application is required<sup>5</sup> to be made in a manner approved by the Director of Savings, the document in which the application is made must contain a full and specific statement of the particulars required to be given, and any such document which is required by the Director of Savings to be signed by any person must be signed by that person<sup>6</sup>. Where any document is required<sup>7</sup> to be signed by any person and that person is unable to write, it is sufficient if the document is marked by that person in the presence of a witness in such manner as the Director of Savings may require<sup>8</sup>. Any mistake in any document received from the Director of Savings must, as soon as practicable, be notified in writing to the Director of Savings by the person receiving the document<sup>9</sup>. If the Director of Savings is satisfied that any transaction effected or thing done, or purporting to have been effected or done has been effected or done in error, he may cancel the transaction and may take all such steps as are, in his opinion, necessary to rectify the error, and may for that purpose require the surrender to him of any certificate or other document<sup>10</sup>.

1360. Obligation of secrecy.

A person employed in connection with business arising under the Savings Certificates Regulations 1991<sup>1</sup> must not disclose to any person, other than the Director of Savings<sup>2</sup> or a person employed in carrying the regulations into execution, the name of the purchaser or holder of any certificate<sup>3</sup>, the number of certificates purchased by any person, or the amount repaid in respect of any certificate<sup>4</sup>. However, this does not prevent the disclosure by a person authorised for the purpose by the Director of Savings from disclosing information to any person in connection with an offence committed with reference to any certificate or for the purpose of ascertaining whether or not an offence has been so committed nor does it prevent the Director of Savings from complying with a notice served on him under the requirement<sup>5</sup> to deliver or make available documents relating to liability of a taxpayer<sup>6</sup>.

Information such as the name of the purchaser or holder of any certificate, the number of certificates purchased, or the amount repaid in respect of any certificate<sup>7</sup> may be disclosed in accordance with, and subject to such conditions as may be specified in, arrangements made by the Director of Savings for the purpose of enabling the person to whom the information is disclosed to provide, or assist in connection with the provision of, relevant information<sup>8</sup> to the purchaser or holder of any certificate, and any such person is thereby subject to the obligation of secrecy as if he were a person employed in connection with business arising under the regulations<sup>9</sup>.

1362. Premium savings bonds generally.

The Treasury's power to borrow<sup>1</sup> extends to raising money by the creation and issue of premium savings bonds<sup>2</sup>. The principal of and interest on money so borrowed, the issuing expenses and the prizes allotted are charged on the National Loans Fund with recourse to the Consolidated Fund<sup>3</sup>.

Premium savings bonds are a government security and are eligible for inclusion in draws for cash prizes which are free from United Kingdom income tax and capital gains tax<sup>4</sup>.

1363. Purchase of premium bonds.

Premium savings bonds are issued by the Treasury in units of £1<sup>1</sup> at such places as the Director of Savings determines and by such persons as he authorises<sup>2</sup>. A bond may be purchased and held by any person<sup>3</sup> who has attained the age of 16<sup>4</sup>, being a person who is not under any legal disability otherwise than by reason of age<sup>5</sup>. Bonds purchased or held by a person not entitled to do so may be forfeited, if the Director of Savings so directs<sup>6</sup>.

An application to purchase a bond must be made in a manner approved by the Director of Savings, and, for the purposes of any such application, the applicant must deliver to the Director of Savings such documents and other information in writing as he may require<sup>7</sup>. The Director of Savings then causes such entries to be made in the register as are necessary to show the names of the holders of the bonds<sup>8</sup>.

Bonds are not transferable either during the lifetime or on the death of the registered holder<sup>9</sup>.

1 Finance Act 1968 s 54(1), Sch 18 para 2. As to the Treasury see PARA 3; and CONSTITUTIONAL LAW AND HUMAN RIGHTS vol 8(2) (Reissue) PARA 512 et seq.

2 Premium Savings Bonds Regulations 1972, SI 1972/765, reg 3(1). As to the Director of Savings see PARA 810 et seq.

3 A bond may not be purchased or held by more than one person or by a body of persons, whether corporate or unincorporate: Premium Savings Bonds Regulations 1972, SI 1972/765, reg 4(2). Subject to reg 4(3) (see note 4), a bond may not be purchased or held by any person on behalf of another person: reg 4(2A) (added by SI 1991/1337).

4 Subject to the provisions of the Premium Savings Bonds Regulations 1972, SI 1972/765, a bond may be purchased:

- 12 (1) on behalf of and in the name of a person under 16, by his parent or guardian or grandparent or by any person who satisfies the Director of Savings that he is a proper person to act on behalf of the first mentioned person;
- 13 (2) on behalf of and in the name of a person who lacks capacity, by his deputy; and
- 14 (3) subject to the approval of the Director of Savings, on behalf of and in the name of an eligible person, by any other person acting in pursuance of a power of attorney created by that eligible person, and any bond so purchased is deemed to be held by the person on whose behalf it is purchased: reg 4(3) (substituted by SI 1980/767; and amended by SI 1981/310; SI 1999/3305; SI 2007/1898). 'Person who lacks capacity' means a person who lacks capacity within the meaning of the Mental Capacity Act 2005 (see MENTAL HEALTH); and 'deputy', in relation to England and Wales, means, in relation to any decision made by a person who lacks capacity, a deputy appointed by the Court of Protection (see MENTAL HEALTH vol 30(2) (Reissue) PARAS 676, 681 et seq) for that purpose with power to make decisions in relation to the matters in question: Premium Savings Bonds Regulations 1972, SI 1972/765, reg 2(1) (definitions added by SI 2007/1898).

Where a bond has been purchased on behalf of a person who was, at the date of purchase, under the age of 16, the Director of Savings may, at any time after that person has attained 16, require a specimen of his signature: Premium Savings Bonds Regulations 1972, SI 1972/765, reg 4(4).

5 Premium Savings Bonds Regulations 1972, SI 1972/765, reg 4(1). If a holder is a person who lacks capacity or is under disability for any other reason except his age alone, anything required or authorised to be done by or to the holder is to be done by or to his deputy or other person administering his estate: reg 16 (amended by SI 2007/1898). No notice of a trust is receivable by the Director of Savings in respect of a bond: Premium Savings Bonds Regulations 1972, SI 1972/765, reg 23.

1364. Maximum holding.

A person may not purchase any premium savings bond or hold one purchased on his behalf if the total number of bond units<sup>1</sup> which will be held by him immediately after the purchase will exceed 30,000<sup>2</sup>. Any bond purchased in contravention of this provision will not be eligible for inclusion in any draw until the holding has been reduced to 30,000<sup>3</sup>; and any bond purchased or held in contravention of this provision may be forfeited, if the Director of Savings so directs<sup>4</sup>.

1 'Unit' means, in relation to bonds of any series, the unit in which bonds of that series are denominated: Premium Savings Bonds Regulations 1972, SI 1972/765, reg 2(1) (definition substituted by SI 1976/1543).

2 Premium Savings Bonds Regulations 1972, SI 1972/765, reg 5(1) (amended by SI 1976/1543; SI 1993/782). In calculating the total number of bond units a person holds, a multiple bond is taken to be such number of bond units as it represents: Premium Savings Bonds Regulations 1972, SI 1972/765, reg 5(2) (amended by SI 1976/1543). 'Multiple bond' means a bond representing any number of bond units and entitling the holder to receive the aggregate amount of the sums repayable in respect of that number of bond units: Premium Savings Bonds Regulations 1972, SI 1972/765, reg 2(1) (definition amended by SI 1976/1543).

As to the minimum purchase of bonds see the Premium Savings Bonds Regulations 1972, SI 1972/765, reg 6 (substituted by SI 1976/1543) which provides that not less than five bond units may be purchased in the name of any one person at a time, and bonds must not be purchased except in five bond units or multiples thereof.

3 See the Finance Act 1968 s 54(1), Sch 18 para 9.

4 See the Premium Savings Bonds Regulations 1972, SI 1972/765, reg 19(1)(b) (amended by SI 1976/1543). As to the Director of Savings see PARA 810 et seq.

Halsbury's Laws of England/FINANCIAL SERVICES AND INSTITUTIONS (VOLUME 48 (2008) 5TH EDITION, PARAS 1-589; VOLUME 49 (2008) 5TH EDITION, PARAS 590-1619; VOLUME 50 (2008) 5TH EDITION, PARAS 1620-2586)/5. MONEY/(4) GOVERNMENT SECURITIES/(iii) Premium Savings Bonds/1365. Interest, draws and prizes.

1365. Interest, draws and prizes.

The rate of interest on premium savings bonds is  $4\frac{5}{8}$  per cent or such other rate as may be prescribed by the Treasury<sup>1</sup>. The monthly prize fund is determined by calculating one month's interest on each bond unit eligible<sup>2</sup> for the draws in that month<sup>3</sup>. Each £1 unit bond has one chance in each draw for which it is eligible; it may not win more than one prize in each such draw and in draws producing more than one prize it will be allotted the highest prize for which it is drawn<sup>4</sup>. The serial numbers of prize-winning bonds are published and the holders are notified by post<sup>5</sup>.

All matters relating to the method and conduct of the draw and allotment of prizes are at the sole discretion of the Director of Savings, whose decision as to which bonds have drawn prizes is final<sup>6</sup>.

1 See the Finance Act 1968 s 54(1), Sch 18 paras 5, 15(a) (amended by SI 2004/2353). Notwithstanding any requirement in the terms and conditions applicable to premium savings bonds to give notice of a change in the prize fund rate, the Treasury may change that rate at any time without notice: Premium Savings Bonds Regulations 1972, SI 1972/765, reg 3A(1) (regs 3A, 3B added by SI 2004/2353). As to the Treasury see PARA 3; and CONSTITUTIONAL LAW AND HUMAN RIGHTS vol 8(2) (Reissue) PARA 512 et seq. Where notice of a change in the prize fund interest rate or of a change in the scale of prizes (see note 4) has been given before 1 July 1972 but the period of notice ends after that date, the effective date of change may be brought forward; any decision to make such a change in effective date must be published in the London, Edinburgh and Belfast Gazettes: Premium Savings Bonds Regulations 1972, SI 1972/765, reg 3A(5) (as so added).

2 A bond is eligible for inclusion in the first draw held after the expiration of three clear calendar months following the month in which it is purchased (unless sooner repaid) and thereafter in each succeeding draw (unless repaid before the first day of the month in which the draw is held or the holder has died before the first day of a period of 12 consecutive calendar months preceding the month in which the draw is held): Finance Act 1968 Sch 18 para 7. Bonds held in excess of the maximum holding are not eligible: see Sch 18 para 9.

3 Finance Act 1968 Sch 18 para 5. See also the Premium Savings Bonds Regulations 1972, SI 1972/765, reg 3A(3) (as added: see note 1).

4 Finance Act 1968 Sch 18 para 8. Notwithstanding any requirement in the terms and conditions applicable to premium savings bonds to give notice of a change in the scale of prizes for a draw, the Treasury may change the scale without notice: Premium Savings Bonds Regulations 1972, SI 1972/765, reg 3A(2) (as added: see note 1). A change in the scale of prizes for a draw is a change in the way the number of prizes for that draw is calculated, or a change in the way the prize fund for that draw is shared amongst the different prize values, or both: reg 3A(4) (as so added). See further note 1.

5 See the Finance Act 1968 Sch 18 para 11 (amended by SI 2004/2353). Notwithstanding any requirement in the terms and conditions applicable to premium savings bonds to publish the serial numbers of winning bonds in the London Gazette, the Director of Savings may instead publish such numbers on the National Savings and Investments website: Premium Savings Bonds Regulations 1972, SI 1972/765, reg 3B (as added: see note 1). As to the Director of Savings see PARA 810 et seq.

6 See the Finance Act 1968 Sch 18 para 12. Note that the reference in Sch 18 para 12 to the Postmaster General appears not to have been formally amended so as to refer to the Director of Savings, but cf the Premium Savings Bonds Regulations 1972, SI 1972/765, reg 35(3). As to the transfer of functions from the Postmaster General see POST OFFICE vol 36(2) (Reissue) PARAS 1-4.

Halsbury's Laws of England/FINANCIAL SERVICES AND INSTITUTIONS (VOLUME 48 (2008) 5TH EDITION, PARAS 1-589; VOLUME 49 (2008) 5TH EDITION, PARAS 590-1619; VOLUME 50 (2008) 5TH EDITION, PARAS 1620-2586)/5. MONEY/(4) GOVERNMENT SECURITIES/(iii) Premium Savings Bonds/1366. Repayments in respect of premium bonds.

1366. Repayments in respect of premium bonds.

The purchase price of a premium savings bond is repayable in full on application made by the holder<sup>1</sup> in writing in a manner approved by the Director of Savings<sup>2</sup>.

Every payment in respect of a bond must be made by crossed warrant except to the extent that:

- 128 (1) payment is made by any other means in accordance with the terms and conditions subject to which the bond is held;
- 129 (2) the Director of Savings otherwise directs; or
- 130 (3) the applicant for the payment requests that all or part of the amount payable be used to (a) purchase another bond or bonds or any other description of security issued by the Treasury for the purpose of raising money under the auspices of the Director of Savings; or (b) make a deposit with the National Savings Bank, and the Director of Savings consents thereto<sup>3</sup>.

In the absence of a direction or request within head (1) or head (2) above, every application for payment in respect of a bond is to be treated as conferring authority on the Director of Savings<sup>4</sup>:

- 131 (i) subject to the terms and conditions subject to which the bond is held, to issue a crossed warrant for that amount and pay it in accordance with the terms of the warrant<sup>5</sup>; or
- 132 (ii) to make payment by such other means (if any) as may be provided for in those terms and conditions<sup>6</sup>.

Where the Director of Savings is unable for any reason to obtain a valid discharge for any payment falling to be made to any person in respect of a bond, he may open a National Savings Bank account in that person's name<sup>7</sup> and, until payment can be made to that person, retain the amount due in that account<sup>8</sup>.

The Treasury, the Director of Savings and any person authorised by him are not liable in respect of payments duly made or acts duly done in accordance with regulations; and any such payment is deemed to have been a valid payment, and the recipient's receipt is a full discharge<sup>9</sup>.

None of these provisions, however, operates to prevent the recovery by any person or his representatives of any money lawfully due to him from the person to whom it was paid by the Director of Savings or from that person's representatives, or affects the right which any person or his representatives may have in respect of a bond against a third party<sup>10</sup>.

Unclaimed money<sup>11</sup> may be paid to the National Debt Commissioners<sup>12</sup>.

1 As to the meaning of 'holder' see PARA 1363 note 8. As to evidence of identity see the Premium Savings Bonds Regulations 1972, SI 1972/765, reg 29(1). A holder aged 16 or over may, subject to the approval of the Director of Savings, authorise any person to apply for or receive repayment on his behalf: reg 7(3). No payment may be made to a bondholder under 16 (see reg 9(1)), but an application may, however, be made on his behalf by the person who purchased the bond or some other proper person (see reg 9(2) (substituted by SI 1981/310)). Application for payment in respect of a bond held by a person who lacks capacity is to be made by his deputy: Premium Savings Bonds Regulations 1972, SI 1972/765, reg 10(1) (amended by SI 2007/1898). Where it is shown to the satisfaction of the Director of Savings that the holder of a bond is a person who lacks capacity for whom no deputy has been appointed in relation to his property and affairs, the Director of Savings may, where it is shown to his satisfaction that it is expedient that the whole or any part of the sum repayable, or of any other sum payable, should be applied for the maintenance or otherwise for the benefit of the holder, if he thinks fit pay that sum or that part of it to any person who satisfies him that he will apply it for such purposes: Premium Savings Bonds Regulations 1972, SI 1972/765, reg 10(2) (substituted by SI 1991/1337; and amended by SI 2007/1898). In the case of a bankrupt, payment is made to and on the application of the official receiver or trustee in bankruptcy: see the Premium Savings Bonds Regulations 1972, SI 1972/765, reg 11 (amended by SI 1986/2001). As to the Director of Savings see PARA 810 et seq. As to the meanings of 'person who lacks capacity' and 'deputy' see PARA 1363 note 4. As to the official receiver see COMPANY AND PARTNERSHIP INSOLVENCY vol 7(3) (2004 Reissue) PARA 503 et seq. As to the trustee in bankruptcy see BANKRUPTCY AND INDIVIDUAL INSOLVENCY vol 3(2) (2002 Reissue) PARA 316 et seq.

2 Finance Act 1968 s 54(1), Sch 18 para 13; Premium Savings Bonds Regulations 1972, SI 1972/765, reg 7(1). In the case of a multiple bond, an application may be made for repayment of any number of the bond units it represents: reg 7(2) (amended by SI 1976/1543). As to the meaning of 'multiple bond' see PARA 1364 note 2. As to the meaning of 'unit' see PARA 1364 note 1. As to the manner approved by the Director of Savings see PARA 1368.

3 Premium Savings Bonds Regulations 1972, SI 1972/765, reg 8(1) (substituted by SI 2004/2353). As to the Treasury see PARA 3; and CONSTITUTIONAL LAW AND HUMAN RIGHTS vol 8(2) (Reissue) PARA 512 et seq. As to the National Savings Bank see PARA 810 et seq. The provisions of the Bills of Exchange Act 1882 ss 76, 77(1), (3)-(6), 78-81 (see PARAS 1411, 1499, 1560, 1575; and also PARAS 838, 839, 880), and of the Cheques Act 1957 ss 3, 4 (see PARAS 900-901) apply to a crossed warrant as if it were a cheque drawn on the Director of Savings (see PARAS 921-922), but nothing in the Premium Savings Bonds Regulations 1972, SI 1972/765, makes such a warrant negotiable: reg 8(2). Except where the Director of Savings directs, a warrant will not be paid until the bond (or document in lieu of it) has been produced or, where the bond or any bond unit represented by a multiple bond is being repaid, delivered to the Director of Savings: reg 8(4) (amended by SI 1976/1543). The posting of a warrant to any person at the last address furnished to the Director of Savings is, as regards the liability of the Treasury or the Director of Savings, equivalent to the delivery of the warrant to that person: Premium Savings Bonds Regulations 1972, SI 1972/765, reg 8(6) (substituted by SI 2004/2353). Where repayment is made in respect of a bond, the payment of the amount repayable under it is, for the purpose of determining whether any other sum is payable in respect of that bond, deemed to be effected on the date on which the warrant is issued: Premium Savings Bonds Regulations 1972, SI 1972/765, reg 8(7) (added by SI 1980/767).

Where a warrant is issued payable to some person other than the bondholder or person entitled, but was issued in good faith and without negligence and the issue is attributable to some act or omission on the part of the bondholder or person entitled, the warrant is deemed to have been duly issued to a person entitled: see the Premium Savings Bonds Regulations 1972, SI 1972/765, reg 26(2). This is expressed to be subject to reg 27 (saving of rights of third parties): see the text to note 10.

4 See the Premium Savings Bonds Regulations 1972, SI 1972/765, reg 8(1A) (added by SI 2004/2353). The death of any person who made an application for payment in respect of a bond does not of itself determine the authority mentioned in the Premium Savings Bonds Regulations 1972, SI 1972/765, reg 8(1A), but if the Director of Savings receives notice that the applicant has countermanded such authority or has died, the Director of Savings: (1) may not issue a warrant or, if such a warrant has already been issued, must take all reasonable steps to stop payment of it; and (2) may not initiate the making of payment by other means or, if such payment has already been initiated, must take all reasonable steps (if any) as may, having regard to the nature of the means of payment concerned, be within his power to prevent completion of the payment: see reg 8(1B) (added by SI 2004/2353).

5 Premium Savings Bonds Regulations 1972, SI 1972/765, reg 8(1A)(a) (as added: see note 4).

6 Premium Savings Bonds Regulations 1972, SI 1972/765, reg 8(1A)(b) (as added: see note 4).

7 If the person already has such an account, the money may be paid into it: Premium Savings Bonds Regulations 1972, SI 1972/765, reg 17(1) proviso (a). In determining the amount in an account for the purposes of the provisions limiting deposits, no account is taken of sums credited under reg 17: reg 17(2).

8 See the Premium Savings Bonds Regulations 1972, SI 1972/765, reg 17(1). In the case of an account opened by the Director of Savings: (1) no sum is to be received by way of deposit for the credit of the account except in pursuance of the Premium Savings Bonds Regulations 1972, SI 1972/765; and (2) the requirement that a declaration is to be made by a depositor in the National Savings Bank does not apply with respect to any payment into the account by the Director of Savings: reg 17(1) proviso (b). As to the National Savings Bank see PARA 810 et seq.

9 Premium Savings Bonds Regulations 1972, SI 1972/765, reg 26(1). This is expressed to be subject to reg 27 (saving of rights of third parties): see the text to note 10.

10 Premium Savings Bonds Regulations 1972, SI 1972/765, reg 27.

11 For these purposes, any moneys due on bonds and not claimed by the person entitled are deemed to be unclaimed if a period of five years has elapsed since the due date, but the Director of Savings may treat any such moneys as unclaimed before the expiration of that period: Premium Savings Bonds Regulations 1972, SI 1972/765, reg 15(2).

12 See the Premium Savings Bonds Regulations 1972, SI 1972/765, reg 15(1). As to the National Debt Commissioners see PARA 1332. Where the Director of Savings makes a payment to the National Debt Commissioners in respect of any moneys due on bonds, and afterwards pays those moneys to the person entitled, the amount paid to the National Debt Commissioners in respect of those moneys must be repaid by them to the Director of Savings: reg 15(3). Any sums so paid to the National Debt Commissioners must be placed to their account of unclaimed dividends, and any repayment by them to the Director of Savings under reg 15(3) must be made out of that account: reg 15(4).

1367. Death of a bondholder.

On the death of the holder of a premium savings bond, the production of, or of a certified copy of, probate or letters of administration granted in respect of personalty comprising the bond by a court in the United Kingdom<sup>1</sup>, the Isle of Man<sup>2</sup> or the Channel Islands<sup>3</sup> is sufficient authority to the Director of Savings to pay the amount repayable or any sum payable in respect of the bond to or as directed by the person to whom the grant was made<sup>4</sup>.

On the death of the holder of bonds in respect of which the amount payable does not exceed £5,000, the Director of Savings may pay the sum repayable or any other sum payable in respect of the bonds, without the production of probate or letters of administration<sup>5</sup>, to a person appearing to him to be entitled to take out probate or letters of administration<sup>6</sup>, or, where the holder made a will<sup>7</sup>, to the person to whom, in the opinion of the Director of Savings, the amount would be payable on probate or administration with the will annexed<sup>8</sup>, or to a person who satisfies the Director of Savings that he is entitled to receive the amount or any part of it in right of his being the person who paid the funeral expenses, or a creditor, or a person having a beneficial interest in the estate<sup>9</sup>, or to some other specified person<sup>10</sup>.

1 As to the meaning of 'United Kingdom' see PARA 2 note 3.

2 As to the application of the Premium Savings Bonds Regulations 1972, SI 1972/765, to the Isle of Man see reg 33 (amended by SI 2007/1898).

3 As to the application of the Premium Savings Bonds Regulations 1972, SI 1972/765, to the Channel Islands see reg 34 (amended by SI 1986/2001; SI 2007/1898).

4 Premium Savings Bonds Regulations 1972, SI 1972/765, reg 12(1). If it subsequently appears that the grant was invalid or deficient, the payment is nevertheless deemed to have been duly made: reg 12(2). The Director of Savings may require evidence of the identity or title of a payee: see reg 29(1). He may accept as conclusive proof of the death of the holder of the bond any evidence which establishes to his satisfaction the fact that the holder has not been heard of for at least seven years: reg 29(2). 'Holder of a bond' includes any person beneficially interested at any time, whether absolutely or contingently, in the personal estate of the deceased holder of a bond: reg 29(2). As to the Director of Savings see PARA 810 et seq.

7 'Will' includes a codicil: Premium Savings Bonds Regulations 1972, SI 1972/765, reg 13(3).

8 Premium Savings Bonds Regulations 1972, SI 1972/765, reg 13(1)(b). Recipients under reg 13(1)(b) or reg 13(1)(c) (see the text and note 9) who are aged 16 or over may give valid receipts: see reg 13(2). Where a person to whom any sum may be paid under reg 13(1)(b) or reg 13(1)(c) has died before payment has been made to him, that sum or any part of it may be paid to any person to whom it might have been paid if the first mentioned person had, immediately before his death, been the holder of the bonds in question: reg 13(1) proviso. As to administration with the will annexed see EXECUTORS AND ADMINISTRATORS.

9 Premium Savings Bonds Regulations 1972, SI 1972/765, reg 13(1)(c). See further note 8.

10 As to the recipient where the deceased was a British subject whose next of kin reside abroad see the Premium Savings Bonds Regulations 1972, SI 1972/765, reg 13(1)(d). As to the recipient where the deceased was a foreign seaman or foreign subject see reg 13(1)(e), (f). As to the recipient where the estate devolves on the Crown see reg 13(1)(g). As to British citizenship generally see BRITISH NATIONALITY, IMMIGRATION AND ASYLUM vol 4(2) (2002 Reissue) PARA 7 et seq.

Payment made in accordance with the law of the holder's residence at the time of his death is deemed to have been duly made unless before making payment the Director of Savings received notice that the holder was at the time of his death domiciled elsewhere: reg 14.

1368. Documents.

The loss or destruction of any document issued by the Director of Savings in pursuance of the Premium Savings Bonds Regulations<sup>1</sup> must be notified in writing to the Director of Savings as soon as practicable by the person entitled to possession of the document<sup>2</sup>. If it appears to the Director of Savings that any document so issued has been issued in error, lost, destroyed or tampered with, or is in such a condition as to render it desirable that it should be replaced by a new document, he may issue<sup>3</sup> a new document in lieu of the old document to any person who satisfies him that he is entitled to the possession of the document<sup>4</sup>.

Where any application is required<sup>5</sup> to be made in a manner approved by the Director of Savings, the document in which the application is made must contain a full and specific statement of the particulars required to be given, and any such document which is required by the Director of Savings to be signed by any person must be signed by that person<sup>6</sup>. Where any document is required<sup>7</sup> to be signed by any person and that person is unable to write, it is sufficient if the document is marked by that person in the presence of a witness in such manner as the Director of Savings may require<sup>8</sup>. Any mistake in any document received from the Director of Savings<sup>9</sup> must, as soon as practicable, be notified in writing to the Director of Savings by the person receiving the document<sup>10</sup>. If the Director of Savings is satisfied that any transaction effected or thing done, or purporting to have been effected or done<sup>11</sup>, has been effected or done in error, he may cancel the transaction and may take all such steps as are, in his opinion, necessary to rectify the error, and may for that purpose require the surrender to him of any bond or other document<sup>12</sup>.

1 I.e. the Premium Savings Bonds Regulations 1972, SI 1972/765. Regulation 18(1) also applies to any document issued by the Postmaster General or the Director of Savings in pursuance of any regulation revoked by the Premium Savings Bonds Regulations 1972, SI 1972/765: reg 18(1). ### 1369. Obligation of secrecy.

A person employed in connection with business arising under the Premium Savings Bonds Regulations 1972<sup>1</sup> must not disclose to any person, other than the Director of Savings or a person employed in carrying the regulations into execution, the name of the purchaser or holder of any bond, the number of bonds purchased or held by any person, or the amount paid to any person in respect of a bond<sup>2</sup>. However, this does not prevent a person authorised for the purpose by the Director of Savings from disclosing information to any person in connection with an offence committed with reference to any bond or for the purpose of ascertaining whether or not an offence has been so committed nor does it prevent the Director of Savings from complying with a notice served on him under the requirement<sup>3</sup> to deliver or make available documents relating to liability of a taxpayer<sup>4</sup>.

Information such as the name of the purchaser or holder of any bond, the number of bonds purchased or held by any person and the amount paid in respect of a bond<sup>5</sup> may be disclosed in accordance with, and subject to such conditions as may be specified in, arrangements made by the Director of Savings for the purpose of enabling the person to whom the information is disclosed to provide, or assist in connection with the provision of, relevant information<sup>6</sup> to the purchaser or holder of any bond, and any such person is thereby subject to the obligation of secrecy as if he were a person employed in connection with business arising under the regulations<sup>7</sup>.

(iv) Government Annuities

1371. Power to grant annuities.

Although the National Debt Commissioners<sup>1</sup> formerly had power to grant immediate annuities for life, either as government annuities<sup>2</sup> or as savings banks annuities<sup>3</sup>, their power to do so is now limited to power to grant life annuities<sup>4</sup> by way of commutation of a savings bank insurance<sup>5</sup> or to grant an insurance or a savings bank annuity<sup>6</sup> on the surrender of a savings bank insurance or on default in the payment of premiums in respect of such an insurance<sup>7</sup>.

Immediate life annuities and savings bank annuities are charged on the National Loans Fund<sup>8</sup>, and issued out of the National Loans Fund with recourse to the Consolidated Fund<sup>9</sup> at such times as the Treasury directs<sup>10</sup>, and deferred life annuities and savings bank annuities and all savings bank insurances are charged on and paid out of the Government Annuities Investment Fund<sup>11</sup>.

1372. Commutation of savings bank insurance for annuity.

Any person entitled to a savings bank insurance<sup>1</sup> is entitled to commute it for a life annuity equivalent to the sum payable on death under the insurance on depositing during his lifetime with the National Debt Commissioners<sup>2</sup> a written direction to that effect and nominating in a form approved by them the person to whom the annuity is to be paid<sup>3</sup>.

1 As to the meaning of 'savings bank insurance' see PARA 1371 note 5.

2 As to the National Debt Commissioners see PARA 1332. See also PARA 1371 note 1.

3 Government Annuities Act 1929 s 45(1). When approved by the commissioners the annuity commences on the 6 January, 6 April, 6 July or 6 October next following the death, and is paid in respect of the quarter commencing on that date: s 45(2). For the purposes of ss 45, 46, the tables constructed under s 53 (repealed) for calculating the amounts of annuities and insurances continue in force by virtue of the Finance Act 1962 s 33(3), and may be varied, added to or substituted by virtue of s 33(4). As to the tables see the Savings Bank Annuities (Tables) Order 1954, SI 1954/1578, and the Savings Bank Annuities (Tables) Order 1955, SI 1955/419 (both amended by SI 1963/1178; SI 1968/1731; SI 1973/1407; SI 1974/1935; SI 1975/692; SI 1977/1536). ### 1374. Payment of annuities.

Government annuities are payable quarterly on 5 January, 5 April, 5 July and 5 October<sup>1</sup>. At the expiration of 30 days after proof of any death on which a life annuity expires a further quarterly payment becomes payable, if claimed within two years of the death, to the person entitled to the annuity or his personal representatives<sup>2</sup>.

Payment is made in the case of a life annuity by warrant<sup>3</sup>, except that in the case of a savings bank annuity it may instead be credited to the savings bank account of the person entitled<sup>4</sup>. Under certain conditions, warrants may be sent by post<sup>5</sup> and a large proportion are so sent.

There are special provisions as to the validity of payments to personal representatives<sup>6</sup>, and as to the payment of sums not exceeding £5,000 on death without probate or other proof of title of the personal representatives<sup>7</sup>.

Any person who receives a payment under a government life annuity after the death of the nominee, knowing him to be dead, is liable to forfeit treble the amount so received and also £500<sup>1</sup>. Any person who receives a payment under a savings bank annuity after the death of the nominee must pay the National Debt Commissioners double the amount so received, with interest at five per cent<sup>2</sup>. Any person giving a false certificate or making an untrue declaration is liable to a penalty<sup>3</sup>. It is also an offence to obtain property by fraud<sup>4</sup>. There are special provisions as to offences in Scotland, Northern Ireland, the Channel Islands and the Isle of Man<sup>5</sup>.

1377. The Public Works Loan Commissioners.

The Public Works Loan Commissioners<sup>1</sup> were constituted for the purpose of making loans to local authorities and certain other bodies<sup>2</sup> under the enactments relating to public works loans<sup>3</sup>. There are 12 commissioners<sup>4</sup>. They are appointed by Her Majesty, one being appointed to be chairman and one to be deputy chairman<sup>5</sup>, and they hold office for four years, three of them retiring each year on 1 April in that year<sup>6</sup>. The commissioners may not receive any salary, fee or emolument for their services<sup>7</sup>.

Meetings of the commissioners are convened by the secretary to the commissioners from time to time, as the business to be transacted may require<sup>8</sup>. A minute book must be kept, in which applications for loans and minutes of the proceedings of the commissioners are to be recorded<sup>9</sup>. Where minutes of a meeting of the commissioners are signed by a person purporting to be chairman of that or the next meeting, they are receivable in evidence without further proof and, unless the contrary is proved, the meeting is deemed to have been properly held<sup>10</sup>.

1 The commissioners together constitute the Public Works Loan Board, which operates within the UK Debt Management Office, an executive agency of the Treasury. As to the Treasury see PARA 3; and CONSTITUTIONAL LAW AND HUMAN RIGHTS vol 8(2) (Reissue) PARA 512 et seq.

2 As to the objects for which money may be lent see PARA 1385.

4 Public Works Loans Act 1946 s 1(2).

5 Public Works Loans Act 1946 s 1(1), (2) (s 1(1) amended by the Statute Law Revision Act 1963). A commissioner must sign a form of declaration: see the Public Works Loans Act 1875 s 4 (amended by the Public Works Loans Act 1946 Sch 2). As to the form itself see the Public Works Loans Act 1875 s 4, Sch 2.

6 Public Works Loans Act 1946 s 1(3) (amended by the Statute Law Revision Act 1963). A retired commissioner is eligible for reappointment, and a commissioner appointed to fill a casual vacancy holds office only until the person he replaces would have retired: s 1(4), (5). An act or proceeding of the commissioners is not to be questioned on account of any vacancy or vacancies in their body: Public Works Loans Act 1875 s 5(5).

If at any meeting the chairman is not present, the deputy chairman is to be the chairman of the meeting; if neither is present, the commissioners present must choose one of their number to be the chairman: reg 1(2). Three commissioners form a quorum: reg 1(3). All questions arising at any meeting are to be decided by a majority of votes, and in the event of an equality of votes the chairman of the meeting has a second or casting vote: reg 1(4).

The Public Works Loan Commissioners<sup>1</sup> may appoint or employ a secretary, solicitor, civil engineer, surveyor, and such number of officers, clerks, messengers and other persons as they may, with the consent of the Minister for the Civil Service, deem necessary<sup>2</sup>. The secretary may act for the commissioners under their direction<sup>3</sup> in conveyancing matters, in relation to mortgages<sup>4</sup> and in relation to local loans under the Public Works Loans Act 1965<sup>5</sup>, and securities for loans may be taken by him on their behalf<sup>6</sup>. Property vested in and securities given to the secretary for the time being vest automatically in his successor on his death, removal or resignation<sup>7</sup>. If the secretary is ill or absent or otherwise unable to act, the commissioners may authorise an assistant secretary to perform his functions<sup>8</sup>.

7 See the Public Works Loans Act 1875 s 7 (amended by the Crown Proceedings Act 1947 Sch 2). Receipts required to be given on behalf of the commissioners are to be given by the secretary: Local Loans (Procedure) Regulations 1968, SI 1968/458, reg 5. All documents of the commissioners are, if purporting to be signed by the secretary, deemed, until the contrary is proved, to be made or issued by the commissioners; directions given or acts done by him are deemed, until the contrary is proved, to be given or done by them; all documents may be proved by the production of a copy or extract purporting to be certified by him to be true; and no proof is required of his handwriting or official position: reg 6.

8 Public Works Loans Act 1944 s 4(1). If an assistant secretary purports to exercise powers under s 4 he is presumed, unless the contrary is shown, to do so with the commissioners' authority: s 4(2). The assistant secretary and not more than two other officers authorised by the commissioners for the purpose are competent to perform any act authorised by the Local Loans (Procedure) Regulations 1968, SI 1968/458, to be performed by the secretary: reg 7.

1379. Accounts.

The Public Works Loan Commissioners<sup>1</sup> must keep at the Bank of England such accounts as the Treasury may direct<sup>2</sup>. Two main accounts are kept: the Public Works Loans Account into which payments by borrowers from the commissioners in respect of repayments or interest are to be made<sup>3</sup>, and the Public Works Loans (Advances) Account into which money required by the commissioners for advances is paid by the National Loans Fund<sup>4</sup>.

The commissioners must, in respect of each financial year, prepare in such form and manner as the Treasury may direct an account of all loans made by them in that year, and of the sums paid or applicable in that year in or towards the discharge of the principal or interest of all loans made by them<sup>5</sup>. This account is required to be sent by the end of the November after the end of the financial year to which it relates to the Comptroller and Auditor General<sup>6</sup>, who is required to examine, certify and report on the account and lay copies of it together with his report before each House of Parliament<sup>7</sup>.

1 As to the Public Works Loans Commissioners see PARA 1377.

2 Public Works Loans Act 1875 s 43 (amended by the National Loans Act 1968 Sch 6 Pt II). Every such account is deemed to be a public account: Public Works Loans Act 1875 s 43 (as so amended). ### 1380. Returns.

The Public Works Loan Commissioners<sup>1</sup> must annually cause to be made out up to the end of every financial year<sup>2</sup> a report of their transactions during the year, and the report must contain or have annexed to it the prescribed particulars<sup>3</sup> respecting money issued to and loans granted by them, and the execution of their duties, and such other particulars as they think fit<sup>4</sup>.

1 As to the Public Works Loans Commissioners see PARA 1377.

2 'Financial year' means the year ending the 31 March: Public Works Loans Act 1875 s 51.

3 Money required by the commissioners is issued out of the National Loans Fund: see PARAS 1334, 1383. As to the National Loans Fund see PARA 1334; and CONSTITUTIONAL LAW AND HUMAN RIGHTS vol 8(2) (Reissue) PARA 727 et seq.

4 See the Public Works Loans Act 1875 s 5(3). The particulars must include a statement of any difference that may have arisen between the commissioners and any public department regarding the grant of any loan or the construction of any Act relating to loans by them: s 5(3). The report must be transmitted to the Treasury and laid by the Treasury before both Houses of Parliament: s 5(3) (amended by the National Loans Act 1968 Sch 6 Pt II). As to the Treasury see PARA 3; and CONSTITUTIONAL LAW AND HUMAN RIGHTS vol 8(2) (Reissue) PARA 512 et seq. ### 1381. Regulations.

The Public Works Loan Commissioners<sup>1</sup> have power with Treasury approval to make regulations for carrying into effect the Public Works Loans Act 1875<sup>2</sup>. The fees to be paid by applicants for loans are no longer governed by these regulations, but by regulations made by the Treasury after consultation with the commissioners<sup>3</sup>.

1 As to the Public Works Loans Commissioners see PARA 1377.

2 See the Public Works Loans Act 1875 s 41. The regulations may relate in particular to the commissioners' quorum and proceedings, the authentication of documents etc, application for loans, forms to be used and the relations between the commissioners and the Bank of England: see s 41 (amended by virtue of the Local Authorities Loans Act 1945 s 2(3); and by the National Loans Act 1968 Sch 6 Pt II). As to the Bank of England see PARA 793 et seq. Regulations must be submitted for the approval of the Treasury; notification of their making and the place where copies may be purchased must be published in the London Gazette; and copies must be laid before both Houses of Parliament, normally before the regulations come into operation: Public Works Loans Act 1875 s 41 (amended by the Statute Law (Repeals) Act 1986); Statutory Instruments Act 1946 ss 4(3), 12(2); and see STATUTES. Regulations may be rescinded, altered or added to: Public Works Loans Act 1875 s 41. As to the Treasury see PARA 3; and CONSTITUTIONAL LAW AND HUMAN RIGHTS vol 8(2) (Reissue) PARA 512 et seq. As to laying documents before Parliament see the Laying of Documents before Parliament (Interpretation) Act 1948; and PARLIAMENT vol 34 (Reissue) PARA 942; STATUTES.

The regulations in force under s 41 are the Local Loans (Procedure) Regulations 1968, SI 1968/458 (amended by SI 1991/1139; SI 1992/1565). As to meetings of the commissioners see the Local Loans (Procedure) Regulations 1968, SI 1968/458, reg 1; and PARA 1377. As to applications for loans see reg 2; and PARA 1384. As to payment of loans see reg 3; and PARA 1379. As to repayment of loans see reg 4; and PARA 1379. As to receipts and discharges see reg 5; and PARA 1378. As to powers of the secretary see reg 6; and PARA 1378. As to powers of other officers see reg 7; and PARA 1378.

In the Public Works Loans Act 1875, 'prescribed' means prescribed by regulations made under s 41 with the approval of the Treasury: s 51. Power to prescribe forms of security is conferred by s 32, but forms prescribed under s 32 are not printed in the statutory instruments series.

3 See the Local Authorities Loans Act 1945 s 2(3). Regulations made under the Local Authorities Loans Act 1945 must be laid before Parliament and are subject to annulment in pursuance of a resolution of either House of Parliament: see s 9(1), (2) (s 9(1) amended by the Statute Law Revision Act 1953); the Statutory Instruments Act 1946 ss 4, 5; and STATUTES. ## (ii) Loans

1384. The granting of loans.

In considering whether to make a loan the Public Works Loan Commissioners<sup>1</sup> must have regard to the sufficiency of the security<sup>2</sup>. However, they are no longer required in considering the propriety of a loan to justify it on the basis of the public benefit which could be expected on its application<sup>3</sup>. The purposes for which the commissioners may make a loan are specified in the National Loans Act 1968<sup>4</sup>. A limit is imposed on the total amount of the loans which may be made by the commissioners<sup>5</sup>.

The power of the Public Works Loan Commissioners to make loans<sup>6</sup> includes the power to enter into undertakings to make loans<sup>7</sup>.

Applications for loans must be in the form required by the commissioners, and the commissioners may require applicants to provide such information as they think necessary for their consideration of the applications<sup>8</sup>.

2 As to the security for repayment of loans see PARA 1388.

3 See the Public Works Loans Act 1964 s 3(a) (repealed).

4 See the National Loans Act 1968 s 3(11), Sch 4; and PARA 1385.

5 The aggregate of: (1) any commitments of the commissioners outstanding in respect of undertakings entered into by them to grant local loans; and (2) any amount outstanding in respect of the principal of any local loans, must not at any time exceed £55,000 million or such other lower or higher sum, not exceeding £70,000 million, as the Treasury may from time to time specify by order made by statutory instrument: National Loans Act 1968 s 4(1) (s 4 substituted by the Finance Act 1984 s 125(1); and the National Loans Act 1961 s 4(1) amended by the Finance Act 1990 s 130). ### 1385. Objects for which money may be lent.

The Public Works Loan Commissioners<sup>1</sup> may lend money<sup>2</sup> to any local authority<sup>3</sup> for any purpose for which the authority has power to borrow whether by virtue of any enactment or otherwise<sup>4</sup>. The commissioners also have powers to lend money for certain other statutory purposes<sup>5</sup>, but beyond this the commissioners' lending powers extend no further.

1 As to the Public Works Loans Commissioners see PARA 1377.

2 The loans are known as 'local loans': National Loans Act 1968 s 3(12). See also CONSTITUTIONAL LAW AND HUMAN RIGHTS vol 8(2) (Reissue) PARA 736.

3 'Local authority' means:

- 15 (1) in relation to England and Wales: (a) a billing authority, or a precepting authority as defined in the Local Government Finance Act 1992 s 69 (see RATING AND COUNCIL TAX vol 39(1) (Reissue) PARA 821; LOCAL GOVERNMENT vol 29(1) (Reissue) PARA 524); (b) a fire and rescue authority in Wales constituted by a scheme under the Fire and Rescue Services Act 2004 s 2 or a scheme to which s 4 applies (see FIRE SERVICES); (c) a levying body within the meaning of the Local Government Finance Act 1988 s 74 or a body as regards which s 75 applies (see LOCAL GOVERNMENT vol 29(1) (Reissue) PARA 530); (d) a functional body within the meaning of the Greater London Authority Act 1999 (see LONDON GOVERNMENT vol 29(2) (Reissue) PARA 213); and (e) the Greater London Magistrates' Courts Authority (see LONDON GOVERNMENT vol 29(2) (Reissue) PARA 616) (National Loans Act 1968 s 3(11) (amended by the Finance Act 1984 s 125(2); National Loans Act 1968 s 3, Sch 4 para 1(a) (substituted by SI 1990/776; and amended by the Local Government Finance Act 1992 Sch 13 para 26; the Access to Justice Act 1999 Sch 12 para 2, Sch 15 Pt V; the Greater London Authority Act 1999 Sch 34 Pt I; the Courts Act 2003 Sch 8 para 127, Sch 10; and by the Fire and Rescue Services Act 2004 Sch 1 para 22));
- 16 (2) any port health authority or joint board constituted by an order under the Public Health Act 1936 or any enactment repealed by it (National Loans Act 1968 Sch 4 para 1(b)).

4 National Loans Act 1968 Sch 4 para 1. As to the borrowing powers of local authorities see LOCAL GOVERNMENT vol 29(1) (Reissue) PARA 594 et seq.

1386. Fees for and interest on loans.

The fees to be paid to the Public Works Loan Commissioners<sup>1</sup> by persons to whom they make loans are fixed by Treasury regulations<sup>2</sup>. The rates of interest to be charged on loans made by the commissioners are determined by the Treasury<sup>3</sup>.

1 As to the Public Works Loans Commissioners see PARA 1377.

2 See the Local Authorities Loans Act 1945 s 2(3). As to the regulations see the Public Works Loans (Fees) Regulations 1991, SI 1991/1539 (amended by SI 1992/1566; SI 1997/985). As to the Treasury see PARA 3; and CONSTITUTIONAL LAW AND HUMAN RIGHTS vol 8(2) (Reissue) PARA 512 et seq.

3 See the National Loans Act 1968 s 3(2). As to the determination of the rate of interest see s 5; and CONSTITUTIONAL LAW AND HUMAN RIGHTS vol 8(2) (Reissue) PARA 736. References in the Housing (Financial Provisions) Act 1958 Sch 3 para 7(1) proviso (repealed) and the Local Authorities (Land) Act 1963 s 3(4) (see LOCAL GOVERNMENT vol 69 (2009) PARA 522) to the rate of interest in respect of any particular class of loans to local authorities, and references in any other enactment passed, or in any document made, before 27 February 1964 (ie the date of passing of the Public Works Loans Act 1964) to the rate fixed by the Treasury under the Public Works Loans Act 1897 s 1 (repealed), in respect of loans of a particular class are subject to the National Loans Act 1968 s 6(2): s 6(1). Where the time in question falls after 31 March 1968 any such reference to the rate at that time is to be construed as a reference to the rate at that time determined by the Treasury in respect of local loans of the class in question made on the security of local rates or, where more than one rate is so applicable, to such one of those rates as the Treasury may direct generally or with respect to any particular enactment or document: s 6(2). The directions made are to be published in the London Gazette: s 6(2). For the purposes of s 6(2), 'local rate' means any rate levied or assessed, the proceeds of which are applicable to public local purposes and which is levied on the basis of a valuation of property, and includes any sum which, although obtained in the first instance by a precept, certificate or other instrument requiring payment from some authority or officer, is or can be ultimately raised out of the rate (s 6(3)(a)); and 'security of local rates' includes a security guaranteed by local rate (s 6(3)(b)).

MONEY/(5) LOANS BY PUBLIC WORKS LOAN COMMISSIONERS/(ii) Loans/1387. Time for repayment of loans.

1387. Time for repayment of loans.

Loans granted by the Public Works Loan Commissioners<sup>1</sup> are to be made repayable within 50 years or such other period as may be authorised by a special Act<sup>2</sup> relating to the loan<sup>3</sup> or, in the case of a loan to a local authority for any purpose<sup>4</sup>, by the Act authorising the authority to borrow for that purpose<sup>5</sup>. Where a loan is made repayable within less than the full permissible period the commissioners may extend the time for repayment within that period<sup>6</sup>.

The Treasury has power on the recommendation of the commissioners to postpone for not more than five years the payment of instalments of principal and interest, or either, in respect of a loan granted by the commissioners<sup>7</sup>. The commissioners have power to accept payment of the whole or any part of the principal and interest of any loan or other money secured by a mortgage before it falls due<sup>8</sup>; and if an individual liable as principal or surety in respect of principal or interest of any loan becomes bankrupt or insolvent, or enters into any composition or arrangement with his creditors, or has his affairs liquidated by arrangement, or, in the case of a company so liable, is wound up, the whole loan becomes due immediately unless in the case of a surety the commissioners think fit to accept some other surety<sup>9</sup>.

1 As to the Public Works Loans Commissioners see PARA 1377.

2 Ie any Act passed before the Public Works Loans Act 1875 which authorises the commissioners to lend money for the purposes of any work mentioned in s 9, Sch 1 (repealed), or any Act passed after that Act which authorises the commissioners to lend money for any purpose: s 51. As to the objects for which money may be lent see PARA 1385.

3 See the Public Works Loans Act 1875 s 11 (amended by the Public Works Loans Act 1911 s 4; and the Public Works Loans Act 1964 Sch 3). Where no period is authorised by a special Act relating to the loan, the period of 50 years may in special circumstances be extended by the Treasury on the recommendation of the commissioners: see the Public Works Loans Act 1875 s 11 (as so amended). As to the Treasury see PARA 3; and CONSTITUTIONAL LAW AND HUMAN RIGHTS vol 8(2) (Reissue) PARA 512 et seq.

4 As to the commissioners' general power to lend to a local authority for any purpose for which it has power to borrow see PARA 1385.

5 See the Local Authorities Loans Act 1945 s 2(2) (amended by the National Loans Act 1968 Sch 6 Pt II). As to the borrowing powers of a local authority see LOCAL GOVERNMENT vol 29(1) (Reissue) PARA 594 et seq.

6 Public Works Loans Act 1875 s 11 (as amended: see note 3). Before granting an extension the commissioners must be satisfied as to the sufficiency of the security for the loan: s 11 (as so amended). As to security for repayment of loans see PARA 1388. The expiration of the time fixed for repayment of a loan does not affect the commissioners' power of enforcing payment of sums due in respect of it: s 34.

7 Public Works Loans Act 1875 s 37. The postponement may be made on such terms as to the completion and improvement of the work for which the loan was made and the ultimate payment of the principal and interest as the Treasury may authorise on the recommendation of the commissioners: see s 37. In the case of a loan to a local authority, the commissioners and the authority may agree that it is to be a condition of the postponement of any interest payment that the interest postponed be added to the principal of the loan: see the Local Authorities Loans Act 1945 s 4(3). Nothing in any enactment requiring the instalments of repayment of a loan to a local authority to be equal and periodical is to prevent these arrangements: see s 4(2).

8 Public Works Loans Act 1875 s 29; Public Works Loans Act 1965 s 2(5) (amended by the Local Government and Housing Act 1989 Sch 11 para 6); Public Works Loans Act 1967 s 2(2)(b), (3). The commissioners may release or convey the security for the loan to the person making the payment: see the Public Works Loans Act 1875 s 29.

MONEY/(5) LOANS BY PUBLIC WORKS LOAN COMMISSIONERS/(ii) Loans/1388. Security for repayment of loans.

1388. Security for repayment of loans.

Before advancing any money in respect of a loan, the Public Works Loan Commissioners<sup>1</sup> must take security<sup>2</sup> for its repayment with interest<sup>3</sup> unless the borrower is a relevant authority under the Public Works Loans Act 1965<sup>4</sup>. The security, where required, must consist of the security authorised by the special Act<sup>5</sup> relating to the loan, or, if none is so authorised, of a mortgage of property<sup>6</sup> or of a rate<sup>7</sup>, or of both property and a rate<sup>8</sup>. Personal security must also be taken, unless the commissioners think fit to dispense with such security in a case in which in their opinion the mortgaged property or rate is sufficient security for the payment of the principal and interest of the loan within the stipulated period<sup>9</sup>.

If default is made in any payment to the commissioners in respect of a loan they may enforce the security for the loan: (1) in the case of a mortgage or charge on property, by taking possession of<sup>10</sup>, selling, mortgaging or letting<sup>11</sup> the property or any part of it<sup>12</sup>; (2) in the case of a charge on any rate, by assuming by notice in writing the powers of the mortgagor as to the making and levying of the rate<sup>13</sup>; or (3) in the case of any personal security, by taking the appropriate proceedings<sup>14</sup>. If the commissioners exercise the powers mentioned under head (1) or head (2) above, neither they nor their agents are liable to account for any money other than that which they actually receive out of the property or rate<sup>15</sup>, and they are required to pay their net receipts only into the National Loans Fund<sup>16</sup>.

Where the borrower is a relevant authority<sup>17</sup>, the commissioners may enter into a loan agreement with it<sup>18</sup> and so long as any part of the principal of and interest on the loan remains outstanding, the loan becomes a charge on all the revenues of the borrowing authority<sup>19</sup>, and such a charge ranks equally with any other charges on these revenues, subject to any provision to the contrary made under any other enactment<sup>20</sup>.

- 1 As to the Public Works Loans Commissioners see PARA 1377.
- 2 'Security' includes a mortgage; and 'mortgage' includes a charge and any instrument in the nature of a mortgage or charge: Public Works Loans Act 1875 s 51. As to mortgage generally see MORTGAGE vol 77 (2010) PARA 101 et seq.
- 3 Public Works Loans Act 1875 s 12. This provision does not apply to a loan secured by an automatic charge: Public Works Loans Act 1965 s 2(5), Schedule para 5. 'Automatic charge' means a charge imposed for securing a loan made in pursuance of an agreement to which s 2 (see the text and notes 17-20) applies: see s 2(5).
- 4 See the Public Works Loans Act 1965 s 2(1). 'Relevant authority' means: (1) a billing authority or a precepting authority as defined in the Local Government Finance Act 1992 s 69 (see RATING AND COUNCIL TAX vol 39(1B) (Reissue) PARAS 5, 229; LOCAL GOVERNMENT vol 29(1) (Reissue) PARA 524); (2) a fire and rescue authority in Wales constituted by a scheme under the Fire and Rescue Services Act 2004 s 2 or a scheme to which s 4 applies (see FIRE SERVICES); (3) a levying body within the meaning of the Local Government Finance Act 1988 s 74 or a body as regards which s 75 applies (see LOCAL GOVERNMENT vol 29(1) (Reissue) PARA 530); (4) a functional body within the meaning of the Greater London Authority Act 1999 (see LONDON GOVERNMENT vol 29(2) (Reissue) PARA 213); and (5) the Greater London Magistrates' Courts Authority (see LONDON GOVERNMENT vol 29(2) (Reissue) PARA 616) (Public Works Loans Act 1965 s 2(1)(a) (amended by SI 1990/776; the Local Government Finance Act 1992 Sch 13 para 26; the Access to Justice Act 1999 Sch 12 para 2, Sch 15 Pt V; the Greater London Authority Act 1999 Sch 34 Pt I; the Courts Act 2003 Sch 8 para 127, Sch 10; and by the Fire and Rescue Services Act 2004 Sch 1 para 22)). Any relevant authority which does not otherwise have power to raise money by means of an agreement with the commissioners which gives rise to an automatic charge has the power to raise money by those means: Public Works Loans Act 1967 s 2(1).
- 5 As to the meaning of 'special Act' see PARA 1387 note 2.
- 6 Any toll, due, rent, imposition and other sum not being a rate (ie within the definition in note 7) is deemed to be property for this purpose: Public Works Loans Act 1875 s 51.
- 7 'Rate' means a rate, cess or assessment the proceeds of which are applicable to public local purposes and leviable on the basis of a valuation of property, and includes any sum which, although obtained in the first instance by a precept, certificate or other instrument requiring payment from some authority or officer, is or can be ultimately raised out of a rate: see the Public Works Loans Act 1875 s 51.
- 8 See the Public Works Loans Act 1875 s 12. See also s 18 (charge on property and priority of loans), s 19 (charge on rate of loan), s 30 (discharge of security and reversion of property on repayment of loan), s 32 (security to be in such form as may be prescribed by the commissioners under s 41 (see PARA 1381)), s 35 (security for works not commenced or completed at time of loan), s 38 (commissioners' power to accept substituted security), and s 39 (commissioners' power to concur in dispositions of mortgaged property). All money borrowed by a local authority together with any interest on the money borrowed, is charged indifferently on all revenues of the authority and all securities created by a local authority rank equally without any priority: Local Government Act 2003 s 13(3), (4); and see LOCAL GOVERNMENT vol 29(1) (Reissue) PARA 558 et seq. References to mortgagors or borrowers in the Public Works Loans Act 1875 include, if need be, their successors, heirs, executors, administrators and assigns and persons claiming through or under them: s 51.

- 12 See the Public Works Loans Act 1875 s 21. See also s 28 (application of money arising from taking possession, lease, sale, mortgage etc). As to the general powers and liabilities of mortgagees see MORTGAGE vol 77 (2010) PARA 101 et seq.
- 13 See the Public Works Loans Act 1875 s 23 (which also provides for application of money levied).
- 14 See the Public Works Loans Act 1875 s 33 (amended by the Statute Law Revision Act 1898; the Courts Act 1971 Sch 11 Pt IV; and by the Statute Law (Repeals) Act 2004). The special procedure set out in the Public Works Loans Act 1875 s 33 is now superseded: see the Crown Proceedings Act 1947 ss 13, 15, s 23(1), Sch 1; and CROWN PROCEEDINGS AND CROWN PRACTICE vol 12(1) (Reissue) PARA 107 et seq. The commissioners are an authorised government department for the purpose of taking proceedings: see PARA 1382.

15 Public Works Loans Act 1875 s 24. Apart from s 24 the commissioners would be liable to account also for money which, but for their wilful neglect or default, they might have received: see Gaskell v Gosling [1896] 1 QB 669 at 691, CA; and MORTGAGE vol 77 (2010) PARA 101 et seq.

17 Ie other than a relevant authority authorised to borrow money under the Local Government Act 2003 s 1 or s 19, Sch 1 para 2: see the Public Works Loans Act 1965 s 2(3) (amended by the Local Government and Housing Act 1989 Sch 11 para 6; the Local Government Act 2003 Sch 7 para 2(a); and by SI 2004/533). As to the meaning of 'relevant authority' see note 4.

18 See the Public Works Loans Act 1965 s 2(1) (as amended: see note 4).

19 See the Public Works Loans Act 1965 s 2(3) (as amended: see note 17). This provision does not apply to any authority in the case of which some other enactment is in force which of itself imposes a charge for securing loans of all descriptions on all the revenues of the authority: see the Public Works Loans Act 1967 s 2(2) (amended by the Local Government and Housing Act 1989 Sch 11 para 7; the Local Government Act 2003 Sch 7 para 3; and by SI 2004/533).

(i) The Exchange Equalisation Account

1389. Constitution of the Exchange Equalisation Account.

The Exchange Equalisation Account is an account under Treasury control<sup>1</sup> to which is issued out of the National Loans Fund, at such times and in such manner as the Treasury directs, such sums as the Treasury may determine<sup>2</sup>. If at any time the Treasury is of opinion that the assets in sterling of the Exchange Equalisation Account are in excess of what is required for the purposes of the account<sup>3</sup>, the Treasury may direct that the excess be paid into the National Loans Fund<sup>4</sup>.

For each financial year in which the Exchange Equalisation Account operates the Treasury must prepare, in such form and on such basis as it prescribes, accounts in relation to the transactions, assets and liabilities of the Exchange Equalisation Account, and send the accounts to the Comptroller and Auditor General not later than 30 November of the financial year following that to which the accounts relate<sup>5</sup>. The Comptroller and Auditor General must examine and certify the accounts, issue a report on them and send the certified accounts and the report to the Treasury not later than 15 January of that financial year<sup>6</sup>. The Treasury must lay the certified accounts and the report before each House of Parliament not later than 31 January of that financial year<sup>7</sup>.

In certifying the accounts<sup>8</sup> the Comptroller and Auditor General must state whether or not it is his opinion, having regard to his examination of the accounts, that:

- 133 (1) the resources of the Exchange Equalisation Account have been used<sup>9</sup> in accordance with the provisions of the Exchange Equalisation Account Act 1979<sup>10</sup>;
 134 (2) the transactions of the Exchange Equalisation Account are in accordance with any relevant authority<sup>11</sup>; and 135 (3) the accounts have been prepared in the form, and on the basis, prescribed<sup>12</sup> under these provisions<sup>13</sup>.

1 Exchange Equalisation Account Act 1979 s 1(1), (2). The account was originally established under the Finance Act 1932 s 24 (repealed) after the United Kingdom abandoned the gold standard. As to the Treasury see PARA 3; and CONSTITUTIONAL LAW AND HUMAN RIGHTS vol 8(2) (Reissue) PARA 512 et seq. As to the meaning of 'United Kingdom' see PARA 2 note 3.

2 See the Exchange Equalisation Account Act 1979 s 2(1). Sums so issued and for the time being outstanding constitute a liability of the account to the National Loans Fund: see s 2(2). As to the National Loans Fund see PARA 1334; and CONSTITUTIONAL LAW AND HUMAN RIGHTS vol 8(2) (Reissue) PARA 727 et seq.

3 As to the purposes of the Exchange Equalisation Account see PARA 1390.

4 Exchange Equalisation Account Act 1979 s 2(3).

5 Exchange Equalisation Account Act 1979 s 4(1), (2) (s 4 substituted by the Finance Act 2000 s 24(7)). The Treasury may by order made by statutory instrument amend any of the dates for the time being specified in the Exchange Equalisation Account 1979 s 4(2)-(4) (see the text and notes 6, 7): s 4(6) (as so substituted). Before making such an order the Treasury must consult the Comptroller and Auditor General: s 4(7) (as so substituted). A statutory instrument containing an order under s 4(6) is subject to annulment in pursuance of a resolution of the House of Commons: s 4(8) (as so substituted). At the date at which this volume states the law no such order had been made. As to the Comptroller and Auditor General see CONSTITUTIONAL LAW AND HUMAN RIGHTS vol 8(2) (Reissue) PARA 724 et seq.

6 Exchange Equalisation Account Act 1979 s 4(3) (as substituted: see note 5). See note 5.

7 Exchange Equalisation Account Act 1979 s 4(4) (as substituted: see note 5). See note 5.

8 Ie under the Exchange Equalisation Account Act 1979 s 4(3): see the text to note 6.

9 A reference to the use of resources is a reference to their expenditure, consumption or reduction in value: Exchange Equalisation Account Act 1979 s 4(9) (as substituted: see note 5).

10 Exchange Equalisation Account Act 1979 s 4(5)(a) (as substituted: see note 5).

11 Exchange Equalisation Account Act 1979 s 4(5)(b) (as substituted: see note 5).

1390. Purposes for which the Exchange Equalisation Account is to be used.

The Exchange Equalisation Account is to be used for:

- 136 (1) checking undue fluctuations in the exchange value of sterling<sup>1</sup>;

- 137 (2) securing the conservation or disposition in the national interest of the means of making payments abroad<sup>2</sup>;
- 138 (3) payment of charges to the International Monetary Fund<sup>3</sup>; and
- 139 (4) carrying out any of the functions of the United Kingdom government under the Articles of Agreement of the International Monetary Fund which relate to special drawing rights<sup>4</sup>.

The Treasury<sup>5</sup> may cause any funds in the Exchange Equalisation Account to be invested in securities<sup>6</sup> or in the purchase of gold<sup>7</sup>, or in the acquisition of special drawing rights under the Articles of Agreement of the International Monetary Fund<sup>8</sup>.

2 Exchange Equalisation Account Act 1979 s 1(3)(b).

3 Exchange Equalisation Account Act 1979 s 1(3)(c). This is the purpose specified in the International Monetary Fund Act 1979 s 1(3): see PARA 1391. As to the International Monetary Fund see PARA 1391.

4 Exchange Equalisation Account Act 1979 s 1(3)(d). Any special drawing rights received or disposed of by the United Kingdom government must, in the case of receipts, be treated as assets of the Exchange Equalisation Account and, in the case of disposals, be transferred from the Exchange Equalisation Account: s 3(2). As to the meaning of 'United Kingdom' see PARA 2 note 3.

5 As to the Treasury see PARA 3; and CONSTITUTIONAL LAW AND HUMAN RIGHTS vol 8(2) (Reissue) PARA 512 et seq.

6 'Securities' includes securities and assets in currency of any country and in whatever form held: Exchange Equalisation Account Act 1979 s 3(3). The reference to currency of any country includes a reference to units of account defined by reference to more than one currency: s 3(4) (added by the Finance Act 1986 s 113).

(ii) International Financial Institutions

1391. International financial organisations.

The International Bank for Reconstruction and Development<sup>1</sup>, the International Monetary Fund<sup>2</sup>, the International Finance Corporation<sup>3</sup> and the International Development Association<sup>4</sup> are international financial and economic institutions which have been established by treaty and of which the United Kingdom is a member<sup>5</sup>.

Charges payable to the International Monetary Fund by the United Kingdom government<sup>6</sup> are to be paid out of the Exchange Equalisation Account<sup>7</sup>. The Treasury is empowered to lend to the International Monetary Fund in accordance with the International Monetary Fund's borrowing arrangements<sup>8</sup>. Subscriptions, compensation and other payments by the government to the International Monetary Fund may be paid out of the National Loans Fund<sup>9</sup> or by the Secretary of State out of money provided by Parliament<sup>10</sup>. Receipts from the International Monetary Fund, other than sums received by reason of the operation of the Exchange Equalisation Account, are to be paid into the National Loans Fund<sup>11</sup>. Exchange contracts<sup>12</sup> which involve the currency of any member of the International Monetary Fund and which are contrary to the exchange control regulations of such member maintained or imposed consistently with the fund agreement are unenforceable in the territory of any other member of the fund<sup>13</sup>. Such contracts will therefore be unenforceable in the United Kingdom if they contravene the laws of other countries which are members of the fund<sup>14</sup>.

The Secretary of State has power to make payment of initial subscriptions and other subscriptions and payments to a multilateral development bank<sup>15</sup>.

The Treasury may, in such manner and on such conditions as it thinks fit, undertake to indemnify the Bank of England in respect of its financial assistance to the central bank of any overseas country<sup>16</sup>. The sums required or received in pursuance of any such undertaking are to be paid out of, or into, the Consolidated Fund<sup>17</sup>.

1 The International Bank for Reconstruction and Development was established by an agreement drawn up at the United Nations Monetary and Financial Conference held at Bretton Woods, New Hampshire, USA in July 1944 (see the Bretton Woods Agreement Act 1945 preamble (repealed)) in order to assist in the reconstruction and development of members' territories by facilitating the investment of capital for productive purposes: see the Articles of Agreement of the International Bank for Reconstruction and Development (Washington, 27 December 1945; TS 21 (1946); Cmd 6885), art I. As to the immunities and privileges of the International Bank for Reconstruction and Development see PARA 1392.

2 The International Monetary Fund was established at the same time as the International Bank for Reconstruction and Development (see note 1). For the fund's functions in relation to currency exchange and balance of payments see the Articles of Agreement of the International Bank for Reconstruction and Development. For the Treasury's power to create and issue to the fund certain non-interest-bearing and non-negotiable notes or other obligations see the International Monetary Fund Act 1979 s 4(1). Sums payable under these notes and obligations are charged on the National Loans Fund with recourse to the Consolidated Fund: s 4(2). As to the National Loans Fund see PARA 1334; and CONSTITUTIONAL LAW AND HUMAN RIGHTS vol 8(2) (Reissue) PARA 727 et seq. As to the Consolidated Fund see PARA 1334; and CONSTITUTIONAL LAW AND HUMAN RIGHTS vol 8(2) (Reissue) PARA 711 et seq; PARLIAMENT vol 78 (2010) PARA 1028 et seq. As to the Treasury see PARA 3; and CONSTITUTIONAL LAW AND HUMAN RIGHTS vol 8(2) (Reissue) PARA 512 et seq.

3 The International Finance Corporation, which is an affiliate of the International Bank for Reconstruction and Development (see note 1), was established to encourage the development of productive private enterprise, particularly in the less developed countries: see the Articles of Agreement of the International Finance Corporation (Washington, 25 May 1955; TS 37 (1961); Cmd 1377), art I. As to the immunities and privileges of the International Finance Corporation see PARA 1392.

4 The purpose of the International Development Association, which is an affiliate of the International Bank for Reconstruction and Development, and is for operational purposes one with it, is to promote economic development, increase productivity and raise standards of living in less developed areas: see the Articles of Agreement of the International Development Association (Washington, 29 January 1960; TS 1 (1961); Cmd 1244), art I. See also the International Development Act 2002; and the International Development Association (Eleventh Replenishment) Order 1998, SI 1998/1149. As to the immunities and privileges of the International Development Association see PARA 1392.

5 See INTERNATIONAL RELATIONS LAW vol 61 (2010) PARA 533. As to the meaning of 'United Kingdom' see PARA 2 note 3.

6 I.e. charges payable under the Articles of Agreement of the International Monetary Fund and of the International Bank for Reconstruction and Development (Final Act of the Bretton Woods Conference) (Washington, 27 December 1945; TS 21 (1946); Cmd 6885), art V s 8.

7 See the International Monetary Fund Act 1979 s 1(3). As to the Exchange Equalisation Account see PARAS 1389-1390.

As to the Secretary of State's requirement to report annually on total expenditure on international aid and the breakdown of such aid see PARA 1394.

8 See the International Monetary Fund Act 1979 s 2(1) (substituted by the International Monetary Arrangements Act 1983 s 1; and amended SI 1997/1611). The aggregate amount outstanding in respect of the principal of loans must not exceed 2577 million special drawing rights: International Monetary Fund Act 1979 s 2(1) (as so substituted). For these purposes, a loan under the International Monetary Fund Act 1979 s 2, or repayment of such a loan, in any currency is to be treated as a loan (or repayment) of the amount of special drawing rights which for the purposes of the fund's borrowing arrangements is the value of the loan or repayment: s 2(1A) (added by the International Monetary Arrangements Act 1983 s 1). As to the power of the Treasury to raise or further raise the limit on lending see the International Monetary Fund Act 1979 s 2(2), (3). Loans are to be made out of the National Loans Fund: s 2(4). The 'fund's borrowing arrangements' are the arrangements made by the International Monetary Fund for enabling it to borrow the currency of any member of the fund taking part in the arrangements: s 2(5).

9 See the International Monetary Fund Act 1979 s 1(1). This provision enables payment of:

- 17 (1) subscriptions in the event of increases in the United Kingdom's quota under the Articles of Agreement of the International Monetary Fund and of the International Bank for Reconstruction and Development, art III s 3(a) (International Monetary Fund Act 1979 s 1(1)(a));
- 18 (2) sums payable in respect of the maintenance of value of assets under the Articles of Agreement of the International Monetary Fund and of the International Bank for Reconstruction and Development, art V s 11 (International Monetary Fund Act 1979 s 1(1)(b));
- 19 (3) sums required to implement the guarantee against loss on the failure or default of a designated depository required by the Articles of Agreement of the International Monetary Fund and of the International Bank for Reconstruction and Development, art XIII s 3 (International Monetary Fund Act 1979 s 1(1)(c)); and
- 20 (4) compensation required to be paid to the International Monetary Fund or any member of it on withdrawal or liquidation under the Articles of Agreement of the International Monetary Fund and of the International Bank for Reconstruction and Development, Sch J or Sch K (International Monetary Fund Act 1979 s 1(1)(d)).

The United Kingdom's subscription to the International Monetary Fund was increased to 10,738.5 million special drawing rights by the International Monetary Fund (Increase in Subscription) Order 1998, SI 1998/1854.

10 As to the power to make payments relating to international development see the International Development Act 2002; PARAS 1392-1393; and COMMONWEALTH vol 13 (2009) PARA 811; CONSTITUTIONAL LAW AND HUMAN RIGHTS vol 8(2) (Reissue) PARA 462. As to the Secretary of State see PARA 3.

11 See the International Monetary Fund Act 1979 s 3.

12 'Exchange contract' is not defined for this purpose: Kahler v Midland Bank Ltd [1948] 1 All ER 811 at 819, CA; affd [1950] AC 24, [1949] 2 All ER 621, HL. It should be liberally construed having regard to the objects of the Bretton Woods Agreements to protect the currencies of member states: Sharif v Azad [1967] 1 QB 605 at 618, [1966] 3 All ER 785 at 789-790, CA, per Diplock LJ. The wider obiter definition of Lord Denning MR in that case has not been followed: see eg Wilson, Smithett and Cope Ltd v Terruzzi [1976] QB 683 at 700, [1975] 2 All ER 649 at 662 per Kerr J; affd [1976] QB 683 at 709, [1976] 1 All ER 817, CA. It has been held to mean a contract to exchange the currency of one country for the currency of another: Wilson, Smithett and Cope Ltd v Terruzzi at 714 and 822 per Lord Denning MR, at 715 and 824 per Ormrod LJ, and at 722 and 829 per Shaw LJ (following Re United Railways of Havana and Regla Warehouses Ltd, Tomkinson v First Pennsylvania Banking and Trust Co [1961] AC 1007 at 1059, [1960] 2 All ER 332 at 350, HL, per Lord Radcliffe). For a case where the court found an exchange contract, though disguised, see The American Accord [1979] 1 Lloyd's Rep 267 sub nom United City Merchants (Investments) Ltd and Glass Fibres and Equipment Ltd v Royal Bank of Canada [1983] 1 AC 168, [1982] 2 All ER 720, HL ('exchange contract' included documentary credit used to finance illegal contract of sale which was partly a monetary transaction in disguise to exchange Peruvian currency for American dollars); Mansouri v Singh [1986] 2 All ER 619, [1986] 1 WLR 1393, CA (cheque part of unenforceable exchange contract).

As to the repeal of the exchange control legislation in the United Kingdom see PARA 1395.

13 See the Bretton Woods Agreements Order in Council 1946, SR & O 1946/36, art 3, Schedule art VIII s 2(b) (amended by SI 1977/825); and Ispahani v Bank Melli Iran (1997) Times, 29 December, CA. Apart from these provisions, the English court will regard a contractual obligation as invalidated or discharged by exchange control legislation if that legislation is part of the proper law of the contract or part of the law of the place of performance (see CONFLICT OF LAWS vol 8(3) (Reissue) PARA 349 et seq).

14 See, however, Wilson, Smithett and Cope Ltd v Terruzzi [1976] QB 683 at 691, 696, [1975] 2 All ER 649 at 654, 658, where Kerr J expressed the view that to decide whether the exchange control regulations of a member state are maintained or imposed consistently with the Bretton Woods Agreements the agreements must be considered as a whole, and that the court will require evidence if it is to hold that foreign legislation is not so maintained or imposed.

15 See the International Development Act 2002 s 11; and PARA 1393. As to the meaning of 'multilateral development bank' see PARA 1393. For examples of agreements establishing development banks and subscription orders see PARA 1393 note 5.

16 See the International Monetary Arrangements Act 1983 s 2(1), (2). This applies to financial assistance of any kind provided by the Bank of England which appears to the Treasury to be provided in pursuance of arrangements made: (1) in co-operation with the Bank for International Settlements or any central bank or other monetary authority of any country outside the United Kingdom (s 2(2)(a)); and (2) for the purpose of assisting the central bank or other monetary authority of any country outside the United Kingdom (s 2(2)(b)). The Treasury must lay a statement of the undertaking before each House of Parliament: s 2(3). As to the Bank of England see PARA 793 et seq. The Bank for International Settlements is an organisation established to foster co-operation among central banks and other agencies and whose services are provided exclusively to central banks and international organisations.

17 International Monetary Arrangements Act 1983 s 2(4). The Treasury must lay a statement relating to the sum issued before each House of Parliament: s 2(5).

NOTE 8--SI 1997/1611 replaced: International Monetary Fund (Limit on Lending) Order 2009, SI 2009/1830; the aggregate amount outstanding in respect of the principal of loans must not now exceed 12,470 million special drawing rights.

Halsbury's Laws of England/FINANCIAL SERVICES AND INSTITUTIONS (VOLUME 48 (2008) 5TH EDITION, PARAS 1-589; VOLUME 49 (2008) 5TH EDITION, PARAS 590-1619; VOLUME 50 (2008) 5TH EDITION, PARAS 1620-2586)/5. MONEY/(6) INTERNATIONAL FINANCIAL ARRANGEMENTS/(ii) International Financial Institutions/1392. Immunities and privileges of international financial organisations.

1392. Immunities and privileges of international financial organisations.

Her Majesty may by Order in Council make such provision as is considered necessary<sup>1</sup> to give effect to provisions of the agreement establishing an international financial institution<sup>2</sup> relating to the status, privileges or immunities of:

- 140 (1) that institution<sup>3</sup>;
- 141 (2) the governors, directors, executive-directors (or alternates) of that institution<sup>4</sup>; or
- 142 (3) the officers and employees of that institution<sup>5</sup>.

For these purposes, the following are international financial institutions<sup>6</sup>: (a) the International Bank for Reconstruction and Development<sup>7</sup>; (b) the International Finance Corporation<sup>8</sup>; and (c) the International Development Association<sup>9</sup>.

1 No recommendation may be made to Her Majesty in Council to make an order under these provisions unless a draft of the order has been laid before Parliament and approved by resolution of each House of Parliament: International Development Act 2002 s 12(4). At the date at which this volume states the law, no such order had been made. The provisions of s 12 are without prejudice to the powers conferred by the International Organisations Act 1968 or any other Act: see the International Development Act 2002 s 12(6). See also the International Organisations Act 1968; the Multilateral Investment Guarantee Agency (Overseas Territories) Order 1988, SI 1988/791; and INTERNATIONAL RELATIONS LAW vol 61 (2010) PARA 309.

1393. Multilateral development banks.

A multilateral development bank is an international financial institution<sup>1</sup> having as one of its objects economic development either generally or in any region of the world<sup>2</sup>. Where the government of the United Kingdom is bound<sup>3</sup> to make a relevant payment<sup>4</sup> to a multilateral bank, the Secretary of State may make<sup>5</sup>:

143 (1) the relevant payment<sup>6</sup>; or

144 (2) where it has been paid, any payment required to maintain its value<sup>7</sup>; or

145 (3) a payment to redeem any non-interest-bearing and non-negotiable notes, or other obligations, issued or created by him, that are accepted by the bank in accordance with the agreement or arrangements under which the relevant payment is required to be made<sup>8</sup>.

1 Eg the European Bank for Reconstruction and Development. Unlike the International Bank for Reconstruction and Development, the European Bank for Reconstruction and Development is not a United Nations agency; it does, however, enjoy certain immunities. As to international financial institutions see PARA 1391; and as to their immunities and privileges see PARA 1392.

2 See the International Development Act 2002 s 11(2).

3 Ie where the United Kingdom government has become bound before the coming into force of the International Development Act 2002 s 11 (ie before 7 June 2002), or thereafter becomes bound: see s 11(1). As to the meaning of 'United Kingdom' see PARA 2 note 3.

4 'Relevant payment' means: (1) an initial subscription, or other initial contribution to the capital stock of the bank, that the international agreement for the establishment and operation of the bank requires the members of the bank to make; or (2) a further payment to the bank required to be made by the members under any arrangements: see the International Development Act 2002 s 11(2).

5 le by an order and with the approval of the Treasury: see the International Development Act 2002 s 11(4). Such orders may not be made unless a draft of the order has been laid before and approved by the House of Commons: s 11(5). ### 1394. International development reporting and transparency.

It is the duty of the Secretary of State<sup>1</sup> to lay before each House of Parliament each year<sup>2</sup> a report about international aid<sup>3</sup>. Each annual report must include specified information<sup>4</sup> and, in particular, the Secretary of State must include in each annual report his assessment of the year in which he expects that the target for expenditure on official development assistance to amount to 0.7 per cent of gross national income will be met by the United Kingdom<sup>5</sup>. Provision is made for the Secretary of State to include his assessment on issues relating to the Millennium Development Goals 1-7<sup>6</sup>. The Secretary of State must include in each annual report such general or specific observations as he thinks appropriate on the effects of policies and programmes pursued by government departments on the promotion of sustainable development in countries outside the United Kingdom and the reduction of poverty in such countries<sup>7</sup>. The Secretary of State must also include such observations as he thinks appropriate about the contribution by the government departments to the promotion of transparency in the provision of aid and the use made of aid provided<sup>8</sup>, and observations about progress in relation to specified matters<sup>9</sup>.

1 As to the Secretary of State see PARA 3.

2 An annual report must be laid before each House of Parliament as soon as practicable after 31 March each year: International Development (Reporting and Transparency) Act 2006 s 1(3).

3 International Development (Reporting and Transparency) Act 2006 s 1(1).

(iii) Repeal of Exchange Control Legislation

1395. In general.

Under the Exchange Control Act 1947, the Treasury<sup>1</sup> was given powers to control a wide variety of transactions in currency, gold and securities. The object of the legislation was to assist in conserving the United Kingdom's gold and foreign currency reserves, to protect the sterling system and to help maintain the balance of payments. From 24 October 1979, the Act was rendered largely a reserve power as persons in or resident in the United Kingdom (including the Channel Islands and the Isle of Man) were exempted from their obligations under it<sup>2</sup>, and in 1987 it was finally repealed<sup>3</sup>. However, the Treasury retained certain powers to validate retrospectively acts done before 13 December 1979<sup>4</sup>.

1 As to the Treasury see PARA 3; and CONSTITUTIONAL LAW AND HUMAN RIGHTS vol 8(2) (Reissue) PARA 512 et seq.

2 See the Exchange Control (Gold and Foreign Currency) (Exemption) Order 1979, SI 1979/1331; the Exchange Control (Payments etc) (Exemption) Order 1979, SI 1979/1332; the Exchange Control (Securities etc) (Exemption) Order 1979, SI 1979/1333; the Exchange Control (Import and Export) (Exemption) Order 1979, SI 1979/1334; the Exchange Control (Settlements) (Exemption) Order 1979, SI 1979/1336; the Exchange Control (Bodies Corporate) (Exemption) Order 1979, SI 1979/1337; and the Exchange Control (Revocation) Directions 1979, SI 1979/1339 (all lapsed). As to the meaning of 'United Kingdom' see PARA 2 note 3.

3 See the Finance Act 1987 s 68(1), Sch 16 Pt XI. The repeal extended to the Channel Islands and the Isle of Man: s 68(4).

4 Notwithstanding the repeal of the Exchange Control Act 1947, the Treasury retains the right to issue certificates under s 18(2) (repealed) including that provision as applied by s 28(3) or s 29(3) (both repealed): see the Finance Act 1987 s 68(2).

(7) ECONOMIC AND MONETARY UNION

1396. European financial and economic co-operation.

In connection with the distribution after the 1939-45 war of American aid<sup>1</sup> and with the promotion of joint European economic recovery, the Organisation for European Economic Co-operation was set up by the governments of the United Kingdom and other European countries<sup>2</sup>. Temporary agreements were made between member countries for intra-European payments and compensations<sup>3</sup>, which were superseded in 1950 by the European Payments Union Agreement<sup>4</sup>, which itself was superseded in 1958<sup>5</sup> by the European Monetary Agreement<sup>6</sup>.

A further agreement has been signed establishing a financial support fund in relation to the Organisation for Economic Co-operation and Development, which is the successor to the Organisation for European Economic Co-operation<sup>7</sup>. Payments for direct financing of the support fund are paid out of the National Loans Fund<sup>8</sup> and sums received on account of such payments and the proceeds of the liquidisation of the support fund are to be paid into the National Loans Fund<sup>9</sup>. Any payments required to be made to support borrowings by the support fund are to be paid out of the Consolidated Fund<sup>10</sup>, which is to be credited with any sums received on account of such payments<sup>11</sup>.

In regard to United Kingdom membership of the European Community, there is to be charged on and issued out of the Consolidated Fund or, if so determined by the Treasury<sup>12</sup>, the National Loans Fund the amounts required to meet any Community obligation to make payments to any of the Communities or member states, or any Community obligation in respect of contributions to the capital or reserves of the European Investment Bank<sup>13</sup> or in respect of loans to that bank, or to redeem any notes or obligations issued or created in respect of any such Community obligation, as well as for various other expenses incidental to Community membership<sup>14</sup>.

1397. The European Monetary Agreement.

The European Monetary Agreement<sup>1</sup> made provision for the establishment of a European Fund and multilateral system of settlements<sup>2</sup>, the purposes of the fund being:

146 (1) to enable discretionary credits for periods up to two years to be given on request to parties to the Agreement to help them through temporary balance of payment crises; and

147 (2) to facilitate the operation of the settlements system<sup>3</sup>, and the capital of the fund consisting partly of assets transferred from the European Payments Union<sup>4</sup> and partly of contributions by the parties to be called up when needed<sup>5</sup>. Sums advanced and payments made by the United Kingdom were to be paid out of, and sums received were to be paid into, the National Loans Fund<sup>6</sup>.

The United Kingdom implementing legislation, the European Monetary Agreement Act 1959, was repealed as obsolete by the International Monetary Fund Act 1979, which consolidated enactments relating to the International Monetary Fund<sup>7</sup>.

1 See the European Monetary Agreement (Paris, 5 August 1955; Misc 20 (1955); Cmd 9602) (amended by Supplementary Protocols No 2 (Paris, 27 June 1958; Misc 12 (1958); Cmd 554), No 3 (Paris, 15 January 1960; Misc 2 (1960); Cmd 959), and No 4 (Paris, 12 December 1961; Misc 7 (1962); Cmd 1705)). The agreement came into force on 27 December 1958: see the European Monetary Agreement Act 1959 s 1 (repealed). The European Monetary Agreement must be distinguished from the European Monetary System, of which as at the date this volume states the law the United Kingdom is not a member. ### 1398. Economic and Monetary Union.

The Maastricht Treaty states that one of the European Union's objectives is to promote economic and social progress which is balanced and sustainable, through various means and in particular through the establishment of economic and monetary union, ultimately including a single currency in accordance with the provisions of the Treaty<sup>1</sup>.

As a result of the findings of the Report on economic and monetary union in the European Community in 1989, the European Council proposed to introduce economic and monetary union (known as 'EMU') in three stages<sup>2</sup>.

The first stage began on 1 July 1990 with the abolition of all remaining restrictions on the movement of capital between member states to encourage closer economic relations between them.

Stage two was initiated by the establishment of the European Monetary Institute in Frankfurt on 1 January 1994, the objective of which was to contribute to the realisation of the conditions necessary for the transition to the third stage of EMU, in particular by: (1) strengthening the co-ordination of monetary policies with a view to ensuring price stability; (2) making the preparations required for the establishment of the European System of Central Banks, and for the conduct of a single monetary policy and the creation of a single currency in the third stage; and (3) overseeing the development of the European currency<sup>3</sup>. During the second stage the eligibility of member states to join the EMU was assessed, with the Council of the European Union deciding whether a member state satisfied the necessary requirements to adopt the single currency. On 1 June 1998, the European Central Bank was established<sup>4</sup>, replacing the European Monetary Institute. The European Central Bank, together with representatives of the national central banks of member states who join the single currency, form the European System of Central Banks the primary objective of which is to maintain price stability<sup>5</sup>.

The third and final stage of economic and monetary union started on 1 January 1999 with the entry of 11 qualifying member states into the single currency<sup>6</sup>. The United Kingdom did not then join, but reserved its right to do so at some future date if it is in the national economic interest and if the case for joining is clear and unambiguous<sup>7</sup>.

The Chancellor of the Exchequer announced that there is in principle no constitutional bar to joining the single currency; and that if the government decides it is right to enter, the issue will be put to a national referendum<sup>8</sup>.

3 See the Treaty on European Union (Maastricht, 7 February 1992; TS 12 (1994); Cm 2485), Protocol on the Statute of the European Monetary Institute, art 2. Note that the Maastricht Treaty refers to the European currency unit ('ecu'). The European Council agreed in 1995 that this would be re-named the 'euro'. As to the euro see PARA 1399.

4 See the Treaty on European Union (Maastricht, 7 February 1992; TS 12 (1994); Cm 2485), Protocol on the Statute of the European System of Central Banks and of the European Central Bank, art 1.

5 See the Treaty on European Union (Maastricht, 7 February 1992; TS 12 (1994); Cm 2485), Protocol on the Statute of the European System of Central Banks and of the European Central Bank, art 2.

The European Central Bank (ECB), which is located in Frankfurt in Germany, is the central bank for Europe's single currency, the euro (see also PARA 1399). The ECB's main task is maintenance of the euro's purchasing power and thus price stability in the euro area. The euro area comprises the 13 EU countries that have adopted the euro since 1999. The euro area came into being when responsibility for monetary policy was transferred from the national central banks of 11 EU member states in January 1999; Greece and Slovenia joining subsequently (see note 6). To join the euro area, the 13 countries had to fulfil convergence criteria as will any countries joining in the future (see also note 7). The criteria set out the economic and legal preconditions for successful participation in EMU.

The European System of Central Banks (ESCB) consists of the ECB and the national central banks of all EU member states whether they have adopted the euro or not. The Eurosystem comprises the ECB and the national central banks that have adopted the euro. The Eurosystem and ESCB will co-exist as long as there are EU member states outside the euro area.

The Eurosystem and the single monetary policy for which it is responsible has the primary objective of maintaining price stability (see the Treaty Establishing the European Community art 105(1)). Related objectives are achieving a favourable economic environment and a high level of employment. The ECB is the sole issuer of bank notes and bank reserves and thus it can set out the conditions at which banks borrow from it and influence the conditions at which banks trade with each other in the money market. To achieve the primary objective of maintaining price stability, the Eurosystem uses a set of monetary policy instruments and procedures which forms the operational framework for implementing the single monetary policy. The monetary policy instruments are: open market operations; standing facilities; and minimum reserve requirements for credit institutions. The main guiding principles for the operational framework are said to be: operational efficiency; equal treatment and harmonisation in regard to credit institutions; decentralised implementation through the national central banks; and simplicity, transparency, continuity, safety and cost efficiency. For more information on the ECB and the ESCB see the ECB website. At the date at which this volume states the law, the website is www.ecb.int.

6 See EC Council Regulation 974/98 (OJ L139, 11.5.98, p 1) on the introduction of the euro, art 2. ### 1399. The euro.

As from 1 January 2002, the European Central Bank<sup>1</sup> and the central banks of the participating member states have put into circulation euro banknotes and coins so that notes and coins in national currencies have been replaced in those states<sup>2</sup>.

There are seven euro notes in denominations of 5, 10, 20, 50, 100, 200 and 500 euros, each depicting symbolic European architectural designs<sup>3</sup>. There are eight euro coins in denominations of 1 and 2 euros, and in 1, 2, 5, 10, 20 and 50 cents; each euro coin has a European design on one face and a national design on the other<sup>4</sup>.

All euro notes and coins, wherever minted and of whatever national design, are legal tender in all participating member states<sup>5</sup>.

While the introduction of the single currency has resulted in the market in wholesale financial services operating on a pan-European basis in participating member states, the market in retail financial services has remained fragmented along national lines. An EC Commission report published in early 2007 found a number of barriers to entry to national markets in retail financial services including cooperation between banks within national markets and banks' pricing policies but it also found a significant entry barrier created by payment systems and services and the way they operate. Varying transfer costs and terms of business have meant that the euro has not contributed to cross-border trade or stimulated competition to the extent originally envisaged. At the date at which this volume states the law, there are single market initiatives in this area involving the European Payments Council (EPC), the creation of the Single Euro Payments Area (SEPA) and the necessary legal framework for it in the form of the Payment Services Directive, a legislative proposal (ultimately to be implemented by individual member states by November 2009) which is intended to enhance competition within the market for payment services, to enhance market transparency and to harmonise the legal framework for payments and industry practices. In October 2007 it was announced that the Financial Services Authority<sup>6</sup> will be the UK regulator for the provision of payment services, established by the Payment Services Directive. In December 2007 the Treasury<sup>7</sup> announced a consultation on the implementation of the Directive, and in January 2008 there was the official launch of the SEPA.

(1) BILLS OF EXCHANGE, CHEQUES AND PROMISSORY NOTES

(i) Introduction

1400. Origin of the law relating to bills, etc.

The law relating to bills of exchange, cheques and promissory notes was consolidated and reduced to the terms of a code in 1882<sup>1</sup>. In origin, however, it was part of the common law known as the law merchant, consisting of those commercial practices, well established in trade and commerce, that had been ratified by the courts, upon such usages being proved before them, and adopted as settled law<sup>2</sup>.

The codifying statute, for the most part, crystallises the effect of the judicial decisions which preceded it, and such cases are referred to in this title where they may be of assistance<sup>3</sup>. However, the Act of 1882 also deliberately altered the law in certain respects<sup>4</sup>, and its provisions must be read predominantly in the light of those decisions made in cases subsequent to its coming into effect.

<sup>2</sup> These rules of the law merchant were the product of the decisions in more than 2,000 cases and represented the gist of the practice in this country during the preceding 200 years. See CUSTOM AND USAGE vol 12(1) (Reissue) PARAS 662-664. The law relating to other negotiable instruments is still known as the law merchant: see PARA 1610.

<sup>3</sup> Cf Bank of England v Vagliano Bros [1891] AC 107 at 144-145, HL, per Lord Herschell. The Bills of Exchange Act 1882 provides that rules of common law, including the law merchant, continue to apply except where they are inconsistent with the Act's express provisions: s 97(2). Where any Act or document refers to any enactment repealed by the Bills of Exchange Act 1882, the Act or document is construed, and operates, as if it referred to the corresponding provisions of the 1882 Act (s 99). However, nothing in the Act or in repeals effected by it affects (1) any law or enactment for the time being in force relating to the revenue (s 97(3)(a) (amended by the Statute Law Revision Act 1898)); or (2) the provisions of the Companies Act 1862 (repealed) or Acts amending it, or any Act relating to joint stock banks or companies (Bills of Exchange Act 1882 s 97(3) (b)); or (3) the provisions of any Act relating to or confirming the privileges of the Bank of England or the Bank of Ireland respectively (s 97(3)(c)). As to savings made in respect of dividend warrants see PARA 1619.

<sup>4</sup> See eg the Bills of Exchange Act 1882 s 7(2) (enabling bills to be made payable to one or more of several payees and to holders of offices) (see PARA 1430); s 8(4) (making all bills negotiable unless the contrary intention is expressed) (see PARA 1428); and s 34(4) (relating to bills indorsed in blank) (see PARA 1492).

1401. Principles of negotiability.

The outstanding characteristics common to bills of exchange, cheques and promissory notes<sup>1</sup> which found expression in the cases decided before 1882, and are embodied in the codifying statute, are: (1) that a valuable consideration is presumed, so that there is no necessity to state it<sup>2</sup>; (2) that such instrument may be transferred<sup>3</sup> from one person<sup>4</sup> to another by indorsement<sup>5</sup> or by delivery<sup>6</sup>, so as to enable the transferee to enforce it in his own name; and (3) that the transferee who takes such an instrument in good faith<sup>7</sup> and for value<sup>8</sup> obtains a good title in spite of any defect of title in the transferor<sup>9</sup>.

1 As to the meanings of 'bills of exchange', 'cheques' and 'promissory notes' see PARA 1405.

2 As to consideration see PARA 1478 et seq.

3 As to transfer see PARA 1489 et seq. The term 'negotiable' is first used in the Bills of Exchange Act 1882 s 8(1) (see PARA 1440) and is impliedly distinguished from transfer which is, of course, an element in negotiation. That the terms have different meanings is clear from s 8(1). As to restrictions on negotiability see PARA 1440.

4 For the purposes of the Bills of Exchange Act 1882, 'person' includes a body of persons whether incorporated or not: s 2.

5 As to the meaning of 'indorsement' see PARA 1407.

6 As to the meaning of 'delivery' see PARA 1406.

7 For the purposes of the Bills of Exchange Act 1882, something is deemed to be done in good faith where it is in fact done honestly, whether it is done negligently or not: s 90.

8 For the purposes of the Bills of Exchange Act 1882, 'value' means valuable consideration: s 2. See also PARA 1416. As to the meaning of 'valuable consideration' see s 27(1); and PARA 1479.

9 As to freedom from defect in title see PARA 1488.

1402. Meaning of 'negotiable instrument'.

A negotiable instrument is one which embodies the characteristics of negotiability<sup>1</sup>. In the case of bills and cheques, they must order the payment of money; in the case of notes, the instrument must contain a promise to pay<sup>2</sup>. To be a negotiable instrument a document should contain substantially an order or a promise to pay a definite sum of money and no more<sup>3</sup>; hence a document which is a receipt but contains no such promise is not a negotiable instrument<sup>4</sup>.

1 As to negotiability see PARA 1401. In this title the words 'negotiable instrument' or 'instrument' have been used wherever possible to cover the terms 'bill of exchange', 'cheque' and 'promissory note', because the provisions of the Bills of Exchange Act 1882 applicable to a bill of exchange payable on demand apply, except as otherwise provided, to a cheque (see s 73; and PARA 1405), and the provisions of the Act relating to bills of exchange apply, with necessary modifications, to promissory notes except as provided by ss 83-88 and s 89(2), (3) (see s 89(1); and PARA 1405). Where these terms cannot be used the particular form of instrument referred to is named.

1403. Bills, notes and cheques as negotiable instruments.

Both bills of exchange and promissory notes<sup>1</sup> were in use in this country in the seventeenth century<sup>2</sup>, but while negotiability was an admitted attribute of a bill of exchange, it was denied to a promissory note<sup>3</sup>. The difficulty thus created was, however, overcome by statute<sup>4</sup>, and since then both bills of exchange and promissory notes have been recognised by the courts as negotiable instruments<sup>5</sup>.

5 As to the meaning of 'negotiable instrument' see PARA 1402.

6 As to the meaning of 'cheque' see PARA 1405.

7 In the Bills of Exchange Act 1882, 'banker' includes a body of persons whether incorporated or not who carry on the business of banking: s 2.

8 The duty and authority of a banker to pay a cheque drawn on him by his customer are determined by countermand of payment, or notice of the customer's death: Bills of Exchange Act 1882 s 75. It has been held that, because modern commercial practice treats a direct debit in the same way as payment by cheque, the effect of cancelling a direct debit is equivalent to countermanding payment by cheque: Eso Petroleum Ltd v Milton [1997] 2 All ER 593, [1997] 1 WLR 938, CA. #### 1404. Bills, notes and cheques as chattels and choses in action.

Although bills and notes<sup>1</sup> in their negotiable quality<sup>2</sup> partake so largely of the nature of money, they retain their innate character of chattels and choses in action. They will, therefore, pass as chattels under a will<sup>3</sup>. As chattels they may be bought or sold<sup>4</sup>, or deposited to secure the payment of book debts<sup>5</sup>. As choses in action they may be assigned<sup>6</sup> or charged<sup>7</sup>. In all these cases the person<sup>8</sup> taking them acquires the same title as that of the person from whom he took them<sup>9</sup>.

Bills<sup>10</sup> and notes<sup>11</sup> may pass also by a donatio mortis causa<sup>12</sup>. So, too, cheques<sup>13</sup> of a third party held by the donor will pass<sup>14</sup>, but not cheques drawn by the donor<sup>15</sup>, which are revocable by notice to the banker of the drawer's death<sup>16</sup>.

Bill of exchange, cheque, promissory note.*

(iii) Defined Terms

1405. Bill of exchange, cheque, promissory note.

A bill of exchange is defined by statute as an unconditional order<sup>1</sup> in writing<sup>2</sup>, addressed by one person<sup>3</sup> to another, signed by the person giving it, requiring the person to whom it is addressed to pay on demand or at a fixed or determinable future time a sum certain<sup>4</sup> in money to or to the order of a specified person, or to bearer<sup>5</sup>.

A cheque is a bill of exchange drawn on a banker<sup>6</sup> payable on demand<sup>7</sup>. An instrument<sup>8</sup> drawn by a banker on himself is probably not a cheque<sup>9</sup>.

A promissory note is an unconditional promise in writing made by one person to another, signed by the maker<sup>10</sup>, engaging to pay, on demand or at a fixed or determinable future time<sup>11</sup>, a sum certain in money<sup>12</sup>, to, or to the order of, a specified person<sup>13</sup> or to bearer<sup>14</sup>.

An instrument which does not comply with one or other of these definitions (such as a deposit receipt<sup>15</sup> or an irrevocable undertaking to pay contained in a letter<sup>16</sup>) is not a bill of exchange or a cheque, or a promissory note<sup>17</sup>.

When an instrument is so ambiguous in form as to be capable of being treated either as a bill of exchange or as a promissory note, it is in the option of the holder<sup>18</sup> to treat it as either<sup>19</sup>.

An instrument signed by an acceptor<sup>20</sup>, but without the name of the person giving it, and not addressed to anyone, is not a bill of exchange, though good as a promissory note<sup>21</sup>. The addition of conditional clauses to the promise to pay will prevent a document from being a promissory note<sup>22</sup>.

1 As to an unconditional order to pay see PARA 1424.

2 For the purposes of the Bills of Exchange Act 1882, 'writing' includes print and 'written' includes printed: s 2.

3 As to the meaning of 'person' see PARA 1401 note 4.

4 As to a sum certain see PARA 1418 et seq.

5 Bills of Exchange Act 1882 s 3(1). References to 'bills' are references to bills of exchange: s 2. As to the meaning of 'bearer' see PARA 1407. As to instruments payable to bearer or to order see PARA 1428. An instrument in favour of 'cash' is not a bill of exchange: North and South Insurance Corpn Ltd v National Provincial Bank Ltd [1936] 1 KB 328; Cole v Milsome [1951] 1 All ER 311; applied in Orbit Mining and Trading Co Ltd v Westminster Bank Ltd [1963] 1 QB 794, [1962] 3 All ER 565, CA, in which Sellers LJ said that although

'cash can give no order the effect is, no doubt, that it is equivalent to a payment to bearer'. As to the undertaking by the drawer or indorser of a bill that it will be accepted and paid and (of a cheque) that it will be paid see PARAS 1574-1575, 1577.

6 As to the meaning of 'banker' see PARA 1403 note 7.

7 Bills of Exchange Act 1882 s 73. Except as otherwise provided in Pt III (ss 73-81A), the provisions of the Act applicable to a bill of exchange payable on demand apply to a cheque: s 73. See PARA 1410 et seq.

8 As to the meaning of 'instrument' see PARA 1402 note 1.

9 London City and Midland Bank Ltd v Gordon [1903] AC 240, HL; Slingsby v Westminster Bank Ltd [1931] 1 KB 173 at 187 per Finlay J, doubting Ross v London County, Westminster and Parr's Bank Ltd [1919] 1 KB 678; but see the Cheques Act 1957 ss 1, 4; and PARA 917.

10 As to the meaning of 'maker' see PARA 1406.

11 An instrument expressed to be payable '180 days from the date of the bill of lading' probably does not constitute a promissory note because it cannot be ascertained from the date of the document: see Credit Agricole Indosuez v Ecumet (UK) Ltd [2001] All ER (D) 351 (Mar), distinguishing Novaknit Hellas SA v Kumar Bros International Ltd [1998] Lloyd's Rep Bank 287, CA (see PARAS 1436, 1476, 1579).

12 Is a promissory note is a document which consists substantially of a promise to pay a sum of money, and of nothing else: see Mortgage Insurance Corp'n v IRC (1888) 21 QBD 352 at 358, CA, per Bowen LJ; Wirth v Weigel Leygonie & Co Ltd [1939] 3 All ER 712 at 720 per du Parcq LJ. A document containing a promise to pay money in a currency which is not that of the country where the note is made and payable may, notwithstanding that, be a promissory note (Syndic in Bankruptcy of Salim Nasrallah Khoury v Khayat [1943] AC 507, [1943] 2 All ER 406, PC (decided on the Palestine Bills of Exchange Ordinance 1929 (No 47 of 1929)); and see John Burrows Ltd v Subsurface Surveys Ltd [1968] SCR 607, 68 DLR (2d) 354, Can SC; and PARA 1436 note 6.

13 A document which contains a promise to pay a named payee or into his banking account is probably not a promissory note ('I doubt whether a promise to pay to a man or to somebody else who may be his creditor or debtor is a promissory note': see Wirth v Weigel Leygonie & Co Ltd [1939] 3 All ER 712 at 721 per du Parcq LJ). A document in the form of a promissory note but which does not comply with the statutory definition (eg sterling and dollar certificates of deposit) probably operates as an equitable assignment.

14 Bills of Exchange Act 1882 s 83(1). References to 'notes' are references to promissory notes: s 2. The provisions of the Bills of Exchange Act 1882 apply, with necessary modifications and subject to the provisions and exceptions provided for under Pt II (ss 3-72), to promissory notes (s 89(1)). In applying these provisions the maker of a note is deemed to correspond with the acceptor of a bill, and the first indorser of a note is deemed to correspond with the drawer of an accepted bill payable to drawer's order: s 89(2). But the provisions relating to bills and their presentment for acceptance, their acceptance, their acceptance supra protest, and the provisions relating to bills in a set, naturally do not apply to notes: s 89(3); see further PARAS 1451, 1509, 1566, 1586.

15 See Akbar Khan v Attar Singh [1936] 2 All ER 545, PC (deposit receipt not a promissory note within the Indian Stamp Act 1899 (No 2 of 1899)); Claydon v Bradley [1987] 1 All ER 522, [1987] 1 WLR 521, CA (receipt for the sum of £10,000 'as a loan to be paid back' held not to be a promissory note within the Bills of Exchange Act 1882 s 83(1)).

'Drawer' means the party who draws a bill of exchange or cheque<sup>1</sup>.

'Drawee' means the party on whom a bill of exchange or cheque is drawn<sup>2</sup>.

'Acceptor' means the drawee of a bill of exchange, who has signified his assent to the order of the drawer<sup>3</sup>.

'Acceptance' means the signification of such assent completed by delivery or notification thereof<sup>4</sup>.

'Maker' means the party who makes a promissory note<sup>5</sup>.

'Payee' means the party to whom a bill of exchange, cheque or note is made payable<sup>6</sup>.

'Delivery' means transfer of possession, actual or constructive, from one person<sup>7</sup> to another<sup>8</sup>.

'Issue' means the first delivery of a bill of exchange, cheque or note, complete in form, to a person who takes it as a holder<sup>9</sup>.

8 Bills of Exchange Act 1882 s 2; and see PARA 1440 et seq. As to transfer generally see PARA 1489 et seq. Constructive transfer is involved in three cases: (1) where a person holding a bill on his own account subsequently holds it as agent for another; (2) where, having held it as agent for one, subsequently he holds it as agent for another; (3) where, having held it as agent for another, he subsequently holds it on his own account. ### 1407. Negotiation, indorser, bearer, holder, etc.

'Negotiation' means the transfer for value<sup>1</sup> of a bill of exchange, cheque<sup>2</sup> or promissory note<sup>3</sup> to a person<sup>4</sup>, who thereupon becomes entitled to hold it, and is capable of suing thereon in his own name<sup>5</sup>.

'Indorsement' means the writing<sup>6</sup> on a bill, cheque or note the name of the transferor and its delivery<sup>7</sup> to the transferee<sup>8</sup>.

'Indorsee' means the person to whom a bill of exchange, cheque or promissory note is transferred by indorsement<sup>9</sup>.

'Bearer' means the person in possession of a bill or note which is payable to bearer<sup>10</sup>.

'Holder' means the payee<sup>11</sup> or indorsee of a bill of exchange, cheque or promissory note who is in possession of it, or the bearer thereof<sup>12</sup>.

'Holder for value' means, as regards the acceptor<sup>13</sup> and all parties prior to the time when value was given, a holder of a bill of exchange, cheque or promissory note for which value has at any time been given<sup>14</sup>.

'Holder in due course' means a holder of a bill of exchange, cheque or promissory note, complete and regular on the face of it, who takes it in good faith<sup>15</sup> and for value before it is overdue, and without notice either of its previous dishonour or of any defect in the title of the person who negotiated it to him<sup>16</sup>.

9 'Indorsee' is not defined in the Bills of Exchange Act 1882 but has been held to mean 'a person who has the rights which are given by statute in respect of a bill or cheque by virtue of an indorsement' and 'is not limited to one who has received a cheque with a signature actually written on the back': Midland Bank Ltd v RV Harris Ltd [1963] 2 All ER 685 at 687, [1963] 1 WLR 1021 at 1024 per Megaw J (a case decided under the Cheques Act 1957). 'Indorser' is not defined in the Bills of Exchange Act 1882 either, but in practice is taken to mean 'a person who effects an indorsement'.

(iv) Necessary Parties

A. BILLS OF EXCHANGE

1408. Necessary parties to bill of exchange.

The necessary parties to a bill of exchange<sup>1</sup> are: (1) the party giving the order, who must sign it, and who is called the drawer<sup>2</sup>; (2) the party to whom the order is given, who is called the drawee<sup>3</sup>, and who on assenting to the terms of the order and signing it is called the acceptor<sup>4</sup>; and (3) the party to whom the money is to be paid, who is called the payee<sup>5</sup>, or, if the bill be expressed to be payable to bearer<sup>6</sup>, the bearer<sup>7</sup>.

The same person<sup>8</sup> sometimes fills the position of two of these three necessary parties<sup>9</sup>.

Thus the drawer may also be the payee when the bill is expressed 'pay to us', 'pay to our order', 'pay to us or order', or 'pay to ____ order'<sup>10</sup>.

The drawee may also be the payee, for example, where the bill is expressed 'pay to your own order'<sup>11</sup>. Here, though the instrument<sup>12</sup> is in form a bill, there is nothing to enforce until the bill has been negotiated, that is, transferred for value<sup>13</sup> by being indorsed by the drawee or payee to some other party.

The drawer may also be the drawee. In this case, as also in the case of the drawee being a fictitious person or a person not having capacity to contract<sup>14</sup>, the holder<sup>15</sup> may treat the instrument at his option either as a bill of exchange or as a promissory note<sup>16</sup>. A banker's draft<sup>17</sup> may also be treated either as a bill of exchange or as a promissory note<sup>18</sup>.

1 As to the meaning of 'bill of exchange' see PARA 1405.

2 As to the meaning of 'drawer' see PARA 1406. A document in the form of a bill signed by the acceptor but not by the drawer is not a bill, but may be valid as an acknowledgment of debt: Lawson's Executors v Watson 1907 SC 1353, Ct of Sess. As to the right of the holder to complete an incomplete bill see PARA 1449. As to the nature of the contract made by the drawer see PARA 1574.

3 As to the meaning of 'drawee' see PARA 1406. Where the instrument, though in form a bill, is addressed to no drawee, it may be treated as a note, even where it cannot be treated as a bill: Felder v Marshall (1861) 9

6 As to instruments payable to bearer see PARA 1428.

7 As to the meaning of 'bearer' see PARA 1407.

8 As to the meaning of 'person' see PARA 1401 note 4.

9 A bill may be drawn payable to, or to the order of, the drawer; or it may be drawn payable to, or to the order of, the drawee: Bills of Exchange Act 1882 s 5(1).

10 As to the last example see Chamberlain v Young [1893] 2 QB 206, CA; and text to PARA 1429 note 10. As to instruments payable to order see PARA 1428.

11 Formerly such an instrument was not a bill of exchange.

12 As to the meaning of 'instrument' see PARA 1402 note 1.

13 As to the meaning of 'value' see PARA 1401 note 8.

14 As to fictitious persons see PARA 1431. As to restrictions on capacity see PARA 1469. Notice of dishonour may be dispensed with also when the drawer and drawee are the same person; see PARA 1529.

1409. Referee in case of need.

Besides the parties necessary to a bill of exchange<sup>1</sup> another party may be introduced at the option of the drawer<sup>2</sup> and any indorser<sup>3</sup>, called the 'referee in case of need'<sup>4</sup>. The drawer or indorser in that event inserts on the face of the bill the name of a person<sup>5</sup> to whom resort may be had 'in case of need', that is in the event of the bill being dishonoured by non-acceptance or non-payment<sup>6</sup>. The holder<sup>7</sup> of the bill is at liberty to choose whether he will resort to the referee or not<sup>8</sup>, but in the case of a bill, where it is desired to charge a drawer or indorser resident in a foreign country, the holder should ascertain whether the law of that country does not require him first to resort to the referee in case of need<sup>9</sup>. A dishonoured bill must be protested<sup>10</sup>, or at least noted for protest, for non-payment before it is presented for payment to the referee in case of need<sup>11</sup>.

B. CHEQUES

1410. Necessary parties to cheque.

The necessary parties to a cheque are the same as those to a bill of exchange, save that the drawee<sup>1</sup> must be a banker<sup>2</sup>. The banker does not become acceptor<sup>3</sup> of the cheque, but there is an implied contract between the banker and his customer that he will honour cheques drawn upon him by his customer up to the amount of the funds of his customer which he has in his hands or, where there is an agreement to let the customer overdraw, up to the limits of the amount of the overdraft agreed on<sup>4</sup>. The banker's liability is to the drawer<sup>5</sup> (his customer) only; the mere dishonour of a cheque gives no right of claim to anyone other than the drawer<sup>6</sup>. With certain exceptions which will be noticed hereafter, the law applying to bills of exchange payable on demand applies equally to cheques<sup>7</sup>.

1411. Crossing of cheques.

The rules for the negotiation<sup>1</sup> of bills and notes apply generally to cheques<sup>2</sup> but the negotiation of a cheque may be affected by crossing it<sup>3</sup>.

A cheque is crossed where it bears across its face an addition of: (1) the words 'and company' or any abbreviation thereof between two parallel transverse lines<sup>4</sup>; or (2) two parallel transverse lines simply<sup>5</sup>; or (3) the name of a banker<sup>6</sup>. In heads (1) and (2) above, the cheque is said to be crossed generally<sup>7</sup>; in head (3), it is said to be crossed specially, and to the banker so named<sup>8</sup>. The words 'not negotiable' may be added in any of these cases<sup>9</sup>, but these words by themselves do not constitute a crossing<sup>10</sup>.

The drawer<sup>11</sup> of a cheque may cross it either generally or specially<sup>12</sup>. The holder<sup>13</sup> may cross an uncrossed cheque generally or specially<sup>14</sup>, or may cross a cheque specially that is crossed generally<sup>15</sup>. The holder may also add the words 'not negotiable' to a cheque that is crossed either generally or specially<sup>16</sup>.

By operation of the Cheques Act 1957<sup>17</sup>, the crossed cheque provisions of the Bills of Exchange Act 1882<sup>18</sup> apply not only to cheques<sup>19</sup> but extend to: (a) any document issued by a customer of a banker<sup>20</sup> which, though not a bill, is intended to enable a person<sup>21</sup> to obtain payment of the sum mentioned therein from that banker<sup>22</sup>; (b) any document issued by a public officer and intended to enable a person to obtain payment from the Paymaster General or the Queen's and Lord Treasurer's Remembrancer<sup>23</sup>; and (c) a banker's draft<sup>24</sup>.

1412. Marking of cheques by bankers.

Occasionally cheques<sup>1</sup> are marked or certified by the bankers<sup>2</sup> on whom they are drawn. Doing so does not convert the banker into an acceptor<sup>3</sup> or make him liable on the cheque, but it may constitute a representation by him, on which he may be held liable, that the cheque will be paid as drawn if presented within a reasonable time<sup>4</sup>.

C. PROMISSORY NOTES

1413. Necessary parties to promissory note.

The necessary parties to a promissory note<sup>1</sup> are: (1) the person<sup>2</sup> who makes the promise, and who is called the maker<sup>3</sup>; (2) the person to whom the promise is made, and who is called the payee<sup>4</sup>. Where the same person fills the position of both parties, for example, where the instrument<sup>5</sup> is expressed 'pay to my order', the instrument is not a note unless and until it is indorsed by the maker<sup>6</sup>. In the application of the statutory provisions relating to bills of exchange<sup>7</sup> to a promissory note, the maker of a note is deemed to correspond with the acceptor<sup>8</sup> of a bill and the first indorser<sup>9</sup> of a note is deemed to correspond with the drawer<sup>10</sup> of an accepted bill payable to drawer's order<sup>11</sup>.

It is not necessary to adhere to any form of words so long as the conditions of the definition are observed<sup>1</sup>, in which case the language in which the instrument<sup>2</sup> is written is immaterial<sup>3</sup>.

1415. Date.

Omission of the date does not invalidate a bill or note<sup>1</sup>. Where an instrument expressed to be payable at a fixed period after date<sup>2</sup> is issued<sup>3</sup> undated, or where the acceptance<sup>4</sup> of a bill payable at a fixed period after sight<sup>5</sup> is undated, any holder<sup>6</sup> may insert the true date of issue or acceptance, and the instrument becomes payable accordingly<sup>7</sup>. Where the holder inserts a wrong date in good faith<sup>8</sup> and by mistake, and in every case where a wrong date is inserted<sup>9</sup>, if the instrument subsequently comes into the hands of a holder in due course<sup>10</sup>, the instrument is not invalidated, but the date so inserted is deemed to be the true one<sup>11</sup>.

Where an instrument remains undated it would seem that it should be taken to be dated on the date when it was issued<sup>12</sup>, that is, when it was first delivered complete in form to a person<sup>13</sup> taking it as holder.

Where the drawing or indorsement<sup>14</sup> of any instrument or the acceptance of any bill is dated, the date, unless the contrary be proved, is deemed to be the true date of the drawing, acceptance, or indorsement, as the case may be<sup>15</sup>.

An instrument is not invalid by reason only that it is antedated or postdated or that it bears date on a Sunday<sup>16</sup>.

1 Bills of Exchange Act 1882 ss 3(4)(a), 89. As to the meanings of 'bill' and 'note' see PARA 1405. Cheques are in a somewhat different position. Omission of the date may not, and probably does not, invalidate the cheque, but bankers usually refuse payment of an undated cheque, presumably on the ground that, unlike a bill or note, it is revocable in certain circumstances. See eg Griffiths v Dalton [1940] 2 KB 264. See also Aspinall's Club Ltd v Al-Zayat [2007] EWCA Civ 1007, [2007] All ER (D) 302 (Oct).

7 Bills of Exchange Act 1882 ss 12, 89. The date which the section allows to be inserted is the date of issue or acceptance so the section, as between immediate parties, does not apply to a case where an agreement provides the date from which the bill is to run irrespective of the date of the bill or the sight of the bill, and a date which is not the date in the agreement is inserted in the bill as the date from which the bill is to run: Foster v Driscoll [1929] 1 KB 470 at 495, CA, per Scrutton LJ.

1416. Value.

Omission to specify the value<sup>1</sup> given or that any value has been given does not invalidate an instrument<sup>2</sup>, since the presumption always remains, unless actually negated, that every party whose signature appears on a bill<sup>3</sup> has become a party thereto for value<sup>4</sup>.

Evidence may be adduced to show absence, failure<sup>5</sup>, or illegality of consideration<sup>6</sup> or fraud<sup>7</sup>, whether the instrument is expressed to be for value or not, and generally contemporary evidence in writing may be given to negative the presumption or statement, if any, of value given; but, parol evidence, the effect of which would be to vary the terms of the instrument as they appear upon its face, is inadmissible<sup>8</sup>.

1417. Place of drawing, etc.

It is customary, but not necessary, to state in a bill the place where it is drawn, or in a note the place where it is made<sup>1</sup>.

1418. For payment of money only.

A bill of exchange, cheque or promissory note<sup>1</sup> must be for the payment of money only<sup>2</sup>; an instrument that orders any other act to be done in addition is not a bill of exchange, cheque or promissory note<sup>3</sup>. Further, it is essential that the money which is to be paid should be a sum certain<sup>4</sup>, for otherwise the drawee<sup>5</sup> could not tell what he is to pay, or the payee<sup>6</sup> or holder<sup>7</sup> what he is entitled to demand. However, there is no limit set to the amount for which a bill may be drawn<sup>8</sup>. A bill of exchange or promissory note drawn or made on or after 15 February 1971 is invalid if it is drawn wholly or partly in shillings and pence<sup>9</sup>. Reference to the old currency in shillings and pence, in cheques and other instruments to which the relevant provisions of the Cheques Act 1957<sup>10</sup> apply, in bills of exchange (other than cheques) and in promissory notes, is to be read as meaning the corresponding amount in the new currency calculated in accordance with the provisions of the Decimal Currency Act 1969<sup>11</sup> and any alteration done to make the instrument read in accordance with such provisions does not affect the validity of the instrument and, in the case of a bill of exchange or promissory note, does not render the alteration a material alteration<sup>12</sup>.

1 As to the meanings of 'bill of exchange', 'cheque' and 'promissory note' see PARA 1405.

2 See the Bills of Exchange Act 1882 ss 3, 73, 83; and PARA 1405.

Thus an instrument ordering the delivery up of houses and a wharf in addition to the payment of a sum of money is not a valid bill: Martin v Chantry (1747) 2 Stra 1271. See also Dickie v Singh 1974 SLT 129 (instrument providing for employment and payment of staff in addition to the payment of a sum of money held not to be a promissory note).

4 See the Bills of Exchange Act 1882 ss 3(1), 9, 73, 83(1); and PARA 1405. Therefore a note to pay a given sum and whatever else may be due to the payee is not a good note (Smith v Nightingale (1818) 2 Stark 375; Crowfoot v Gurney (1832) 9 Bing 372), nor a note to pay '£13 and all fines according to rule' (Ayrey v Fearnside (1838) 4 M & W 168), nor is a bill to pay the proceeds of the sale of a consignment of goods even when valued by the drawer at a definite sum a good bill (Jones v Simpson (1823) 2 B & C 318).

1419. Sum payable with interest.

The sum payable is not to be regarded as uncertain although it is required to be paid with interest<sup>1</sup>.

In English law there is no limit to the amount of interest that may be charged<sup>2</sup>, but many foreign countries have usury laws, and bills or notes in such countries must not bear interest at a rate higher than that which the law permits. In England and Wales, where a bill or note is expressed to be with interest, but no rate is prescribed, a court would probably allow the appropriate commercial rate<sup>3</sup>. An instrument<sup>4</sup> payable with 'lawful interest' is thus not invalid for uncertainty<sup>5</sup>.

2 As to excessive interest in consumer credit and moneylenders' transactions see PARA 1286; and CONSUMER CREDIT vol 9(1) (Reissue) PARAS 269-270. In Re Tillman (1918) 34 TLR 322, an acceptor of bills drawn by a drawer who became an enemy alien was not allowed to charge against the enemy alien commission or compound interest, but only the interest the acceptor had paid to the Bank of England in respect of an advance to enable the acceptances to be met, and, after the bank had been repaid, simple interest only at 5%.

1420. Payment by instalments.

The sum may also be expressed to be payable by stated instalments with or without a provision that upon default in payment of any instalment the whole shall become due<sup>1</sup>, but the dates of the instalments must be stated<sup>2</sup>.

1 Bills of Exchange Act 1882 s 9(1)(b), (c); Carlton v Kenealy (1843) 12 M & W 139. Unless the note so states the holder may not sue for the whole balance on default in payment of an instalment: Van der Westhuizen v Lochner (1908) 18 CTR 446 (SA). Where a promissory note containing such a provision and a bill of sale are both given to secure the same debt, the bill of sale is invalidated by the stipulation in the note, but the note itself is good: Monetary Advance Co v Cater (1888) 20 QBD 785, DC. As to statutory defeasances of a bill of sale see PARAS 1748-1749.

1421. Sum payable at stated rate of exchange.

The sum may also be expressed to be payable according to an indicated rate of exchange or according to a rate of exchange to be ascertained as directed by the instrument<sup>1</sup>. Bills<sup>2</sup> are sometimes drawn in this country payable in another country with 'exchange as per indorsement' or some variant of this; in such cases it would seem advisable to ensure that the particular form of words used binds the acceptor<sup>3</sup> to pay according to them<sup>4</sup>. A bill for an amount expressed in foreign currency is not invalidated because a rate of exchange is not indicated on the face of the bill, and evidence of the practice of bankers<sup>5</sup> in dealing with cheques drawn in England on an English bank in foreign currency may be given<sup>6</sup>.

The addition to the instrument of a rate of exchange after acceptance<sup>7</sup> is a material alteration which invalidates the instrument<sup>8</sup>.

An instrument may be expressed to be payable in the alternative at one of two places in the choice of the holder<sup>9</sup> according to the course of exchange between the two<sup>10</sup>.

1422. Words prevail over figures.

It is customary for bills and notes<sup>1</sup> to have the amount written in figures at the top of the instrument and also in words in the body of the instrument. The figures at the top (the marginal figures, as they are sometimes called) are not in fact a necessary part of an instrument, though they are commonly placed there. It would seem that their original purpose was that the amount of the instrument might strike the eye immediately and be a note, index or summary of the contents<sup>2</sup>.

Where there is a discrepancy between the words used to express a sum payable and the figures so used, the sum denoted by the words is the amount payable<sup>3</sup>, and evidence cannot be adduced to show that in fact there was a mistake made in omitting words in the body of the instrument<sup>4</sup>. Probably if there is a marginal figure and there are no words in the body of the instrument, it is a valid instrument for the marginal figure<sup>5</sup>.

Obvious and intelligible mistakes in the written words, however, do not invalidate an instrument<sup>6</sup>.

It is the practice of bankers in England to return the cheque with the answer 'amounts differ' unless the difference is insignificant or if the smaller amount only is claimed, when it is the custom to pay it. Peremptory order to pay.*

1423. Peremptory order to pay.

The wording of a bill of exchange<sup>1</sup> must import a demand, not a request<sup>2</sup>.

1 As to the meaning of 'bill of exchange' see PARA 1405.

2 Bills of Exchange Act 1882 s 3(1). Thus an instrument in the form 'Please to let bearer have £ _____, and you will oblige me', has been held not to be a valid bill: Little v Slackford (1828) Mood & M 171; and cf Russell v Powell (1845) 14 M & W 418; Hamilton v Spottiswoode (1849) 4 Exch 200. But see Ruff v Webb (1794) 1 Esp 130 at 131 per Lord Kenyon CJ holding an instrument expressed in the form 'Mr Nelson will much oblige Mr Webb by paying to J Ruff or order 20 guineas on his account', to be a good bill.

Halsbury's Laws of England/FINANCIAL SERVICES AND INSTITUTIONS (VOLUME 48 (2008) 5TH EDITION, PARAS 1-589; VOLUME 49 (2008) 5TH EDITION, PARAS 590-1619; VOLUME 50 (2008) 5TH EDITION, PARAS 1620-2586)/6. BILLS OF EXCHANGE AND OTHER NEGOTIABLE INSTRUMENTS/(1) BILLS OF EXCHANGE, CHEQUES AND PROMISSORY NOTES/(v) Requirements of Form/1424. Unconditional order to pay.*

1424. Unconditional order to pay.

The order must be not only peremptory but unconditional<sup>1</sup>, for any condition made would at once import uncertainty. Thus a cheque<sup>2</sup> drawn on a bank payable on the condition of signing a particular receipt form at the foot of the cheque may be conditional<sup>3</sup>, unless it is clear that the words importing the condition are not addressed to the drawee-bank<sup>4</sup>. The addition of the words 'as per agreement' does not make a note conditional<sup>5</sup>; and the words 'to be retained', written by the drawer<sup>6</sup> of a cheque across its face, although they import a condition as between the drawer and the payee<sup>7</sup>, leave the order to pay addressed to the banker unconditional<sup>8</sup>.

An order to pay out of a particular fund is not an unconditional order, and an instrument<sup>9</sup> with such a provision is not therefore a good bill or note<sup>10</sup>. But an indication of a particular fund out of which the drawee is to reimburse himself, or of a particular account to be debited with the amount payable, does not by itself prevent an order being unconditional<sup>11</sup>, nor does the recital on the instrument of the transaction that gave rise to the instrument<sup>12</sup>. A note is not invalid by reason only that it contains also a pledge of collateral security, with authority to sell or dispose thereof<sup>13</sup>.

3 Bavins, Jnr and Sims v London and South Western Bank Ltd [1900] 1 QB 270, CA. The instrument in this case was in the following form: 'Pay to _____ provided that the receipt form at foot hereof is duly signed, stamped, and dated'. Then followed signatures of the officers of the company drawing the instrument, and the receipt form was as follows: 'Received from the _____ Co the above-named sum as per particulars furnished. This receipt is not to be detached from the cheque.'

4 Nathan v Ogdens Ltd (1905) 93 LT 553; affd on another point 94 LT 126, CA, where the instrument had at the foot 'The receipt at back hereof must be signed, which signature will be taken as an indorsement of this cheque', and on the back 'Received from Mr _____ (liquidator of Ogdens, Limited) this cheque for _____, being my share of the second and final bonus distribution of the company'. This was held by Lawrence J to be unconditional, 'for though the words are imperative in terms, they are not addressed to the bankers, and do not affect the nature of the order to them'. As to the meaning of 'drawee' see PARA 1406.

5 Jury v Barker (1858) EB & E 459. In Wirth v Weigel Leygonie & Co Ltd [1939] 3 All ER 712, du Parc LJ (sitting as an additional judge), held that in the surrounding circumstances a document in the following terms was not a promissory note within the meaning of the Bills of Exchange Act 1882: 'Reference AC 3 TR/WLIS Kischner, London, WC1. We confirm herewith that we undertake to pay irrevocably the sum of £200 to you or into your banking account on May 25, 1935, in respect of the above reference'.

Thus an order to pay 'out of the moneys now due or hereafter to become due to me under the will of my late father and before making any payment to me thereout' is not a valid bill (Fisher v Calvert (1879) 27 WR 301), nor is the promise to pay out of the proceeds of a sale a valid note: Hill v Halford (1801) 2 Bos & P 413. 11 Bills of Exchange Act 1882 ss 3(3)(a), 89. A note expressed 'Pay _____ £9 10s as my quarterly half-pay' has been held a valid note (Macleed v Snee (1727) 2 Stra 762), and so, too, has a bill drawn on the official liquidator of a company to pay to _____ £ _____ 'on account of moneys advanced by me to the company': Griffin v Weatherby (1868) LR 3 QB 753. BILLS OF EXCHANGE AND OTHER NEGOTIABLE INSTRUMENTS/(1) BILLS OF EXCHANGE, CHEQUES AND PROMISSORY NOTES/(v) Requirements of Form/1425. Signature of drawer.

1425. Signature of drawer.

A bill must be signed by the drawer<sup>1</sup>, for though a bill may be accepted before it has the drawer's signature<sup>2</sup>, it remains incomplete, and so cannot be issued<sup>3</sup>.

Where, however, a simple signature on a blank paper is delivered by the signer in order that it may be converted into a bill, it operates as a prima facie authority to fill it up as a complete bill for any amount using the signature for that of the drawer, the acceptor<sup>4</sup> or an indorser<sup>5</sup>, provided that the instrument<sup>6</sup> is filled up within a reasonable time<sup>7</sup> and strictly in accordance with the authority given<sup>8</sup>.

The drawer's or maker's<sup>9</sup> signature is usually to be found at the foot of the instrument, but in the case of a note it may be sufficient if the maker's name is inserted in the body thereof<sup>10</sup>.

A valid signature may be made in pencil<sup>11</sup>, or in the case of an illiterate person by his mark<sup>12</sup>.

Where a signature on a bill or note<sup>13</sup> is forged or placed thereon without the authority of the person<sup>14</sup> whose signature it purports to be, the forged or unauthorised signature is wholly inoperative, and no right to retain the instrument or to give a discharge for it<sup>15</sup> or to enforce payment of it against any party thereto can be acquired through or under that signature unless the party against whom it is sought to retain or enforce payment of the instrument is precluded from setting up the forgery or want of authority<sup>16</sup>, but this does not affect the ratification of an unauthorised signature not amounting to forgery<sup>17</sup>.

1426. Certainty as to drawee.

The drawee<sup>1</sup> must be named or otherwise indicated in a bill with reasonable certainty<sup>2</sup>, for it is clear that a holder<sup>3</sup> must know to whom he has to present the bill, whether for acceptance or for payment<sup>4</sup>.

A bill may be addressed to two or more drawees, whether they are partners or not, but an order addressed to two drawees in the alternative<sup>5</sup> or to two or more drawees in succession is not a bill of exchange<sup>6</sup>, because, in the interests of certainty, there cannot be a series of acceptors<sup>7</sup>.

1 As to the meaning of 'drawee' see PARA 1406.

2 Bills of Exchange Act 1882 s 6(1). As to the meaning of 'bill' see PARA 1405. This requisite is naturally complied with by naming the drawee precisely; but a bill expressed to be payable 'at _____', if accepted by the person who lives there, is a good bill (Gray v Milner (1819) 8 Taunt 739), and a bill addressed 'at Messrs _____' is a bill drawn on the firm of that name: Shuttleworth v Stephens (1808) 1 Camp 407. See also Mason v Lack (1929) 140 LT 696. In Haseldine v Winstanley [1936] 2 KB 101, [1936] 1 All ER 137, it was held that where an instrument not bearing the name of a drawee had been accepted, the acceptor's name might be filled in as drawee by virtue of the Bills of Exchange Act 1882 s 21. 4 As to presentment for acceptance see PARA 1509 et seq. As to presentment for payment see PARA 1516 et seq.

1427. Joint and several makers of a note.

A note<sup>1</sup> may be made by two or more makers<sup>2</sup>, and they may be liable on it jointly or jointly and severally according to its tenor<sup>3</sup>, but where there are two or more makers they cannot be liable in the alternative<sup>4</sup>. Where a note runs, 'I promise to pay', etc, and is signed by two or more persons<sup>5</sup>, it is deemed to be their joint and several note<sup>6</sup>; but if it runs, 'We promise to pay', etc, then it is their joint note only.

After a note is once issued<sup>7</sup> the name of a new maker cannot be added without invalidating the note<sup>8</sup>.

A. BEARER AND ORDER BILLS, ETC

1428. Meaning and effect.

An instrument<sup>1</sup> may be made payable: (1) to bearer<sup>2</sup>; or (2) to a specified person<sup>3</sup> or to his order<sup>4</sup>.

An instrument is payable to bearer which is simply so expressed, or on which the only or last indorsement<sup>5</sup> is an indorsement in blank<sup>6</sup>.

An instrument is payable to order which is payable to, or to the order of, a specified person, and does not contain words prohibiting transfer or indicating an intention that it should not be transferable<sup>7</sup>.

Where an instrument is made payable to the order of a specified person, and not to him or his order, it is nevertheless payable to him or his order at his option<sup>8</sup>.

Where an instrument is not payable to bearer, the payee must be named or otherwise indicated with reasonable certainty<sup>9</sup>, for in no other way can the drawee<sup>10</sup> of a bill<sup>11</sup>, if he accepts it, know to whom he may properly pay it, so as to discharge himself from all further liability<sup>12</sup>.

1 As to the meaning of 'instrument' see PARA 1402 note 1.

So, too, when a bill is made payable 'to order of X' and the word 'order' is struck out, the acceptor inserting over his acceptance the words 'in favour of drawer only', the character of the instrument is not altered, and the drawer may indorse the bill to another party as if no alteration had been made. By a majority of three to two the House of Lords held that the acceptance was general and not qualified, and the bill negotiable: Meyer & Co v Decroix, Verley et Cie [1891] AC 520, HL. ### 1429. No payee named.

An instrument<sup>1</sup> drawn in favour of 'cash or order' is not a bill of exchange<sup>2</sup>. Where the payee's<sup>3</sup> name is not filled in, it is open to any holder for value<sup>4</sup> to write his own name in<sup>5</sup> and sue on the instrument; but if his right to do so is contested, he must be prepared to prove that he was not acting outside the scope of his authority<sup>6</sup>. In the hands of any subsequent holder in due course<sup>7</sup> the instrument is valid and effectual for all purposes<sup>8</sup>.

Where a bill is in the form 'Pay to _____ order', and is indorsed in that form by the drawer<sup>9</sup>, the bill is equivalent to one drawn 'Pay to my order', and is a good bill<sup>10</sup>. Where a bill is in the form 'Pay to _____ or order', and is accepted or indorsed while in that state, the effect is doubtful<sup>11</sup>.

Where the payee<sup>1</sup> is named incorrectly, or where his name is misspelt, the instrument<sup>2</sup> is not invalidated, the payee being permitted to indorse the instrument as he was described, adding, if he thinks fit, his proper signature<sup>3</sup>.

It is sufficient that the payee should be indicated without being actually named if the indication is reasonably precise<sup>4</sup>.

Where there are two persons of the same name who are possible payees, the presumption will be that the one indorsing the instrument was the person intended<sup>5</sup>.

An instrument may be made payable to two or more payees jointly, or it may be made payable in the alternative to one of two, or one or some of several payees<sup>6</sup>.

BILLS OF EXCHANGE AND OTHER NEGOTIABLE INSTRUMENTS/(1) BILLS OF EXCHANGE, CHEQUES AND PROMISSORY NOTES/(vi) Classification of Instruments/A. BEARER AND ORDER BILLS, ETC/1431. Fictitious or non-existing payee.

1431. Fictitious or non-existing payee.

Where an instrument<sup>1</sup> is made payable to a fictitious or non-existing person<sup>2</sup>, it may be treated as payable to bearer<sup>3</sup>.

The words 'fictitious or non-existing person' have given occasion for much difference of opinion. Even now the meaning of 'non-existing' is not clear, but it would appear to mean a person who does not exist at the time the instrument is drawn, whether he ever existed previously or not<sup>4</sup>.

The meaning of 'fictitious' has been elucidated by a series of cases, the effect of which is that<sup>5</sup> whenever the name inserted as that of the payee<sup>6</sup> is so inserted by way of pretence merely, without any intention that payment shall only be made in conformity therewith, the payee is a fictitious person within the meaning of the statute, whether the name be that of an existing person or of one who has no existence<sup>7</sup>.

The meaning here placed upon 'fictitious' may be illustrated by the analogy of the phrases 'a fictitious indorsement' or 'a fictitious entry', by which it is clearly intended to imply not that the indorsement<sup>8</sup> or entry did not exist, but that they were brought into existence entirely for the purpose of deception<sup>9</sup>.

But where an instrument is made payable to a person known by the drawer<sup>10</sup> to be an existing person and intended by the drawer to be the payee, such a person is not to be deemed fictitious, even although the signature of the drawer has been obtained by fraud<sup>11</sup>.

4 Where a firm has been induced by one of its employees by means of fraudulent vouchers to sign cheques payable to one who was in fact a non-existing person, and the employee has cashed them for his own benefit, the firm cannot recover the value of the cheques from the banker who cashed them: Clutton v Attenborough & Son [1897] AC 90, HL. Quaere, however, whether the result would have been the same if the payee had been 'fictitious' instead of non-existing: at 93-94 per Lord Halsbury LC, commented on in Vinden v Hughes [1905] 1 KB 795 at 800 per Warrington J. ## B. INLAND AND FOREIGN BILLS AND NOTES

1432. Definition.

A bill of exchange<sup>1</sup> may be either an inland or a foreign bill<sup>2</sup>. An inland bill is a bill which is, or upon the face of it purports to be, (1) both drawn and payable within the British Islands<sup>3</sup>; or (2) drawn within the British Islands upon some person<sup>4</sup> resident therein. Any other bill is a foreign bill<sup>5</sup>. However, unless the contrary appears on the face of the bill, the holder<sup>6</sup> may treat it as an inland bill<sup>7</sup>.

A note<sup>8</sup> which is, or on the face of it purports to be, both made and payable within the British Islands, is an inland note. Any other note is a foreign note<sup>9</sup>.

1 As to the meaning of 'bill of exchange' see PARA 1405.

2 Bills of Exchange Act 1882 s 4.

3 For the purposes of the Bills of Exchange Act 1882, 'British Islands' means any part of the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Ireland, the islands of Man, Guernsey, Jersey, Alderney and Sark, and the islands adjacent to any of them being part of the dominions of Her Majesty: s 4(1). In this context, 'British Islands' is construed to exclude the Republic of Ireland: see the Irish Free State (Consequential Adaptation of Enactments) Order 1923, SR & O 1923/405, made under the Irish Free State (Consequential Provisions) Act 1922 (Session 2) s 6. ## C. SIGHT AND TIME BILLS, ETC

1433. Payable on demand, at sight or on presentation.

Bills and notes<sup>1</sup> are payable either on demand or at a fixed or determinable future time<sup>2</sup>. Cheques are always payable on demand<sup>3</sup>.

Bills and notes are payable on demand (1) when they are expressed to be payable on demand or at sight<sup>4</sup> or on presentation<sup>5</sup>; or (2) when no time for payment is expressed<sup>6</sup>. Such a bill or note may be presented for payment at any time in the option of the holder<sup>7</sup>, but it must be within a reasonable time after its issue<sup>8</sup> or making in order to render the drawer<sup>9</sup> liable<sup>10</sup> and within a reasonable time<sup>11</sup> after its indorsement<sup>12</sup> to render the indorser<sup>13</sup> liable<sup>14</sup>.

An instrument<sup>15</sup> payable on demand is deemed to be overdue when it appears on the face of it to have been in circulation for an unreasonable length of time<sup>16</sup>.

An instrument payable otherwise than on demand which has been accepted or indorsed when overdue is deemed, as regards the acceptor<sup>17</sup> or indorser concerned, to be an instrument payable on demand<sup>18</sup>.

1434. Time bills.

An instrument<sup>1</sup> is payable at a determinable future time when it is expressed to be payable: (1) at a fixed period after date<sup>2</sup> or sight<sup>3</sup>; (2) on or at a fixed period after the occurrence of a specified event which is certain to happen, though the time of happening may be uncertain<sup>4</sup>. It cannot be made payable simply after date or after sight, for that would involve uncertainty.

When the term 'month' is used it means a calendar month<sup>5</sup>. The period for which the bill<sup>6</sup> has to run is called the 'usance'.

1 As to the meaning of 'instrument' see PARA 1402 note 1.

2 As to the case of an instrument expressed to be payable at a fixed period after date but issued undated see PARA 1415.

3 Bills of Exchange Act 1882 ss 11(1), 89. As to the meanings of 'bill payable after sight' and 'note payable after sight' see PARA 1435.

BILLS OF EXCHANGE AND OTHER NEGOTIABLE INSTRUMENTS/(1) BILLS OF EXCHANGE, CHEQUES AND PROMISSORY NOTES/(vi) Classification of Instruments/C. SIGHT AND TIME BILLS, ETC/1435. Fixed period after sight.

1435. Fixed period after sight.

Where a bill<sup>1</sup> is payable at a fixed period after sight the time is to be calculated from the date of the acceptance<sup>2</sup> if the bill is accepted, and from the date of noting or protest<sup>3</sup> if the bill is noted or protested for non-acceptance or for non-delivery<sup>4</sup>.

In the case of a note<sup>5</sup> the phrase 'after sight' means after exhibition thereof to the maker<sup>6</sup> for the purpose of founding a claim for payment<sup>7</sup>. A note payable at a certain period after sight is payable at that period after presentment for sight<sup>8</sup>. A bill payable so many days after sight imposes different legal consequences from a bill payable so many days after acceptance; neither in its words nor in its potential effect is the latter form of bill expressed to be payable at a fixed period after sight<sup>9</sup>.

In the case of a bill payable after sight which has been accepted for honour, the date of its maturity is calculated from the date of the noting for non-acceptance, and not from the date of the acceptance for honour<sup>10</sup>.

BILLS OF EXCHANGE AND OTHER NEGOTIABLE INSTRUMENTS/(1) BILLS OF EXCHANGE, CHEQUES AND PROMISSORY NOTES/(vi) Classification of Instruments/C. SIGHT AND TIME BILLS, ETC/1436. Events from which time may be reckoned.

1436. Events from which time may be reckoned.

The specified event on, or at a fixed period after, the occurrence of which the instrument<sup>1</sup> is to be payable may be at any distance of time so long as it is an event which is certain to happen<sup>2</sup>.

The instrument may also be made payable at or at a fixed period after 'any feast, civil or religious', or at any 'fixed holiday', or at a fair, even if the precise date of the fair is not fixed at the time the instrument is drawn<sup>3</sup>, or 'from shipment' or 'from first presentation of documents'<sup>4</sup>.

The specified event may also be one of a public nature<sup>5</sup>, which for that very reason is held certain to take place.

However, the instrument must not be expressed to be payable on a contingency<sup>6</sup>, and the happening of the event does not cure the defect<sup>7</sup>.

1 As to the meaning of 'instrument' see PARA 1402 note 1.

2 Bills of Exchange Act 1882 ss 11(2), 89. Thus a note made payable six weeks after the death of the father of the maker is a good note: Colehan v Cooke (1742) Willes 393. So too is one made payable to one then a minor on his coming of age (Goss v Nelson (1757) 1 Burr 226), and one payable one year after notice (Clayton v Gosling (1826) 5 B & C 360), or two months after demand in writing (Price v Taylor (1860) 5 H & N 540).

3 See Colehan v Cooke (1742) Willes 393 at 399.

4 Novaknit Hellas SA v Kumar Bros International Ltd [1998] Lloyd's Rep Bank 287, CA.

5 As on the paying off of a ship of Her Majesty's Navy (Andrews v Franklin (1717) 1 Stra 24; Evans v Underwood (1749) 1 Wils 262), or on the receipt of prize money (R v Mackintosh (1800) 2 East PC 942 at 956). But the arrival of a ship at its destination is only a contingency: Palmer v Pratt (1824) 2 Bing 185.

6 Bills of Exchange Act 1882 ss 11, 89. Thus a note payable at _____ days after the marriage of the maker is not valid (Beardesly v Baldwin (1741) 2 Stra 1151; Pearson v Garrett (1693) 4 Mod Rep 242); nor is one to pay _____ on the death of a third party 'provided he leaves either of us sufficient to pay the said sum, or if we shall be otherwise able to pay it' (Roberts v Peake (1757) 1 Burr 323; see Leeds v Lancashire (1809) 2 Camp 205); nor is one to pay 90 days after sight or when realised (Alexander v Thomas (1851) 16 QB 333); nor, again, a note payable on or before a given date: Williamson v Rider [1963] 1 QB 89, [1962] 2 All ER 268, CA; Claydon v Bradley [1987] 1 All ER 522, [1987] 1 WLR 521, CA. The dissenting view of Ormerod LJ in Williamson v Rider above was preferred by the court in John Burrows Ltd v Subsurface Surveys Ltd [1968] SCR 607, 68 DLR (2d)

354, Can SC, where a note was held to be unconditional which provided that 'the maker may pay on account of principal from time to time the whole or any portion thereof upon giving thirty (30) days' notice', and also in Creative Press Ltd v Harman [1973] IR 313; and see Palmer v Pratt (1824) 2 Bing 185, cited in note 5.

Calculation of time of payment.

1437. Calculation of time of payment.

Where a bill<sup>1</sup> is not payable on demand, it is due and payable in all cases on the last day of the time of payment as fixed by the bill or, if that is a non-business day, on the succeeding business day<sup>2</sup>.

Where an instrument is payable at a fixed period after date<sup>3</sup>, after sight<sup>4</sup>, or after the happening of a specified event, the time of payment is determined by excluding the day from which the time is to begin to run and by including the day of payment<sup>5</sup>.

Where the time limited for doing any act or thing is less than three days, in reckoning time, non-business days are excluded<sup>6</sup>. Non-business days for the purposes of the Bills of Exchange Act 1882 are: (1) Saturday, Sunday, Good Friday and Christmas Day<sup>7</sup>; (2) a bank holiday<sup>8</sup> under the Banking and Financial Dealings Act 1971<sup>9</sup>; (3) a day appointed by royal proclamation as a public fast or thanksgiving day<sup>10</sup>; and (4) a day declared by an order under the Banking and Financial Dealings Act 1971<sup>11</sup> to be a non-business day<sup>12</sup>. Any other day is a business day<sup>13</sup>.

An instrument<sup>1</sup> must not be presented for payment until it is due<sup>2</sup>. Any earlier presentment is invalid<sup>3</sup>. If it is presented on the due date, and payment is refused, the instrument is dishonoured, and the holder<sup>4</sup> is entitled to give notice of dishonour, but no right of action accrues to the holder until the following day, for the acceptor<sup>5</sup> may, in spite of refusal in the first instance, make a valid payment at any time in the course of the day and if he does so the notice of dishonour becomes void<sup>6</sup>.

As the term 'month' means a calendar month<sup>1</sup>, an instrument drawn or made on the thirty-first of any month succeeded by a month with fewer days and payable one month after date<sup>2</sup> is nominally payable on the last day of the succeeding month, so that, for example, bills<sup>3</sup> payable one month after date and drawn on 29, 30 and 31 January are all nominally payable on 28 February, or, in the case of a leap year, 29 February.

(vii) Delivery

A. IN GENERAL

1440. Restriction on negotiability.

Bills of exchange or promissory notes<sup>1</sup> are always prima facie negotiable<sup>2</sup>. They may, however, contain words prohibiting transfer or indicating an intention that they should not be transferable<sup>3</sup>, and in such case they are only valid as between the parties<sup>4</sup>. An instrument<sup>5</sup> may also contain an express stipulation on the part of the drawer<sup>6</sup> or maker<sup>7</sup> or any indorser<sup>8</sup> either: (1) negating or limiting his own liability to the holder<sup>9</sup>; or (2) waiving as regards himself some or all of the holder's duties<sup>10</sup>. Thus any party may sign the instrument adding words such as 'sans recours' or 'without recourse to me'<sup>11</sup>, or words such as 'notice of dishonour waived'.

The negotiability of a cheque<sup>12</sup> is restricted by crossing it 'not negotiable'<sup>13</sup>, and a cheque crossed 'account payee' or 'a/c payee', with or without the word 'only', is not transferable (and, therefore, not negotiable)<sup>14</sup>.

1 As to the meanings of 'bill of exchange' and 'promissory note' see PARA 1405.

2 See PARA 1428. As to cheques see PARAS 1410 et seq, 1499 et seq.

3 See National Bank v Silke [1891] 1 QB 435, CA (where the mention of a particular account to be credited or debited was held not to be such an indication). #### 1441. Delivery essential.

Delivery<sup>1</sup> is essential to the issue of an instrument<sup>2</sup>, for by issue is meant the first delivery of the instrument complete in form to a person<sup>3</sup> who takes it as holder<sup>4</sup>. It is equally essential to the negotiation<sup>5</sup> of an instrument, for an instrument payable to bearer<sup>6</sup> must be transferred by delivery<sup>7</sup>, and, in the case of every other instrument, indorsement<sup>8</sup> is incomplete without it<sup>9</sup>. In fact, every contract on an instrument, whether it be the drawer's<sup>10</sup>, the maker's<sup>11</sup>, the acceptor's<sup>12</sup>, or an indorser's<sup>13</sup>, is incomplete and revocable until delivery is made in order to give effect to it<sup>14</sup>. An indorsement may pass title even though it is irregular<sup>15</sup>.

INSTRUMENTS/(1) BILLS OF EXCHANGE, CHEQUES AND PROMISSORY NOTES/(vii) Delivery/A. IN GENERAL/1442. What amounts to delivery.

1442. What amounts to delivery.

'Delivery' means transfer of possession, actual or constructive, from one person to another<sup>1</sup>. However, where an acceptance<sup>2</sup> is written<sup>3</sup> on a bill<sup>4</sup>, and the drawee<sup>5</sup> gives notice to or according to the direction of the person entitled to the bill that he has accepted it, the acceptor's<sup>6</sup> contract then becomes complete and irrevocable<sup>7</sup>. Where the drawee has accepted a bill, but given no intimation of acceptance to the drawer<sup>8</sup>, he is entitled to revoke his act<sup>9</sup>, and this is so even where a bill has been deposited with the drawee for acceptance, and the holder<sup>10</sup> on calling for the bill is told that the bill has been mislaid and is requested to call again on the following day<sup>11</sup>.

So, too, a note<sup>12</sup> is incomplete and revocable until delivery to the payee<sup>13</sup>, and such a note cannot be issued<sup>14</sup> to the payee by an executor after the maker's<sup>15</sup> decease<sup>16</sup>.

But see Re Whitaker (1889) 42 ChD 119 at 125, CA, per Cotton LJ, dissenting from Re Richards, Shenstowe v Brock above in so far, if at all, as it lays down the proposition that the payee of a promissory note without any consideration might in equity have a claim by way of debt.

INSTRUMENTS/(1) BILLS OF EXCHANGE, CHEQUES AND PROMISSORY NOTES/(vii) Delivery/A. IN GENERAL/1443. Mode of delivery.

1443. Mode of delivery.

Delivery<sup>1</sup> may be made by post, but where it is so made it is made at the risk of the sender<sup>2</sup>, unless the intended recipient has in some way authorised such means of delivery. When a bill<sup>3</sup> has once been posted, delivery is in English law irrevocable<sup>4</sup>, for a letter, once sent, cannot be reclaimed, but until actually entrusted to a postal operator<sup>5</sup> the property remains in the sender, so that where a letter containing a bill is closed and placed in the letter-box of an office, but stolen therefrom before being posted, the theft is from the sender<sup>6</sup>.

Part delivery does not complete the contract, so that when a note is cut in half, and the sender, having forwarded one half, decides not to send the other, he cannot be compelled to do so<sup>7</sup>.

When delivery has been made by mistake and it is desired to revoke it, this may be done by consent<sup>8</sup>.

1444. Delivery by or to agent.

As between the immediate parties, and as regards a remote party other than a holder in due course<sup>1</sup>, the delivery<sup>2</sup>, in order to be effectual, must be made either by, or under the authority<sup>3</sup> of, the party drawing, accepting or indorsing, as the case may be<sup>4</sup>.

Delivery made to an agent may afterwards be ratified by the principal even after a claim has been brought in the principal's name<sup>5</sup>.

B. CONDITIONAL DELIVERY

1445. Effect of conditional delivery.

As between immediate parties and as regards a remote party other than a holder in due course<sup>1</sup> delivery<sup>2</sup> may be shown to have been conditional or for a special purpose only, and not for the purpose of transferring the property in the bill<sup>3</sup>. But if a bill is in the hands of a holder in due course a valid delivery of the bill by all parties prior to him so as to make them liable to him is conclusively presumed<sup>4</sup>. And in every case where a bill is no longer in the possession of a party who has signed it as drawer<sup>5</sup>, acceptor<sup>6</sup> or indorser<sup>7</sup>, a valid and unconditional delivery by him is presumed until the contrary is proved<sup>8</sup>.

Although a conditional delivery is valid, the condition attaches exclusively to the delivery. It does not affect the rule that a bill must be drawn<sup>9</sup>, and a note<sup>10</sup> made, unconditionally<sup>11</sup>.

1446. Difference from escrow.

The delivery<sup>1</sup> of a bill<sup>2</sup> conditionally or for a special purpose is akin to the delivery of a deed in escrow, but there is this difference, that the deed must be delivered to a party outside the contract<sup>3</sup>, whereas the negotiable instrument<sup>4</sup> may be delivered to one of the parties to it<sup>5</sup>.

1447. Evidence of nature of delivery.

Evidence in writing that is contemporaneous<sup>1</sup> with or even subsequent to the date of the instrument<sup>2</sup> may be adduced, and may control the effect of it if there is consideration for the subsequent agreement<sup>3</sup>. Oral evidence may not be adduced to vary the terms of the instrument<sup>4</sup>, but may be adduced to deny the existence of consideration<sup>5</sup> or to show that an apparently complete contract is not so in fact<sup>6</sup>.

As between the parties there may be an agreement to renew the instrument<sup>7</sup>, but evidence of a parol agreement to such effect is not admissible, though such evidence may be admitted to show that the instrument was only delivered as an escrow, or that it is not to take effect as a contract until some condition is fulfilled<sup>8</sup>.

The delivery<sup>1</sup> by the signer of a simple signature upon a blank paper in order that the paper may be converted into a bill or note<sup>2</sup> operates as a prima facie authority to fill the paper up as a complete instrument<sup>3</sup> for any amount, using the signature for that of the drawer<sup>4</sup>, acceptor<sup>5</sup>, maker<sup>6</sup> or indorser<sup>7</sup>. ### 1451. Drawee as acceptor.

The signature of any person other than the drawee<sup>1</sup> or his agent, though purporting to be an acceptance<sup>2</sup>, is not one in fact<sup>3</sup>, nor is the marking or certification of a cheque<sup>4</sup> an acceptance<sup>5</sup>. Where a bill<sup>6</sup> is accepted for the drawee by his agent, instead of by the drawee himself, the acceptance is good<sup>7</sup>. The hand that holds the pen is immaterial if in fact there is authority to sign<sup>8</sup>. Where a bill is addressed to an agent, and the agent accepts, the principal is not bound, even if the agent accepts the bill in the principal's name and by his authority<sup>9</sup>.

8 But the fact of agency must be proved if necessary (see Lindus v Bradwell (1848) 5 CB 583; where a husband's promise to pay a bill drawn on him and accepted by his wife in her own name was held sufficient evidence of his having either authorised or ratified the acceptance). However, the Bills of Exchange Act s 25 relates only to rights and liabilities whilst the bill is current, and where it has been in fact paid, though signed without authority, the section does not operate or give a remedy to the principal: Morison v London County and Westminster Bank Ltd [1914] 3 KB 356 at 367-368, CA; but see Midland Bank Ltd v Reckitt [1933] AC 1 at 16, HL, per Lord Atkin. ### 1453. Drawee not liable without accepting.

The party primarily liable on a bill of exchange<sup>1</sup> is the acceptor<sup>2</sup>; that is the person to whom the order to pay is addressed. He is on the face of the bill as drawn, the drawee<sup>3</sup>; but as such he is not, apart from special contract, by English law under any obligation to accept the bill<sup>4</sup>. A drawee who does not accept is not, therefore, liable on the bill<sup>5</sup>. In English law, a banker on whom a cheque<sup>1</sup> is drawn by a customer in legal form is bound to honour the customer's cheques up to the amount to which he is entitled to draw<sup>2</sup>. But the

Whenever a bill<sup>1</sup> is accepted the acceptor<sup>2</sup> is and remains the party primarily liable on the bill whatever may happen to the other parties<sup>3</sup>, and whether any of the other parties are discharged or not<sup>4</sup>. Should an indorser<sup>5</sup> have to pay the bill, the acceptor by the fact of his acceptance<sup>6</sup> is liable to indemnify him<sup>7</sup>.

In the case of a bill drawn for the accommodation of another party, the actual position differs from that appearing on its face<sup>8</sup>. The acceptor is only surety for the party accommodated, so that he is entitled to be indemnified by him, and if a holder<sup>9</sup> has recovered part of the amount due from the party accommodated, he can only recover the balance from the acceptor<sup>10</sup>.

If the instrument is payable to the order of the drawer, the acceptor cannot deny to a holder in due course the capacity of the drawer to indorse at the time of such indorsement<sup>6</sup>, nor if the instrument is payable to the order of a third party can he deny the existence of such third party or his capacity to indorse at the time of such indorsement<sup>7</sup>; but in neither case is he bound to admit the genuineness<sup>8</sup> or validity<sup>9</sup> of the indorsement<sup>10</sup>.

1458. Acceptance by partners, etc.

When a bill<sup>1</sup> is addressed personally to one who is also a partner in a firm, and he accepts it in the name of the firm, it is nevertheless not the firm's acceptance<sup>2</sup>, but his own<sup>3</sup>. So, too, when a bill is addressed to a firm, and a partner accepts the bill in the name of the firm, adding his own name, the acceptance is that of the firm, not of the partner<sup>4</sup>. A bill addressed to a firm, and accepted by one member of the firm in his own name is an acceptance by that member of the firm, and he is liable as such acceptor<sup>5</sup>. An acceptance in its true style by a firm wrongly addressed is a valid acceptance<sup>6</sup>.

A man trading in a name other than his own may accept in either name<sup>7</sup>.

A bill addressed to a married woman as 'Mrs John Smith' would be properly accepted by her in the style 'Emma Smith, wife of John Smith'.

An acceptor cannot escape liability to the payee<sup>8</sup> on the ground that his acceptance was given under a mistake unless, perhaps, the mistake was fundamental to the transaction<sup>9</sup>.

1459. When bill may be accepted.

A bill<sup>1</sup> may be accepted before it has been signed by the drawer<sup>2</sup> or while otherwise incomplete<sup>3</sup>.

It may also be accepted when it is overdue or after it has been dishonoured by a previous refusal to accept or by non-payment<sup>4</sup>; but a bill accepted when it is overdue is deemed as regards the acceptor<sup>5</sup> to be payable on demand<sup>6</sup>.

If a bill payable after sight<sup>7</sup> is dishonoured by non-acceptance<sup>8</sup>, and the drawee<sup>9</sup> afterwards accepts it, the holder<sup>10</sup> is entitled, in the absence of any agreement to the contrary, to have the bill accepted as of the date of the first presentment to the drawee for acceptance<sup>11</sup>.

C. FORM AND NATURE OF ACCEPTANCE

1461. Written, signed and delivered.

The acceptance<sup>1</sup> must be written<sup>2</sup> on the bill<sup>3</sup> and be signed by the drawee<sup>4</sup>. It is not complete until delivery<sup>5</sup> or notification<sup>6</sup>.

Any appropriate words may be made use of by the drawee to convey his assent to the drawer's<sup>7</sup> order, but his mere signature, without additional words, is sufficient<sup>8</sup>.

An acceptance is usually written across the face of the bill, but it may be anywhere on the face and perhaps even on the back<sup>9</sup>.

An acceptance must in no case state that the drawee will fulfil his obligation otherwise than by payment of money<sup>10</sup>.

1462. General and qualified acceptances.

An acceptance<sup>1</sup> may be either general or qualified<sup>2</sup>. A general acceptance assents without qualification to the order of the drawer<sup>3</sup>. A qualified acceptance in express terms varies the effect of the bill<sup>4</sup> as drawn<sup>5</sup>.

If the acceptor<sup>6</sup> desires to qualify his acceptance, he must do so in definite terms on the face of the bill, so that anyone taking the bill may clearly understand that it was accepted subject to an express qualification<sup>7</sup>. In the absence of such an express qualification, the acceptance will be deemed absolute<sup>8</sup>.

In London and Northern Trading Co Ltd v Arcos Ltd (1933) 38 Com Cas 242, HL, the Court of Appeal's judgment that bills should have been accepted subject to the provisions of the contracts under which they were to be accepted was varied in the House of Lords, Lord Buckmaster stating, at 247, that 'such a form of acceptance, if it were possible under the Bills of Exchange Act, would destroy the whole negotiability of the document'.

1463. Kinds of qualified acceptance.

An acceptance may be qualified<sup>1</sup> in a variety of ways: (1) it may be conditional, that is, it may make payment of the bill<sup>2</sup> by the acceptor<sup>3</sup> dependent on the fulfilment of a condition stated by him in his acceptance<sup>4</sup>; or (2) it may be partial, that is, an acceptance to pay part only of the amount for which the bill is drawn<sup>5</sup>; or (3) it may be local, that is, to pay only at a particular specified place; unless, however, the acceptance expressly states that the bill is to be paid there and there only, it will be regarded as a general acceptance<sup>6</sup>; or (4) it may be qualified as to time<sup>7</sup>; or (5) it may be qualified by being accepted by one or more of the drawees<sup>8</sup>, but not by all<sup>9</sup>.

1 As to the meaning of 'qualified acceptance' see PARA 1462.

2 As to the meaning of 'bill' see PARA 1405. The provisions of the Bills of Exchange Act 1882 in so far as they relate to acceptance do not apply to promissory notes: s 89(3)(b).

3 As to the meaning of 'acceptor' see PARA 1406.

4 Bills of Exchange Act 1882 s 19(2)(a). For example, the acceptance may be to pay when goods conveyed to the drawee are sold (Smith v Abbot (1741) 2 Stra 1152), or when in cash for the cargo of a ship (Julian v Shobrooke (1754) 2 Wils 9). See also Pierson v Dunlop (1777) 2 Cowp 571; Banbury v Lisset (1744) 2 Stra 1211; Smith v Vertue (1860) 30 LJCP 56.

5 Bills of Exchange Act 1882 s 19(2)(b). An acceptance 'as far as £100 part thereof' of a bill for £127 is a valid, though qualified, acceptance: Wegersloff v Keene (1719) 1 Stra 214. So, too, when the drawee accepted a bill partly in cash, partly in bills, the acceptance was held to be a valid, though qualified, acceptance in regard to the part accepted in cash: Petit v Benson (1697) Comb 452.

6 Bills of Exchange Act 1882 s 19(2)(c). As to the meaning of 'general acceptance' see PARA 1462. When bills are accepted 'payable at Messrs _____' (the drawee's bankers), this is a general acceptance, but when stated to be 'payable at Messrs _____ and not elsewhere', the acceptance is qualified: Sebag v Ahitbol (1816) 4 M & S 462 at 466. The word 'only' need not be actually used: Higgins v Nichols (1839) 7 Dowl 551. See also Halstead v Skelton (1843) 5 QB 86; Sproat v Matthews (1786) 1 Term Rep 182; Rhodes v Gent (1821) 5 B & Ald 244. See also Ex p Hayward (1887) 3 TLR 687, DC (acceptance in London of bill payable in Ceylon was a general acceptance); Bank Polski v KJ Mulder & Co [1942] 1 KB 497, [1942] 1 All ER 396, CA (acceptances of bills drawn in Poland and expressed to be payable in Amsterdam were general acceptances and not local as the bills contained no express stipulation that they were payable only in Amsterdam and not elsewhere).

7 Bills of Exchange Act 1882 s 19(2)(d). When a bill was dated 28 November 1836, payable 42 months after date, and was accepted 'on the condition of its being renewed until 28 November 1844, without interest payable by me at Messrs _____', the acceptance was held to be good though qualified by time: Russell v Phillips (1850) 14 QB 891.

1464. Holder and qualified acceptance.

The holder<sup>1</sup> of a bill<sup>2</sup> may refuse to take a qualified acceptance<sup>3</sup>, and if he does not obtain an unqualified acceptance he may treat the bill as dishonoured by non-acceptance<sup>4</sup>.

If he consents to take a qualified acceptance, he should at once inform the drawer<sup>5</sup> and indorser<sup>6</sup>, since in such case, if the drawer or an indorser has not expressly or impliedly authorised him to take it or does not subsequently assent to it, the drawer or indorser in question is discharged from liability on the bill<sup>7</sup>.

When, however, the drawer or indorser has had notice of the qualified acceptance, and does not within a reasonable time dissent from it, he is deemed to have assented to it<sup>8</sup>.

When, by the terms of a qualified acceptance, presentment for payment is required, the acceptor<sup>9</sup>, in the absence of an express stipulation to that effect, is not discharged by the omission to present the bill for payment on the day that it matures<sup>10</sup>.

1 As to the meaning of 'holder' see PARA 1407.

2 As to the meaning of 'bill' see PARA 1405. The provisions of the Bills of Exchange Act 1882 in so far as they relate to presentment for acceptance do not apply to promissory notes: s 89(3)(a).

3 As to the meaning of 'qualified acceptance' see PARA 1462.

4 Bills of Exchange Act 1882 s 44(1). As to dishonour by non-acceptance see PARA 1515. When a bill is a foreign bill (as to which see PARA 1432), and the qualification attaching to the acceptance is 'partial', the holder cannot treat the bill as dishonoured. He can only protest the bill in respect of the balance which was not accepted: see s 44(2). As to protest see PARA 1538 et seq.

5 As to the meaning of 'drawer' see PARA 1406.

6 As to the meaning of 'indorser' see PARA 1407 note 8.

CAPACITY AND AUTHORITY/1465. Capacity to incur liability and authority to sign.*

(ix) Capacity and Authority of Parties

A. CAPACITY AND AUTHORITY

1465. Capacity to incur liability and authority to sign.

In general, capacity to incur liability as a party to a bill or note<sup>1</sup> is co-extensive with capacity to contract<sup>2</sup>.

The signature of any party possessing such capacity may be written<sup>3</sup> either by himself or by some other person<sup>4</sup> acting by or under his authority<sup>5</sup>.

The person to whom liability is to attach must have capacity to sign. The person who actually signs must, if he is not the person liable, have his authority to do so. Capacity means power to contract so as to bind oneself; authority means power to contract on behalf of another so as to bind him. Capacity is a matter of law; authority, as derived from the act of the parties, is usually a question of fact.

1 As to the meanings of 'bill' and 'note' see PARA 1405.

2 Bills of Exchange Act 1882 ss 22(1), 89. As to capacity of parties generally to contract see CONTRACT vol 9(1) (Reissue) PARA 630. As to the capacity of a company to become a party to a bill see the Bills of Exchange Act 1882 s 22(1) proviso; and PARA 1466.

1466. Corporations.

A company<sup>1</sup> has power to issue or accept negotiable instruments<sup>2</sup> where on a fair consideration of its memorandum and articles of association such a power is expressly or impliedly conferred<sup>3</sup>.

Unless the power is expressly or impliedly given by the Act of Parliament<sup>4</sup>, charter, or other instrument creating it, a non-trading company or corporation is not able to incur liability on a bill of exchange or promissory note<sup>5</sup>.

Where, however, an instrument has been drawn or indorsed by such a non-trading company or corporation the holder<sup>6</sup> is entitled to have the instrument paid and to enforce it against any other party to it<sup>7</sup>.

A bill of exchange or promissory note<sup>8</sup> is deemed to have been made, accepted or indorsed on behalf of a company if made, accepted or indorsed in the name of, or by or on behalf or on account of, the company by any person acting under its authority<sup>9</sup>. Where the Bills of Exchange Act 1882 requires any instrument or writing<sup>10</sup> to be signed, it is sufficient if the instrument or writing is sealed with the corporate seal, although nothing in the Act requires the bill or note of a corporation to be under seal<sup>11</sup>.

1 I.e. a company as defined by the Companies Act 1985 s 735(1) (prospectively repealed) (as to replacement provisions see the Companies Act 2006 ss 1(1), 1171) (see COMPANIES vol 14 (2009) PARA 1 et seq).

NOTES 1, 3, 9--Repeal of Companies Act 1985 ss 35-35B, 37, 735(1) in force 1 October 2009: SI 2008/2860.

Halsbury's Laws of England/FINANCIAL SERVICES AND INSTITUTIONS (VOLUME 48 (2008) 5TH EDITION, PARAS 1-589; VOLUME 49 (2008) 5TH EDITION, PARAS 590-1619; VOLUME 50 (2008) 5TH EDITION, PARAS 1620-2586)/6. BILLS OF EXCHANGE AND OTHER NEGOTIABLE INSTRUMENTS/(1) BILLS OF EXCHANGE, CHEQUES AND PROMISSORY NOTES/(ix) Capacity and Authority of Parties/A. CAPACITY AND AUTHORITY/1467. Partnerships.

1467. Partnerships.

A partner in a trading firm, as distinct from a non-trading firm<sup>1</sup>, has full power to incur liability on behalf of his firm as a party to a bill or note<sup>2</sup> for any purpose of the firm that falls within (but not outside<sup>3</sup>) the scope of its ordinary business<sup>4</sup>, and the signature by him of the firm's name will bind all his partners equally with himself<sup>5</sup>. Accepting bills in blank is not a mercantile business transaction the power to do which can be implied from the existence of an ordinary trading partnership<sup>6</sup>.

If a partner signs a joint and several note for himself and his partners, he cannot bind them severally<sup>7</sup>, but he does bind himself and them jointly<sup>8</sup> and himself separately<sup>9</sup>. If a bill is accepted by a partner in the name of the firm, but in fraud, the onus is on the holder<sup>10</sup> as against the other partner of showing that value was given for the bill<sup>11</sup>.

Where two partners without knowledge of one another sign the firm's name on two separate bills to satisfy the same debt, the firm may be liable on both bills should they pass into the hands of holders in due course<sup>12</sup>.

1 A partner in a non-trading firm has no authority to draw bills binding the partnership unless expressly given authority; see Wheatley v Smithers [1906] 2 KB 321, DC (revsd on appeal, but not on this point [1907] 2 KB 684, CA); cf Higgins v Beauchamp [1914] 3 KB 1192 at 1194-1195, DC; and the Partnership Act 1890 s 6 proviso (see PARTNERSHIP vol 79 (2008) PARA 58). Whether or not the firm is a trading firm must in each case depend on the nature of the business: Dickinson v Valpy (1829) 10 B & C 128. As to bills of exchange and the powers of a partner to bind his firm see PARTNERSHIP vol 79 (2008) PARA 60.

3 Re Cunningham & Co Ltd, Simpson's Claim (1887) 36 ChD 532. As a partner has already full powers to bind his firm on partnership bills, it seems that if a fellow-partner who is going abroad grants him a power of attorney to deal with bills, such power applies to non-partnership bills only: Attwood v Munnings (1827) 7 B & C 278.

4 See the Partnership Act 1890 ss 5, 6; and PARTNERSHIP vol 79 (2008) PARA 45 et seq.

B. RESTRICTIONS ON CAPACITY AND AUTHORITY

1469. Restrictions.

The principal instances in which there is want of capacity are: (1) persons of unsound mind<sup>1</sup>; (2) minors<sup>2</sup>; (3) non-trading corporations<sup>3</sup>. In addition to these there are certain classes to which special disabilities attach.

Previously the clergy were debarred from engaging in trade for lucre or profit<sup>4</sup>, but this prohibition only rendered them liable to ecclesiastical punishments and did not make void any instruments to which they have become parties<sup>5</sup>. They could not escape liability on instruments even if the other parties to the instrument knew that they were dealing with clergymen<sup>6</sup>. The capacity of a clergyman to incur liability on a bill is thus the same as that of any other individual, and is not affected by his special status.

Bankers and banking companies in England and Wales other than the Bank of England have, since 1844, been prohibited from the issue of bills or notes<sup>7</sup>, which in legal effect are payable to bearer on demand, except, under certain conditions, where they did so at the time the statute was passed<sup>8</sup>.

Restrictions have been imposed on taking and negotiating instruments in connection with consumer credit and consumer hire agreements<sup>9</sup>.

1470. Persons of unsound mind, etc.

Contracts made by mentally disordered persons<sup>1</sup> are voidable, not void<sup>2</sup>. By their signature to a bill or note<sup>3</sup> such persons, therefore, incur no liability to anyone who is aware of their condition, but that condition is not a defence against a holder for value<sup>4</sup> without notice<sup>5</sup>.

1 As to the definition and classification of mental disorder see the Mental Health Act 1983 s 1; and MENTAL HEALTH vol 30(2) (Reissue) PARA 402.

1471. Minors.

A minor<sup>1</sup> cannot make himself liable as either drawer<sup>2</sup>, acceptor<sup>3</sup> or indorser<sup>4</sup> of a bill of exchange or promissory note<sup>5</sup>, even if it be for necessities supplied<sup>6</sup>; but if the instrument<sup>7</sup> has been drawn or indorsed by him, the holder<sup>8</sup> is entitled to receive payment and to enforce the instrument as against any other party to it<sup>9</sup>.

A postdated cheque<sup>10</sup> drawn by a minor payable after his coming of age appears to stand on the same footing as a cheque drawn by a minor dated before his coming of age<sup>11</sup>. Where, however, a bill is drawn during the minority of the drawee<sup>12</sup>, but accepted by him after he attains his majority, it is valid and may be enforced against him<sup>13</sup>.

1472. Restrictions on taking and negotiating instruments in connection with consumer credit and consumer hire agreements.

A creditor or owner must not take a negotiable instrument<sup>1</sup>, other than a bank note<sup>2</sup> or cheque<sup>3</sup>, in discharge of any sum payable by the debtor or hirer under a regulated consumer credit or consumer hire agreement<sup>4</sup>, or by any person as surety in relation to the agreement<sup>5</sup>.

The creditor or owner must not negotiate a cheque taken by him in discharge of a sum payable as mentioned above except to a banker<sup>6</sup>.

The creditor or owner must not take a negotiable instrument as security for the discharge of any sum payable as mentioned above<sup>7</sup>.

1 As to the meaning of 'negotiable instrument' see PARA 1402.

2 As to the meaning of 'bank note' see PARA 1469 note 7.

3 As to the meaning of 'cheque' see PARA 1405.

5 Consumer Credit Act 1974 s 123(1)(b). A person takes a negotiable instrument as security for the discharge of a sum if the sum is intended to be paid in some other way, and the negotiable instrument is to be presented for payment only if the sum is not paid in that way: s 123(4). The provisions in s 123 do not apply where the regulated agreement is a non-commercial agreement (s 123(5)) or where the regulated agreement has a connection with a country outside the United Kingdom provided that the goods are hired in the course of the hirer's business: s 123(6); Consumer Credit (Negotiable Instruments) (Exemption) Order 1984, SI 1984/435.

After any contravention of the Consumer Credit Act 1974 s 123 has occurred in relation to a sum payable by the debtor or hirer under a regulated consumer credit or consumer hire agreement, the agreement under which the sum is payable is enforceable against the debtor or hirer on an order of the county court only: ss 124(1), 189(1). After any contravention has occurred in relation to a sum payable by a surety the security is enforceable on an order of the county court only: ss 124(2), 189(1). Where an application for an order under s 124(2) is dismissed, s 106 (ineffective securities) applies: s 124(3).

For consequences of contravention see s 125(1), (3); and note 4.

6 Consumer Credit Act 1974 s 123(2). 'Banker' has the same meaning as in the Bills of Exchange Act 1882: see the Consumer Credit Act 1974 s 123(2); and PARA 1403 note 7. Negotiating a cheque in contravention of the provision constitutes a defect in his title: s 125(2).

7 Consumer Credit Act 1974 s 123(3). A person who takes a negotiable instrument in contravention of s 123(1) or s 123(3) is not a holder in due course and is not entitled to enforce the instrument: s 125(1). If a person mentioned in s 123(1)(a) or s 123(1)(b) becomes liable to the holder in due course of an instrument taken in contravention of s 123(1) or s 123(3), or taken from a person mentioned in s 123(1)(a) or s 123(1)(b) and negotiated in contravention of s 123(2), the creditor or owner must indemnify him: s 125(3). Nothing in the Consumer Credit Act 1974 affects the rights of the holder in due course of any negotiable instrument: s 125(4).

1473. Sufficiency of signature by agent.

Where, by the Bills of Exchange Act 1882, any instrument<sup>1</sup> or writing<sup>2</sup> is required to be signed by any person<sup>3</sup>, it is not necessary that he should sign it with his own hand, but it is sufficient if his signature is written on it by some other person by or under his authority<sup>4</sup>. In this case the person signing is an agent. The authority to sign may be created in any terms; it may be express or implied<sup>5</sup>, and it may be for a special purpose or not.

However, a general authority to transact business and to receive and discharge debts may not in itself confer upon an agent the power of accepting and indorsing bills or notes<sup>6</sup> so as to charge his principal<sup>7</sup>.

SIGNATURE BY AGENT/1474. Mode of signing by agent.*

1474. Mode of signing by agent.

An agent may simply sign in the name of his principal, or indicate, by signing by procuration or otherwise, that he does so in the capacity of agent. The important points are the signature and the authority to place it on the instrument, which are matters of evidence<sup>1</sup>.

When the agent signs by procuration, the form of the signature operates as notice that he has but a limited authority to sign, and the principal is only bound by such signature if the agent in so signing was acting within the actual limits of his authority<sup>2</sup>. But where the agent has authority, the fact that he may have abused his authority does not affect the rights of a bona fide holder for value<sup>3</sup> of a negotiable instrument<sup>4</sup> indorsed by him apparently within his authority<sup>5</sup>. Where, however, an agent draws a cheque<sup>6</sup> per pro outside the scope of his authority, the principal is not liable on the instrument, although he must account to the drawee<sup>7</sup> for any money which has thereby come into his possession<sup>8</sup>.

An agent does not bind his principal if he signs in his own name<sup>9</sup> unless he is acting under a power of attorney granted by his principal<sup>10</sup>.

B. LIABILITY OF AGENT

1476. Liability of agent.

The signature of an agent in his own name with the mere addition of words describing him as an agent or as filling a representative character does not exempt him from personal liability, but he may escape liability if he adds words indicating that he signs for or on behalf of a principal or in a representative character<sup>1</sup>. This is the case where he is sued by a party who is in fact aware of his true position<sup>2</sup>.

If the agent signs an instrument<sup>3</sup> in his principal's name, he is not liable on the instrument itself, even though he has signed without his principal's authority; but he may be made liable to the holder<sup>4</sup> in proceedings for deceit or breach of warranty of authority<sup>5</sup>.

The relevant decisions bearing upon persons signing in a representative capacity are as follows: a note for the payment of money lent to a parish, and signed by the churchwardens as such, has been held to bind them personally (Rew v Pettet (1834) 1 Ad & El 196), and drafts on a banker by inclosure commissioners have had a similar effect: Eaton v Bell (1821) 5 B & Ald 34. Where four directors of a company signed a promissory note in the following form, 'We the directors of _____ promise to pay _____', they were held liable personally, even though the seal of the company was placed in one corner of the note and purported to be witnessed by another party: Dutton v Marsh (1871) LR 6 QB 361; and see Courtauld v Sanders (1867) 16 LT 562. But where the secretary of a company signed a promissory note thus, 'for the _____ company, John Sizer, secretary', he was held not to be personally liable (Alexander v Sizer (1869) LR 4 Exch 102); but see Gray v Raper (1866) LR 1 CP 694; and M'Meekin v Easton (1889) 16 R 363, Ct of Sess (where a note in the form, 'We, the undersigned, in the name and on the behalf of the Reformed Presbyterian Church, Stranraer, promise to pay', was held to bind the signatories personally).

In Chapman v Smethurst [1909] 1 KB 927, CA, a director was held not to be personally liable upon a promissory note beginning 'I promise to pay', and signed 'JHS's Laundry and Dye Works Ltd, JHS Managing Director'; but in Elliott v Bax-Ironside [1925] 2 KB 301, the Court of Appeal without comment on Chapman v Smethurst held the directors personally responsible as indorsees on a bill accepted in the form: 'Accepted payable at the W Bank-- AB and CD directors. Fashions Ltd', and signed on the back 'Fashions Ltd, AB and CD directors'; and in Kettle v Dunster and Wakefield (1927) 138 LT 158, a receiver on behalf of debenture holders who drew bills signing himself 'AB Receiver, Ford Paper Works (1923) Ltd', was held to be a party to the bills and entitled to sue upon them. See also Britannia Electric Lamp Works Ltd v D Mandler & Co and Mandler [1939] 2 KB 129, [1939] 2 All ER 469 (signature of D Mandler held not to be the signature of the company); Rolfe Lubell & Co v Keith [1979] 1 All ER 860, sub nom Rolfe Lubbell & Co v Keith [1979] 2 Lloyd's Rep 75, DC (words 'for and on behalf of the company' and 'director' held not to vary a clear agreement between payee and indorsee that indorsee would indorse bills in a personal capacity); Bondina Ltd v Rollaway Shower Blinds Ltd [1986] 1 All ER 564, [1986] 1 WLR 517, CA (director who signed a cheque printed with a company name and bank account number held to have a plainly arguable defence notwithstanding that he had given no indication that he was signing as a representative of the company and not on his own behalf); Novaknit Hellas SA v Kumar Bros International Ltd [1998] Lloyd's Rep Bank 287, CA (agents liable on bills which omitted the word 'Limited' from the company's name).

On the death of the holder of a bill or note the executors or administrators may indorse so as to negative personal liability: Bills of Exchange Act 1882 s 31(5). BILLS OF EXCHANGE AND OTHER NEGOTIABLE INSTRUMENTS/(1) BILLS OF EXCHANGE, CHEQUES AND PROMISSORY NOTES/(xi) Consideration/A. SUFFICIENCY OF CONSIDERATION/1478. Presumption of consideration.

(xi) Consideration

A. SUFFICIENCY OF CONSIDERATION

1478. Presumption of consideration.

Bills of exchange and promissory notes<sup>1</sup>, unlike other forms of simple contract, are presumed to stand upon the basis of a valuable consideration<sup>2</sup>. Not only is this so in the case of the immediate parties to the bill or note, but it is so also in the case of those who become parties to it subsequently by indorsement<sup>3</sup>, for every party whose signature appears on a bill is prima facie deemed to have become a party to it for value<sup>4</sup>.

The effect of the presumption, therefore, is to shift the burden of proof from the claimant who relies upon the instrument to the defendant who impugns it.

But when, in an action<sup>5</sup> on a bill or note, it is admitted or proved that the acceptance<sup>6</sup>, issue<sup>7</sup> or subsequent negotiation<sup>8</sup> of the instrument<sup>9</sup> is affected with fraud, duress, or force and fear, or illegality<sup>10</sup>, the burden of proof is shifted unless and until the holder<sup>11</sup> proves that, subsequent to the alleged fraud or illegality, value has been given for the instrument in good faith<sup>12</sup>.

1 As to the meanings of 'bill of exchange' and 'promissory note' see PARA 1405.

2 See PARA 1401 head (1).

However, the provision in the Bills of Exchange Act 1882 s 30(2) for shifting the burden of proof does not apply to a case where the holder seeking to enforce the instrument is the person to whom it was originally delivered and in whose hands it remains: Talbot v Von Boris [1911] 1 KB 854, CA. When the burden of proof is shifted, it seems that the plaintiff must give evidence as to both value and good faith: Tatam v Haslar above; and see Berrett v Smith, Smith v Brenkley [1965] NZLR 460. ### 1479. Meaning of consideration.

Valuable consideration for an instrument<sup>1</sup> may be constituted by either: (1) any consideration sufficient to support a simple contract<sup>2</sup>; or (2) an antecedent debt or liability<sup>3</sup>. In the absence of valuable consideration a claim on an instrument, as on any other simple contract, will fail<sup>4</sup>.

1 As to the meaning of 'instrument' see PARA 1402 note 1.

2 Bills of Exchange Act 1882 s 27(1)(a). As to consideration sufficient for simple contracts see CONTRACT vol 9(1) (Reissue) PARA 727 et seq. Forebearing, at the request of the promisor, to claim under a promissory note during the currency of a postdated cheque given as collateral security for the money due under the note is sufficient consideration to support an action on the cheque by the payee: Elkington v Cooke-Hill (1914) 30 TLR 670. If the liability is that of a third party there must be some relationship between the receipt of the instrument and the antecedent debt or liability such as a forbearance or promise to forbear, express or implied, on the part of the recipient in regard to the third party's debt or liability: Oliver v Davis [1949] 2 KB 727, [1949] 2 All ER 353, CA; applying Crears v Hunter (1887) 19 QBD 341, CA. Where a note was originally given for no consideration, the renewal of the note from time to time, even with interest added, will not make it valid: Edwards v Chancellor (1888) 52 JP 454, DC. Neither in law nor in equity can the payee of a promissory note, which appears on the facts before the court to be voluntary, have any claim as a creditor: Re Whitaker (1889) 42 ChD 119 at 124, CA, per Cotton LJ.

Where by a misrepresentation, although innocent, the defendant is induced to give a note, there is no valid consideration: Southall v Rigg, Forman v Wright (1851) 11 CB 481. A merely moral obligation is insufficient to support a bill (Eastwood v Kenyon (1840) 11 Ad & El 438); but the promise to give up a will, thought by the holder to be invalid, is sufficient (Smith v Smith (1863) 13 CBNS 418). So, too, is the existence of a debt which could not in fact be recovered because it was statute barred (La Touche v La Touche (1865) 3 H & C 576); or the destruction of a right of action in conversion against a thief who later returned the securities which he had stolen (London and County Banking Co v London and River Plate Bank (1888) 21 QBD 535, CA).

1481. Total or partial failure of consideration.

In the absence, or subsequent failure, of consideration<sup>1</sup>, the instrument<sup>2</sup> is invalid as between parties in immediate relationship, but not as between remote parties when the holder is a holder for value<sup>3</sup>.

Where the consideration for which a party signed a bill or note<sup>4</sup> consists of a definite sum of money or of something the value of which is definitely ascertained in money, and it was either originally absent in part or has subsequently failed in part, the sum which a holder standing in immediate relation to such a party is entitled to receive from him is pro tanto reduced<sup>5</sup>. However, a remote party who has given value for the instrument may be entitled to receive payment in full<sup>6</sup>.

 Consideration/A. SUFFICIENCY OF CONSIDERATION/1482. Accommodation bills.

1482. Accommodation bills.

An accommodation party to a bill<sup>1</sup> is a person<sup>2</sup> who has signed a bill as drawer<sup>3</sup>, acceptor<sup>4</sup>, or indorser<sup>5</sup>, without receiving value<sup>6</sup> for it, and for the purpose of lending his name to some other person<sup>7</sup>.

Any person who thus signs a bill is liable on it to a holder for value<sup>8</sup>, whether the latter knew when he took the bill that such person was an accommodation party or not<sup>9</sup>.

Though an accommodation party may sign in any capacity the bill will, properly speaking, only be an accommodation bill when the accommodation party signs as acceptor of it<sup>10</sup>.

Where there is a fluctuating balance between the parties the bill is not to be deemed an accommodation bill, even if at the moment of drawing, acceptance<sup>11</sup> or payment the balance may be in favour of the acceptor<sup>12</sup>.

When there are cross acceptances, even if for accommodation purposes only with no other basis to the contract, the consideration is deemed sufficient<sup>13</sup>.

B. FRAUD AND ILLEGALITY

1483. Fraud and duress.

Fraud vitiates every contract into which it enters, and an instrument<sup>1</sup>, the consideration for which is fraudulent even in part, is voidable at the option of the party defrauded except against a holder in due course<sup>2</sup>. However, the liability of the drawer<sup>3</sup> or maker<sup>4</sup> of an instrument to the original payee<sup>5</sup> is not affected by fraud if the fraud is that of a third party<sup>6</sup>.

Fraud may consist in negotiating the instrument in breach of faith, as when a bill<sup>7</sup> is indorsed to a party for the special purpose of having it discounted by him, and the latter instead of doing so negotiates it to another person<sup>8</sup>.

When the fraud is at the expense not of one of the immediate parties, but of persons who are strangers to the contract altogether, the effect is the same<sup>9</sup>.

Duress, or taking an undue advantage of a party (as when he is drunk), is also a ground for denying the consideration for an instrument and rendering it voidable<sup>10</sup>.

In all such cases, where the consideration is clearly fraudulent and the instrument is in the hands of a party with notice, the court may order it to be given up at once. When only a prima facie case of fraud is made out, the court may restrain the negotiation<sup>11</sup> of an instrument for a specified time in order that the question may be tried<sup>12</sup>.

FRAUD AND ILLEGALITY/1484. Illegality.

1484. Illegality.

If the consideration is illegal either wholly or in part<sup>1</sup>, the instrument<sup>2</sup> cannot be recovered on except by a holder in due course<sup>3</sup>. The illegality may consist either in its being against the general principle of the common law or in its special prohibition or interdiction by statute.

Common law illegality obtains wherever the consideration is founded upon a transaction which is against sound morals, public policy, public rights or public interests<sup>4</sup>. A contract containing a term which is void for illegality would not necessarily be wholly void if the terms are severable<sup>5</sup>.

Previously under the old Gaming Acts<sup>6</sup>, all bills and notes<sup>7</sup> (and like instruments), where the whole or any part of the consideration for them was money or any valuable thing won at certain games, or won by betting on such games, or given for reimbursing or repaying any money knowingly lent or advanced for such gaming or betting, were void in the hands of a holder<sup>8</sup> who had notice of the consideration, but could be recovered on by a holder in due course<sup>9</sup>. That legislation is repealed by the Gambling Act 2005<sup>10</sup> and the fact that a contract relates to gambling no longer prevents its enforcement<sup>11</sup>; but that is without prejudice to any rule of law preventing the enforcement of a contract on the grounds of unlawfulness (other than a rule relating specifically to gambling)<sup>12</sup>.

1 The legality of the consideration for a cheque given abroad but drawn in English upon a London bank is to be determined by English law as the law of the place where the bill is payable: Moulis v Owen [1907] 1 KB 746, CA. 2 As to the meaning of 'instrument' see PARA 1402 note 1.

3 If the evidence shows that there was an illegal consideration given for the instrument, the onus of proof is on the holder to show that he is a holder in due course: see the Bills of Exchange Act 1882 s 30(2); and PARA 1478; Bailey v Bidwell (1844) 13 M & W 73. In Sharif v Azad [1967] 1 QB 605, [1966] 3 All ER 785, CA, Diplock LJ said that 'A cheque issued in performance of an agreement which is merely unenforceable is not 'affected by illegality'.'

Those repeals do not permit enforcement of a right which was created, or which emanates from an agreement made, before s 334 came into force (ie before 1 September 2007: see the Gambling Act 2005 (Commencement No 6 and Transitional Provisions) Order 2006, SI 2006/3272, art 2(4)): Gambling Act 2005 s 334(2).

9 Hay v Ayling (1851) 16 QB 423 at 431 per Lord Campbell CJ. Where the defendant lost money to a person on bets made on a horse and drew a cheque for his losses in favour of that person, the plaintiff to whom the cheque was indorsed, and who took the cheque with notice of the consideration, could not recover thereon: Woolf v Hamilton [1898] 2 QB 337, CA; see also Ladup Ltd v Shaikh [1983] QB 225, [1982] 3 WLR 172. But although money knowingly lent or advanced for gaming or betting could not be recovered on the ground that the consideration was illegal, money lent to enable the borrower to pay betting debts already incurred was in a different category, and it was held in such a case where the borrower became bankrupt that the lender who had been given two promissory notes to secure the debt could prove in the bankruptcy: Re Lister, ex p Pyke (1878) 8 ChD 754, CA; Re O'Shea, ex p Lancaster [1911] 2 KB 981, CA. Money knowingly lent abroad for the purposes of gaming in a country where gaming was not illegal could possibly be recovered in the English courts (Saxby v Fulton [1909] 2 KB 208, CA); but action upon a cheque given upon such a consideration and payable in England could not be maintained, as the legality of the consideration fell to be decided by English law: Moulis v Owen [1907] 1 KB 746, CA; Browne v Bailey (1908) 24 TLR 644.

C. RIGHTS OF HOLDER

1485. Indorsement to holder for value.

Where value<sup>1</sup> has at any time been given for an instrument<sup>2</sup>, the holder is deemed to be a holder for value<sup>3</sup> as regards the acceptor<sup>4</sup> and all parties to the instrument who became parties prior to that time<sup>5</sup>. Value may be constituted by an antecedent debt or liability<sup>6</sup>.

He is said to be a holder in due course<sup>7</sup> if he has taken an instrument, which is complete and regular on the face of it<sup>8</sup>, under the following conditions: (1) that he became the holder<sup>9</sup> of it before it was overdue and without notice that it had been previously dishonoured, if such was the fact<sup>10</sup>; (2) that he took the instrument in good faith<sup>11</sup> and for value, and that at the time the instrument was negotiated<sup>12</sup> to him he had no notice of any defect in the title of the person<sup>13</sup> who negotiated it<sup>14</sup>. In particular, the title of a person who negotiates an instrument is defective when he obtained the instrument, or the acceptance<sup>15</sup> of it, by fraud, duress, or force and fear, or other unlawful means or an illegal consideration, or when he negotiates it in breach of faith, or in such circumstances as amount to fraud<sup>16</sup>.

Moreover, every holder of an instrument, except the payee<sup>6</sup>, is prima facie deemed to be a holder in due course<sup>7</sup>. The payee is presumed to be a holder for value<sup>8</sup> though he cannot be a holder in due course<sup>9</sup>.

A holder (whether for value or not) who derives his title to an instrument through a holder in due course, and who is not himself a party to any fraud or illegality affecting it (whether he has notice of the fraud or not<sup>10</sup>), has all the rights of that holder in due course as regards the acceptor and all parties to the instrument prior to that holder<sup>11</sup>. If he gave value for it, he has the same rights against that holder also.

However, the Bills of Exchange Act 1882 s 27(2) does not override the requirement that, as between immediate parties, consideration must move from the promisee. In so far as Diamond v Graham [1968] 2 All ER 909, [1968] 1 WLR 1061, CA, decided otherwise, it has been questioned (see Pollway Ltd v Abdullah [1974] 2 All ER 381, [1974] 1 WLR 493, CA) and held to be inconsistent with Oliver v Davis [1949] 2 KB 727, [1949] 2 All ER 353, CA (see Hasan v Willson [1977] 1 Lloyd's Rep 431 at 442). It is unlikely that the Bills of Exchange Act 1882 s 27(2) applies where value is given by someone who never becomes a party to the instrument: see MK International Development v Housing Bank (1991) Financial Times, 22 January, [1991] 1 Bank LR 74, CA.

However when fraud or illegality in the making or negotiation of a bill is established the presumption is lost, the burden of proof is shifted and the onus of proving value and good faith is thrown upon the holder: see s 30(2); and PARAS 1478, 1483-1484.

1487. Lien of holder.

Any person who discounts an instrument<sup>1</sup>, or to whom an instrument is negotiated for the purpose of being discounted, is, although the property in it does not pass until it is discounted<sup>2</sup>, a holder<sup>3</sup> of the instrument for its full value<sup>4</sup>. But where the holder of an instrument has a lien<sup>5</sup> upon it arising either from contract or by implication of law, he is deemed to be a holder for value<sup>6</sup> to the extent of the sum for which he has a lien<sup>7</sup>. He is, however, entitled to enforce payment of the full amount if his transferor could have sued on the instrument, but otherwise can only recover the amount of his lien<sup>8</sup>. In the former case he is trustee for his transferor of the surplus beyond the amount of his lien<sup>9</sup>.

This is a case which occurs in the relation of banker and customer<sup>10</sup>. It is therefore important to distinguish carefully between bills<sup>11</sup> and such instruments when they are deposited with bankers as security and when they are handed to them for discount, as in the latter case the banker becomes a holder for the full value of the bill<sup>12</sup>.

A bill broker may have a lien in the same way as a banker<sup>13</sup>.

Where a banker before collecting a bill or cheque for his customer credits the customer's account, that fact does not, without more, make the banker a holder for value: AL Underwood Ltd v Bank of Liverpool and Martins, Same v Barclays Bank [1924] 1 KB 775, CA.

Where, after an action by the drawer of a bill against a party to whom he had handed it to be discounted for the recovery of the bill, the bill was recovered and was in the possession of the drawer's solicitor, the latter had no power to sue the acceptor on the instrument with a view to satisfying out of the proceeds his bill of costs against the drawer: Redfern & Son v Rosenthal Bros (1902) 86 LT 855, CA.

In general the presumption is that, when a negotiable or transferable bill is transferred to a banker, he takes it as a holder, not as a bailee or depository: Re Boys, Eedes v Boys, ex p Hop Planters' Co (1870) LR 10 Eq 467. #### 1488. Freedom from defect of title.

A holder who is a holder in due course<sup>1</sup> holds the instrument<sup>2</sup> free from any defect of title of prior parties as well as from mere personal defences available to prior parties among themselves, and he may enforce payment against all parties liable thereon<sup>3</sup>. Even if the holder's<sup>4</sup> title to an instrument is defective, a holder in due course to whom he negotiates it obtains a good and complete title to it<sup>5</sup>, and a payment made by any person<sup>6</sup> in due course to the holder, whether his title is defective or not, operates for that person as a valid discharge of the instrument<sup>7</sup>.

Negotiation by delivery or indorsement and delivery.

(xii) Transfer

A. TRANSFER BY NEGOTIATION

1489. Negotiation by delivery or indorsement and delivery.

Bills and notes<sup>1</sup> are negotiated<sup>2</sup> when they are transferred from one person<sup>3</sup> to another in such a manner as to constitute the transferee the holder<sup>4</sup> of the bill or note<sup>5</sup>.

Negotiable bills and notes<sup>6</sup> may be payable either to order or to bearer<sup>7</sup>. Where they are payable to bearer<sup>8</sup>, they are negotiated simply by delivery<sup>9</sup>; where they are payable to order (whether payable simply to A B or to A B's order, or to A B or order), they are negotiated by indorsement<sup>10</sup> and delivery<sup>11</sup>.

The specified payee<sup>12</sup> of an instrument<sup>13</sup> payable to order negotiates it either by indorsing it in blank, or by directing payment to another specified party and signing his name beneath the direction, which is written on the back of the instrument<sup>14</sup>. He thus becomes an indorser<sup>15</sup> of the instrument, and the party to whom he directs payment to be made becomes the indorsee<sup>16</sup>. The indorsee may in his turn direct payment to another by indorsing over to him<sup>17</sup>.

Every instrument the transfer of which is not expressly prohibited by words appearing on its face<sup>18</sup> may be negotiated.

1 As to the meanings of 'bill' and 'note' see PARA 1405.

2 As to the meaning of 'negotiation' see PARA 1407. The delivery of a cheque to the original payee is not a negotiation: see RE Jones Ltd v Waring and Gillow Ltd [1926] AC 670 at 680, 687, 695, HL.

18 See PARA 1440. When in spite of such words a bill is indorsed, the indorser is liable to the indorsee on his indorsement, for he is virtually the drawer of a new bill (aliter, however, if the instrument is a note); see Gwinnell v Herbert (1836) 6 Nev & MKB 723; Plimley v Westley (1835) 2 Bing NC 249.

1490. Transfer of order bill without indorsement.

Where the holder<sup>1</sup> of a bill<sup>2</sup> payable to his order<sup>3</sup> transfers it for value<sup>4</sup> without indorsing it, the transfer gives the transferee such title as the transferor had in the bill and the transferee in addition acquires the right to have the indorsement<sup>5</sup> of the transferor<sup>6</sup>. In such a case the date of indorsement is deemed to be the true date of negotiation<sup>7</sup>; and until the indorsement takes place the transferee's position is no better than that of an equitable assignee of an ordinary chose in action<sup>8</sup>. He is affected by any notice of fraud received by him prior to the indorsement<sup>9</sup>. He cannot sue on the bill except in the name of the transferor, and he cannot negotiate it to another party<sup>10</sup>. If he writes on the bill the name of the transferor, it is an unauthorised signature and, as such, wholly inoperative<sup>11</sup>.

If the transferee returns the bill to the transferor for indorsement and the latter loses or destroys the bill, the transferee has no remedy on the bill against the acceptor but only against the transferor: Edge v Bumford (1862) 31 Beav 247.

9 Whistler v Forster (1863) 14 CBNS 248 at 257 per Willis J: 'The general rule of law is undoubted, that no one can transfer a better title than he himself possesses. Nemo dat quod non habet. To this there are some exceptions, one of which arises out of the rule of the law-merchant as to negotiable instruments . . . If such an instrument be transferred in good faith, for value, before it is overdue, it becomes available in the hands of the holder, notwithstanding fraud which would have rendered it unavailable in the hands of a previous holder. This rule, however, is only intended to favour transfers in the ordinary and usual manner whereby a title is acquired according to [statute], and not to (sic) a transfer which is valid in equity according to the doctrine respecting the assignment of choses in action, and it is therefore clear, that, in order to acquire the benefit of this rule, the holder of the bill must, if it be payable to order, obtain an indorsement, and that he is affected by notice of a fraud received before he does so'.

1491. Transfer by indorsement.

In order to operate as a negotiation<sup>1</sup> the indorsement<sup>2</sup> must be written<sup>3</sup> on the bill itself<sup>4</sup> and be signed by the indorser<sup>5</sup>. The simple signature of the indorser on the bill without additional words is sufficient<sup>6</sup>. When written on an allonge<sup>7</sup>, or on a copy of the bill issued or negotiated in a country where copies are recognised, it is deemed to be written on the bill itself<sup>8</sup>. Notwithstanding the primary meaning of the term, a signature on the face of a bill may be a valid indorsement<sup>9</sup>.

The indorsement must be an indorsement of the entire instrument<sup>10</sup>. A partial indorsement, that is to say an indorsement which purports to transfer to the indorsee<sup>11</sup> a part only of the amount payable, or which purports to transfer the bill to two or more indorsees severally, does not operate as a negotiation of the instrument<sup>12</sup>, but may authorise the indorsee to receive payment of the amount specified<sup>13</sup>.

An instrument which is payable to two or more payees<sup>14</sup> or indorsees may be indorsed by one of them if they are partners in a trading firm or if he has authority to indorse for them all; otherwise all payees or indorsees must indorse it<sup>15</sup>.

Where in an indorsement on an instrument the indorsee is wrongly designated or his name misspelt, he may indorse the instrument as therein described, adding, if he thinks fit, his proper signature<sup>16</sup>.

Where there are two or more indorsements on an instrument, each indorsement is deemed to have been made in the order in which it appears on the instrument until the contrary is proved<sup>17</sup>.

1 As to the meaning of 'negotiation' see PARA 1407.

2 As to the meaning of 'indorsement' see PARA 1407.

3 As to the meaning of 'writing' see PARA 1405 note 2.

4 Bills of Exchange Act 1882 s 32(1). As to the meaning of 'bill' see PARA 1405. The important thing is that the indorsement should appear on the bill itself. An assignment in writing, but not on the instrument itself, is not an indorsement: Re Barrington and Burton (1804) 2 Sch & Lef 112. 'But it is proved that according to a well established usage it is the common and almost invariable practice of bill-brokers in the city of London not to go through the form of putting their names upon every bill which they rediscount with their bankers, but to give instead a general indemnity or guarantee to their bankers, by which they undertake to be liable to the bankers upon each bill which they rediscount with them just as if they had indorsed that bill . . . I am aware of no authority and I can see no principle for holding that the liability [inter partes] which is created by such a guarantee differs from that which is created by the indorsement of a bill of exchange': Re Fox, Walker & Co, ex p Bishop (1880) 15 ChD 400 at 414, CA, per James LJ.

5 As to the meaning of 'indorser' see PARA 1407 note 8.

6 Bills of Exchange Act 1882 s 32(1). Although additional words are unnecessary, they are not harmful so long as they do not conflict with the presumed intention to indorse; where the holder writes on the back of an instrument 'I bequeath . . . pay the within contents to . . . or his order at my death', and gives it to the person named, the writing is not an indorsement, but a testamentary gift void for want of witness: Re Patterson's Estate, Mitchell v Smith (1864) 4 De GJ & Sm 422. But it is not uncommon, and in some countries (see Hirschfeld v Smith (1866) LR 1 CP 340) it is obligatory, that the indorsement should recite the consideration given.

7 An allonge is a slip which may be attached to the bill and used in the event of the indorsements being numerous or lengthy enough to occupy the whole available space on the back of the bill itself. Precautions should, and in some countries must, be taken to avoid fraud by making the last writing on the bill and the first on the allonge part of the same indorsement.

B. DIFFERENT KINDS OF INDORSEMENTS

1492. Blank or special indorsements.

The indorsement<sup>1</sup> on an instrument<sup>2</sup> may be either in blank or special<sup>3</sup>. When it is in blank it consists merely of the signature of the indorser<sup>4</sup>, that is, it specifies no indorsee<sup>5</sup>, and an instrument so indorsed becomes payable to bearer<sup>6</sup> and may therefore be thenceforward negotiated by delivery<sup>7</sup>. When it is special it specifies the person<sup>8</sup> to whom, or to whose order, the instrument is to be payable<sup>9</sup>; such a person is known as the indorsee, and, subject to necessary modifications, he is in a position similar to that of the original payee<sup>10</sup>.

Where an instrument has been indorsed in blank, any holder<sup>11</sup> may convert the blank indorsement into a special indorsement by writing<sup>12</sup> above the indorser's signature a direction to pay the instrument to or to the order of himself or some other person<sup>13</sup>.

1494. Restrictive indorsements.

The indorsement<sup>1</sup> of the instrument<sup>2</sup> may also contain terms making it restrictive<sup>3</sup>.

A restrictive indorsement is an indorsement which does one of the following<sup>4</sup>: (1) prohibits the further negotiation<sup>5</sup> of the instrument<sup>6</sup>; or (2) expresses that it is a mere authority to deal with the instrument as directed by the indorsement and not a transfer of the ownership<sup>7</sup>, as, for example, if the indorsement constitutes the indorsee<sup>8</sup> the agent of the indorser<sup>9</sup> for a special purpose<sup>10</sup>, or vests<sup>11</sup> the title in the indorsee in trust for or to the use of some other person<sup>12</sup>.

The effect of a restrictive indorsement is to confer upon the indorsee<sup>13</sup>:

- 148 (a) the right to receive payment of the instrument;
- 149 (b) the same right against any other party to the instrument that his indorser had<sup>14</sup>;
- 150 (c) the power, but only in accordance with the express terms of his authority, to transfer the instrument and his rights on it to another<sup>15</sup>.

Where a restrictive indorsement authorises further transfer, all subsequent indorseees take the instrument with the same rights and subject to the same liabilities as the first indorsee under the restrictive indorsement<sup>16</sup>.

1495. Indorsements negating or extending liability.

The indorser<sup>1</sup> may insert an express stipulation negating or limiting his own liability to the holder<sup>2</sup>, or he may waive as regards himself some or all of the holder's duties<sup>3</sup>.

In the special case of a person<sup>4</sup> who is under obligation to indorse in a representative capacity, he may indorse the instrument<sup>5</sup> in such terms as to negative personal responsibility<sup>6</sup>. Such indorsements<sup>7</sup> are more properly termed qualified indorsements.

C. DURATION OF NEGOTIABILITY

1496. Cessation of negotiability.

An instrument which is negotiable<sup>1</sup> in its origin continues to be negotiable until it has been either restrictively indorsed<sup>2</sup> or discharged by payment or otherwise<sup>3</sup>.

Subject to certain limitations<sup>4</sup>, the fact that an instrument is overdue, or even that it has been dishonoured and a claim brought upon it, is no bar to its further negotiation<sup>5</sup>. Except where an indorsement<sup>6</sup> bears date after the maturity of the instrument, every negotiation is prima facie deemed to have been effected before it was overdue<sup>7</sup>.

1 As to the meaning of 'negotiable instrument' see PARA 1402.

2 Bills of Exchange Act 1882 s 36(1)(a). A restrictive indorsement bars the negotiation of the bill. As to restrictive indorsements see PARA 1494.

1497. Overdue instrument.

Where an overdue<sup>1</sup> instrument<sup>2</sup> is negotiated, it can only be negotiated subject to any defect of title affecting it at its maturity, and thenceforward no person<sup>3</sup> who takes it can acquire or give a better title than that of the person from whom he took it<sup>4</sup>.

If, however, the person from whom the holder<sup>5</sup> took it had at the time when the instrument matured a good title, the holder is not affected by a defect in the title of a previous holder<sup>6</sup>.

Where an instrument, in its origin an accommodation bill, is negotiated after maturity, the mere absence of consideration is immaterial<sup>7</sup>. But a negotiation<sup>8</sup> in breach of an agreement expressed or implied that such a bill shall not be negotiated after maturity invalidates the holder's right to be a holder in due course<sup>9</sup>.

Where there is no defect in the title of the person from whom the holder took the overdue instrument, a set-off or other matter of counterclaim outstanding between that person and a prior party does not affect the holder's right<sup>10</sup>, even if its existence was known to the holder when he took the instrument<sup>11</sup>.

1 As to when an instrument payable on demand is overdue see PARA 1433.

2 As to the meaning of 'instrument' see PARA 1402 note 1.

3 As to the meaning of 'person' see PARA 1401 note 4.

4 Bills of Exchange Act 1882 s 36(2); Redfern & Son v Rosenthal Bros (1902) 86 LT 855, CA. Defect of title, as a phrase, is the statutory equivalent in this connection of an equity attaching to the bill: see Tinson v Francis (1807) 1 Camp 19; Sturtevant v Ford (1842) 4 Man & G 101. Thus where a bill is indorsed by the drawer to a person to have it discounted, and that person, in fraud of the drawer, further indorses it when overdue to the plaintiff, the plaintiff cannot recover on the bill from the acceptor: Lloyd v Howard (1850) 15 QB 995. So where an overdue bill is purchased by an official of a bank with money stolen by him from the bank, and indorsed to another party, the claim of the bank constitutes an equity attaching to the bill in the hands of the indorsee: Re European Bank, ex p Oriental Commercial Bank (1870) 5 Ch App 358. Similarly, where a bill is accepted subject to a condition expressly agreed on by the drawer and acceptor, and is indorsed when overdue to another party, that party is bound by the original condition: Holmes v Kidd (1858) 28 LJEx 112.

However, where a bill drawn and accepted in England was indorsed in blank and delivered in Norway to the agent of an English firm, and, having been seized in that country in execution of a judgment obtained there against a member of the English firm, was subsequently sold after maturity to a holder who indorsed it to a holder in England, who took the bill without knowledge of his indorser's title, it was held that, as that indorser's title was good in Norway, the holder in England who took it from him could recover from the acceptor: Alcock v Smith [1892] 1 Ch 238, CA.

Title to an instrument is not defective on the ground of sovereign immunity if the state which claims immunity has never been a party to the instrument: Cardinal Financial Investments Corp v Central Bank of Yemen [2001] Lloyd's Rep Bank 1, CA.

5 As to the meaning of 'holder' see PARA 1407.

6 Eg where a bill accepted for an illegal consideration is indorsed before it is due to a holder in due course, a party to whom the latter indorses it after maturity can recover on it: Chalmers v Lanion (1808) 1 Camp 383; Fairclough v Pavia (1854) 9 Exch 690. ### 1498. Negotiation after dishonour.

Where a bill which is not overdue has been dishonoured, any person<sup>1</sup> who takes it with notice of the dishonour takes it subject to any defect of title attaching to it at the time of dishonour<sup>2</sup>. But a holder in due course<sup>3</sup> ex hypothesi has no such notice, and there is no such defect in his title<sup>4</sup>. Moreover, where a bill is dishonoured by non-acceptance<sup>5</sup> and notice of dishonour is not given, the rights of a holder in due course subsequent to the omission are not prejudiced thereby<sup>6</sup>.

1499. 'Not negotiable' cheque.

In the case of a cheque<sup>1</sup> crossed 'not negotiable', the person<sup>2</sup> who takes it does not acquire and cannot give a better title to it than that of the person from whom he took it<sup>3</sup>. The legal effect of adding the words 'not negotiable' to a cheque is, therefore, not to impede transfer, but to perpetuate in the hands of any transferee whatever defect or infirmity of title may affect the person who first transferred the cheque with those words on it<sup>4</sup>.

See Fisher v Roberts (1890) 6 TLR 354, CA (where, two persons being partners, one of the partners in fraud of the other indorsed a cheque drawn in favour of the firm, crossed and marked 'not negotiable', to the defendant, who gave cash for it; and in an action brought by the partner who was defrauded, it was held that the amount could be recovered). See also Wilson and Meeson v Pickering [1946] KB 422, [1946] 1 All ER 394, CA (where it was held that a 'person' included the payee whose name had been entered in a blank cheque by an employee of the drawer and contrary to his instructions). As to crossed cheques generally see PARAS 838, 880. In Great Western Rly Co v London and County Banking Co [1901] AC 414, HL, the object of the provision was defined by Lord Brampton, at 422, as being 'to afford to the drawer or the holder of a cheque who is desirous of transmitting it to another person as much protection as can reasonably be afforded to it against dishonesty or accidental miscarriage in the course of its transit'.

If an instrument is paid by an indorser, or being a bill payable to drawer's order<sup>6</sup> is paid by the drawer, the payer, who is thereby remitted to his former rights as regards the acceptor<sup>7</sup> or antecedent parties, may, if he thinks fit, strike out his own and<sup>8</sup> subsequent indorsements and again negotiate it<sup>9</sup>.

1503. Forgery and unauthorised signature.

Where a signature on a bill or note<sup>1</sup> is forged or placed there without the authority of the person<sup>2</sup> whose signature it purports to be<sup>3</sup>, the forged or unauthorised signature is wholly inoperative, and no right to retain the bill or to give a valid discharge<sup>4</sup> for it or to enforce payment of it against any party thereto can be acquired through or under that signature unless the party against whom it is sought to retain the bill or enforce payment of it is precluded from setting up the forgery or want of authority as a defence<sup>5</sup>.

If a signature on the bill has been forged and the forgery comes to the knowledge of the party whose signature has been forged, that party, if he does not give information of the forgery to the holder<sup>6</sup>, may be estopped from setting it up or relying upon it<sup>7</sup>. An acceptor<sup>8</sup> who has admitted the authority of his signature cannot afterwards refuse to honour it on the ground that it is forged<sup>9</sup>, but if he has paid a bill on which his signature as acceptor has been forged, he is not estopped from refusing to pay a similar bill on the ground that that is forged also<sup>10</sup>.

indorser<sup>14</sup> from denying to a holder in due course the genuineness and regularity in all respects of the signature of the drawer and all previous indorsers<sup>15</sup>.

Where the signature of a party to an instrument<sup>16</sup> has been forged, the fact that the holder has subsequently obtained the genuine signature of that party does not restore validity to the instrument<sup>17</sup>, but, presumably, that party may be estopped thereafter from setting up the forgery. An instrument on which it is proved that a forged signature has been placed may be ordered by the court to be delivered up<sup>18</sup>.

A holder who on presenting an instrument has been paid in good faith and has received payment in good faith, but whose title is derived through a forged indorsement<sup>19</sup>, may be compelled to return the money paid<sup>20</sup>.

Where an indorsement is forged abroad, and the instrument gets into the hands of a bona fide holder, the title of the holder must be determined according to the laws of the country where the instrument was transferred<sup>21</sup>.

Where a paper bearing only a signature is stolen and then filled up and negotiated to a bona fide holder for value<sup>22</sup>, the signer is not estopped from setting up the fraud<sup>23</sup>.

2 As to the meaning of 'person' see PARA 1401 note 4.

3 If a person of the same name as the payee named in a bill of exchange indorses the bill, knowing he is not the person in whose favour it is drawn, he is guilty of forgery: see Mead v Young (1790) 4 Term Rep 28. A genuine signature by an agent who indicates on the face of the bill that he signs as an agent, but who is fraudulently misusing his authority, is not a forgery: see Morison v London County and Westminster Bank Ltd [1914] 3 KB 356, CA; and for a conflicting view see Alexander Stewart & Son of Dundee Ltd v Westminster Bank Ltd [1926] WN 271, CA (in which it was held that the signature of a person who indorses an instrument intending to steal is an unauthorised signature).

(xiii) Duties of Holder

A. PRESENTMENT FOR ACCEPTANCE

1509. Presentment of bills.

Presentment for acceptance<sup>1</sup> applies to bills of exchange<sup>2</sup>, but not to promissory notes<sup>3</sup> or to cheques<sup>4</sup>. In the case of bills of exchange, though not always required by the form of the particular instrument<sup>5</sup>, acceptance is necessary in order to render the drawee<sup>6</sup> a party liable thereon<sup>7</sup>, but is not necessary in order that a party, to whom it has been negotiated prior to acceptance, may, as a holder in due course<sup>8</sup>, sue an acceptor<sup>9</sup> who subsequently accepts<sup>10</sup>.

The bills which require presentment for acceptance<sup>11</sup> are:

- 151 (1) those which are payable after sight<sup>12</sup>;
- 152 (2) those on the face of which it is expressly stipulated that they shall be presented for acceptance<sup>13</sup>;
- 153 (3) those which are drawn payable elsewhere than at the residence or place of business of the drawee<sup>14</sup>.

In the class under head (1) above, presentment is required to fix the maturity of the instrument<sup>15</sup>; in the classes under heads (2) and (3) above, presentment for acceptance must precede presentment for payment<sup>16</sup>. In no other case is presentment for acceptance necessary in order to render a party liable on the bill<sup>17</sup>.

It is, however, prudent for the holder<sup>18</sup> to present the bill for acceptance in every case, for acceptance obtains the security of the acceptor's signature. If a bill is dishonoured by non-acceptance<sup>19</sup>, the holder will obtain<sup>20</sup> the immediate liability of all previous parties to the bill and relief from the necessity of presentment for payment<sup>21</sup>.

1510. Time and mode of presentment.

Presentment for acceptance<sup>1</sup> should be made by or on behalf of the holder<sup>2</sup>, at a reasonable hour on a business day<sup>3</sup> and before the bill<sup>4</sup> is overdue, to the drawee<sup>5</sup> or to some person<sup>6</sup> authorised to accept or refuse on his behalf<sup>7</sup>. The mere exhibition of the bill by a servant of the holder to some person unknown to him on the premises of the drawee is not a due presentment<sup>8</sup>.

The drawee may, however, accept when the bill is overdue, if he is willing to do so<sup>9</sup>. A presentment through a postal operator<sup>10</sup> is sufficient where it is authorised by agreement or by usage<sup>11</sup>.

If a bill is handed to an agent for presentment, the agent must not be guilty of negligence in presenting the bill: Bank of Van Diemen's Land v Bank of Victoria (1871) LR 3 PC 526. The manner of presentment depends on various circumstances. If the place of presentment is a bank, then the bill must be presented in banking hours: Parker v Gordon (1806) 7 East 385; Elford v Teed (1813) 1 M & S 28. If it is the place of business of a merchant or trader, then it must be within business hours: Allen v Edmundson (1848) 2 Exch 719 at 723 per Parke B. If it is at a private residence, then any time during which the drawee may be expected to be found is reasonable: Wilkins v Jadis (1831) 2 B & Ad 188, where 8 pm was held reasonable.

Except when one or more of the grounds of excuse referred to below<sup>1</sup> exists, a bill payable after sight<sup>2</sup> must either be presented by the holder<sup>3</sup> for acceptance<sup>4</sup> or further negotiated within a reasonable time<sup>5</sup>, otherwise the drawer<sup>6</sup> and all indorsers<sup>7</sup> prior to that holder are discharged<sup>8</sup>.

In determining what is a reasonable time for this purpose, the nature of the bill, the usage of trade with respect to similar bills, and the facts of the particular case are to be taken into consideration<sup>9</sup>; and the interests of the holder, as well as those of the drawee<sup>10</sup>, are to be taken into account<sup>11</sup>.

9 Bills of Exchange Act 1882 s 40(3). What is a reasonable time has at times been treated as a pure question of fact, but it would seem that it is really a mixed question of law and fact: Ramchurn Mullick v Luchmeechund Radakissen (1854) 9 Moo PCC 46 at 66 per Parke B. See also Straker v Graham (1839) 4 M & W 721 (where a bill was drawn in Newfoundland on London, payable 90 days after sight, and no reason being given for delay in presentment, two months was held to be an unreasonable time, but some emphasis was laid on the fact that the bill was drawn in sets; as to bills in a set see PARA 1586 et seq); and contrast Mellish v Rawdon (1832) 9 Bing 416 (where the payee of a bill payable 60 days after sight in Rio De Janeiro refrained from presentment for four months, as the rate of exchange was against Rio, and the delay was held to be not unreasonable). No doubt the term would be interpreted with much greater strictness in the case of an inland bill, but when a bill drawn in Windsor and payable in London one month after date was withheld for presentment for four days the delay was held not unreasonable: Fry v Hill (1817) 7 Taunt 397; cf Shute v Robins (1828) 3 C & P 80. Given the rapidity of modern means of communication, these early cases must be treated with caution.

1514. Excuses for non-presentment.

In the case of a drawee<sup>1</sup> who is dead or bankrupt, presentment for acceptance<sup>2</sup> is excused, and the bill may be treated as dishonoured by non-acceptance<sup>3</sup>, or it may be presented for acceptance to the dead man's personal representative or to the bankrupt or his trustee<sup>4</sup>.

Due presentment for acceptance is also excused, and the bill may be treated as dishonoured by non-acceptance if: (1) the drawee is a fictitious person<sup>5</sup> or a person not having the capacity to contract by bill<sup>6</sup>; or (2) after the exercise of reasonable diligence, presentment cannot be effected<sup>7</sup>; or (3) although the presentment has been irregular, the acceptance has been refused on some other ground<sup>8</sup>.

The fact that the holder<sup>9</sup> has reason to believe that the bill on presentment will be dishonoured does not excuse presentment<sup>10</sup>.

1515. Dishonour by non-acceptance and notice thereof.

A bill<sup>1</sup> is dishonoured by non-acceptance when it is duly presented for acceptance<sup>2</sup>, and such acceptance as is prescribed by the Bills of Exchange Act 1882 is refused or cannot be obtained<sup>3</sup>; it is also dishonoured by non-acceptance when presentment for acceptance is excused<sup>4</sup> and the bill is not accepted<sup>5</sup>. When a bill is duly presented for acceptance, and is not in fact accepted within the customary time, the person<sup>6</sup> presenting it must treat it as dishonoured by non-acceptance<sup>7</sup>, and notice of dishonour must be given to the drawer<sup>8</sup> and each indorser<sup>9</sup>, for otherwise the holder<sup>10</sup> will lose his right of recourse against them<sup>11</sup>. Liability for dishonour on the part of both drawer and indorser is subject to the proviso that the requisite proceedings on dishonour be duly taken<sup>12</sup>.

If the required notices are duly given on dishonour by non-acceptance it is unnecessary to give notice of a subsequent dishonour by non-payment, unless the bill has in the meantime been accepted<sup>13</sup>.

Even if the required notice is not given, the rights of a holder in due course<sup>14</sup> subsequent to the omission are not prejudiced<sup>15</sup>.

B. PRESENTMENT FOR PAYMENT

1516. Presentment of bills and notes.

Bills of exchange and promissory notes<sup>1</sup> must be duly presented for payment, except where otherwise provided by statute, and unless a bill is duly presented for payment, where that is necessary, the drawer<sup>2</sup> and indorsers<sup>3</sup> are discharged<sup>4</sup>.

A bill, the acceptance<sup>5</sup> of which is qualified by the requirement of presentment for payment, must be so presented, but the acceptor<sup>6</sup>, in the absence of an express stipulation to that effect, is not discharged by the omission to present it for payment on the day that it matures<sup>7</sup>.

Although in general presentment for payment is not necessary in order to charge the person<sup>8</sup> primarily liable<sup>9</sup> on the instrument<sup>10</sup>, it is necessary in order to obtain the right of recourse against the drawer and indorsers<sup>11</sup>, and even in relation to the person primarily liable it is the more prudent course, for, if a claim is brought upon the instrument without presentment for payment, the court will be disposed to charge the claimant with the costs<sup>12</sup>, and to fix the time from which interest is to be calculated at the date at which the action is begun<sup>13</sup>.

1517. Excuses for non-presentment.

Presentment is dispensed with, however, where after the exercise of reasonable diligence it cannot be effected as the statute requires<sup>1</sup>, or where the drawee<sup>2</sup> is a fictitious person<sup>3</sup>, or where it is expressly or impliedly waived<sup>4</sup>. Further, presentment is not required in order to charge the drawer<sup>5</sup> where the drawee or acceptor<sup>6</sup> is not bound, as between himself and the drawer, to accept or pay the bill<sup>7</sup>, and the drawer has no reason to believe that the bill would be paid if presented<sup>8</sup>; nor in order to charge an indorser<sup>9</sup> where the instrument was made or accepted for his accommodation<sup>10</sup>, and he has no reason to expect it to be paid if presented<sup>11</sup>.

The fact that the holder<sup>12</sup> has reason to believe that the bill will be dishonoured on presentment does not dispense with the necessity for presentment<sup>13</sup>.

1 Bills of Exchange Act 1882 s 46(2)(a). See Hamilton Finance Co Ltd v Coverley Westray, Walbaum and Tosetti Ltd and Portland Finance Co Ltd [1969] 1 Lloyd's Rep 53. What amounts to due diligence is a matter of fact to be decided in each case. Thus, where a note was made payable at a town where the maker had no residence, a presentment at two banks was held sufficient: Hardy v Woodroffe (1818) 2 Stark 319; see also Hine v Allely (1833) 4 B & Ad 624; Buxton v Jones (1840) 1 Man & G 83. But where a bill was accepted on behalf of the drawee by his agent, and in the drawee's absence at maturity no presentment was made to the agent, it was held that insufficient diligence was shown: Phillips v Astling (1809) 2 Taunt 206. This subsection operates to dispense with the need for presentment where it is impossible owing to occupation of territory by the enemy: Cornelius v Banque Franco-Serbe [1942] 1 KB 29, [1941] 2 All ER 728 (where it was also decided that the illegality of the presentment does not preclude the holder from suing on the bill). 9 As to the meaning of 'indorser' see PARA 1407 note 8.

10 As to accommodation bills see PARA 1482.

11 Bills of Exchange Act 1882 s 46(2)(d). However where the instrument is drawn for the accommodation of the drawer, it must be presented if it is desired to charge an indorser: Saul v Jones (1858) 28 LJQB 37 at 40 per Lord Campbell CJ. Where it is desired to charge a person who was not a party to the bill, but merely guaranteed its payment (at all events on behalf of the acceptor), presentment is not necessary: Carter v White (1883) 25 ChD 666 at 670, CA, per Cotton LJ. Quaere if this is so where the party guaranteed by the surety was the drawer or an indorser, for by the terms of the Bills of Exchange Act 1882 s 45 (see PARAS 1516, 1518 et seq), want of due presentment discharges the drawer or indorsers; and in any case this would not apply to a case where by custom a broker, instead of indorsing a number of bills individually, gives a guarantee of liability to the bankers who discount them: cf Re Fox, Walker & Co, ex p Bishop (1880) 15 ChD 400, CA.

12 As to the meaning of 'holder' see PARA 1407.

13 Bills of Exchange Act 1882 s 46(2)(a). This is so even when the acceptor has told the holder that he will not pay the bill when due: Re Brereton, ex p Bignold (1836) 1 Deac 712; Hill v Heap (1823) Dow & Ry NP 57. Presentment must also be made when the acceptor becomes bankrupt (Warrington v Furber (1807) 8 East 242 at 245 per Lord Ellenborough CJ; cf Esdaile v Sowerby (1809) 11 East 114), or when the maker of a note becomes insolvent and absconds without leaving effects behind: Sands v Clarke (1849) 8 CB 751; Camidge v Allenby (1827) 6 B & C 373.

1518. Time for presentment: bills and notes.

When the instrument<sup>1</sup> is not payable on demand it must be presented on the day that it falls due<sup>2</sup>.

When it is payable on demand, then in the case of a bill<sup>3</sup> it must be presented within a reasonable time after its issue<sup>4</sup> in order to render the drawer<sup>5</sup> liable, and within a reasonable time after its indorsement<sup>6</sup> in order to render the indorser<sup>7</sup> liable<sup>8</sup>; and in the case of a note<sup>9</sup> which has been indorsed it must be presented within a reasonable time after its indorsement, or the indorser will be discharged<sup>10</sup>. In determining what is a reasonable time in the case of either instrument, the nature of the instrument, the usage of trade, and the facts of the particular case will be taken into consideration<sup>11</sup>.

When a note payable on demand is negotiated, it is not deemed to be overdue, for the purpose of affecting the holder<sup>12</sup> with defects of title of which he had no notice, by reason that it appears that a reasonable time for presenting it for payment has elapsed since its issue<sup>13</sup>.

Delay in making presentment for payment is excused where it is caused by circumstances beyond the control of the holder and not imputable to his default, misconduct or negligence, but when the cause of delay ceases to operate presentment must be made with reasonable diligence<sup>14</sup>.

11 Bills of Exchange Act 1882 ss 45(2), 86(2). The nature of the instrument, whether bill or note, differs widely, for while it is true that 'a prompt and regular demand of payment may frequently obtain payment from an acceptor of a bill and maker of a note, who is in a state of progressive insolvency, when a subsequent application of the same nature would become unavailing' (see Story's Bills of Exchange (4th Edn) s 325), yet a note, being more likely than a bill to be intended as a continuing security, may be reasonably the subject of a comparatively long delay before presentment. See Chartered Mercantile Bank of India, London and China v Dickson (1871) LR 3 PC 574; and PARA 1515 note 7.

13 Bills of Exchange Act 1882 s 86(3); Brooks v Mitchell (1841) 9 M & W 15 (where it was held that such a note could not be deemed overdue because it was indorsed years after its date, and no interest had been paid on it for a considerable time before indorsement); Glasscock v Balls (1889) 24 QBD 13, CA. As to a banker's liability for presentment see PARA 1519.

14 Bills of Exchange Act 1882 s 46(1). As to delay when a bill payable elsewhere than at the place of business or residence of the drawee is presented late for acceptance see PARA 1513. The difficulty of communication incident to wars or political disturbance may excuse delay (Patience v Townley (1805) 2 Smith KB 223). But in ordinary times, delay which is unexplained, even when of very short duration, will result in the holder being found guilty of laches: see Anderton v Beck (1812) 16 East 248 (where the delay was for one day only). A delay by request of the drawer or indorser, if he is the person sought to be charged, would no doubt be held excusable: Lord Ward v Oxford, Worcester and Wolverhampton Rly Co (1852) 2 De GM & G 750.

1519. Time for presentment: cheques.

Where, however, a cheque is not presented within a reasonable time of its issue, and the drawer or the person<sup>8</sup> on whose account it is drawn has the right at the time of such presentment as between him and the banker to have the cheque paid and suffers actual damage through the delay, he is discharged to the extent of such damage<sup>9</sup>.

Where the drawer or the person on whose account the cheque is drawn is so discharged, the holder<sup>10</sup> becomes the creditor of the banker to the extent of such discharge, and is entitled to recover the amount from him<sup>11</sup>.

An indorser<sup>12</sup> is discharged if the presentment is not duly made within reasonable time after indorsement<sup>13</sup>.

What is a reasonable time is a question of fact in each case, and in determining it regard must be had to the nature of the instrument<sup>14</sup>, the usage of trade and of bankers, and the facts of the particular case<sup>15</sup>. A banker who takes an unreasonable time in presenting a cheque paid in by his customer is liable to his customer for the loss (if any) which results from the delay<sup>16</sup>.

Proper place of presentment: bills and notes.

1520. Proper place of presentment: bills and notes.

A bill or note<sup>1</sup> is presented at the proper place when a place of payment is specified in the instrument<sup>2</sup>, and it is presented there<sup>3</sup>; if alternative places are specified, then presentment may be made at either<sup>4</sup>.

Where a note is in the body of it made payable at a particular place, it must be presented at that place in order to render either the maker<sup>5</sup> or an indorser<sup>6</sup> liable<sup>7</sup>, but where a place of payment is indicated by way of memorandum only, presentment at that place will render the indorser liable, while a presentment to the maker elsewhere, if sufficient in other respects, is equally effective<sup>8</sup>.

Where no place of payment is specified, but the address of the person<sup>9</sup> to make payment is given in the instrument, it may be there presented<sup>10</sup>. Where no place is specified, and no address is given, the instrument may be presented at the usual place of business, if known, and if not, then at the ordinary residence, if known, of the person to make payment<sup>11</sup>. In any other case, the instrument may be presented to the person to make payment wherever he can be found or at his last known place of business or residence<sup>12</sup>.

Where an instrument is presented at the proper place, and after the exercise of reasonable diligence no person authorised to pay or to refuse payment can be found there, no further presentment to the person primarily liable is required<sup>13</sup>.

If two or more persons, who are not partners, are primarily liable, and no place of payment is specified, presentment must be made to them all<sup>14</sup>, unless one of them has authority to act for the others<sup>15</sup>.

If the person primarily liable is dead, and no place of payment is specified, presentment must be made to a personal representative, if such there be and if, with the exercise of reasonable diligence, he can be found<sup>16</sup>.

1522. Mode of presentment.

Presentment for payment, to be sufficient, must be made personally by the holder<sup>1</sup> or by some person<sup>2</sup> authorised to receive payment on his behalf<sup>3</sup>, except where presentment through a postal operator<sup>4</sup> is authorised by special agreement or general usage<sup>5</sup>. Moreover, presentment for payment must be made at a reasonable hour<sup>6</sup>, on a business day<sup>7</sup>, and at the proper place<sup>8</sup>; and it must be made to the person designated by the bill<sup>9</sup> as payer<sup>10</sup>, or to some person authorised to pay or to refuse payment on his behalf, if with the exercise of reasonable diligence such person can be found at the place of presentment<sup>11</sup>.

It is the duty of the holder, when he presents an instrument<sup>12</sup> for payment, to exhibit it to the person from whom payment is demanded, and on receiving payment to deliver it up to the party paying it<sup>13</sup>.

- 3 Bills of Exchange Act 1882 s 45(3). As to presentment for payment see PARA 1516. The person who presents the instrument must be able to give a valid discharge in case of payment (see s 41(1)(a); and PARA 1510); where the presentment is made by an agent of the holder, the agent is bound to use due diligence on behalf of his principal: Bank of Van Diemen's Land v Bank of Victoria (1871) LR 3 PC 526.

- 6 Where the bill is payable at a bank presentment must be within banking hours: Parker v Gordon (1806) 7 East 385; Whitaker v Bank of England (1835) 6 C & P 700. The inference that presentment was within such hours cannot be drawn from it being made by a notary: Elford v Teed (1813) 1 M & S 28. Where it is payable at the business premises of a merchant or trader, the hours are not so strict (Barclay v Bailey (1810) 2 Camp 527), nor at those of a solicitor (Triggs v Newnham (1825) 1 C & P 631; subsequent proceedings 10 Moore CP 249). In both these cases the time was 8 pm. When at a private house, in the opinion of the court 12 midnight would be unreasonable, but 7 to 8 pm would not, though at the time the house was shut up, and there was no one there to pay the bill: Wilkins v Jadis (1831) 2 B & Ad 188.
- 7 As to what is a business day see PARA 1437. As to when the instrument falls due on a non-business day see the Bills of Exchange Act 1882 s 14; and PARA 1437.

Alternative means of presentment: cheques.

1523. Alternative means of presentment: cheques.

Where a banker<sup>1</sup> presents a cheque<sup>2</sup> for payment to the banker on whom it is drawn, he may simply notify to the latter its essential features<sup>3</sup> by electronic means or otherwise instead of presenting the cheque itself<sup>4</sup>, and this renders both bankers subject to the same duties in relation to the collection and payment of the cheque as if the cheque itself had been presented for payment<sup>5</sup>.

Where a cheque is presented for payment in this way, presentment need not be made at the proper place or at a reasonable hour on a business day<sup>6</sup>; nor do the duties to present an instrument<sup>7</sup> for payment and to deliver the instrument up after payment<sup>8</sup> apply<sup>9</sup>.

1 As to the meaning of 'banker' see PARA 1403 note 7.

2 As to the meaning of 'cheque' see PARA 1405.

3 For these purposes, the essential features of a cheque are: (1) the serial number of the cheque; (2) the code which identifies the banker on whom the cheque is drawn; (3) the account number of the drawer of the cheque; and (4) the amount of the cheque is entered by the drawer of the cheque: Bills of Exchange Act 1882 s 74B(6) (s 74B added SI 1996/2993). Although, under head (4) above, the word 'is' appears in the Queen's printers copy of the statutory instrument, the word 'as' appears to be intended.

4 Bills of Exchange Act 1882 s 74B(1) (as added: see note 3). This mode of presentment has effect in relation to cheques drawn on or after 28 November 1996: Deregulation (Bills of Exchange) Order 1996, SI 1996/2993, art 4(2).

5 Bills of Exchange Act 1882 s 74B(5) (as added: see note 3). However, if, before the close of business on the next business day following such a presentment, the banker on whom the cheque is drawn requests the banker by whom the cheque was presented to present the cheque itself then (1) the presentment must be disregarded; and (2) this mode of presentment will not apply to the subsequent presentment of the cheque: s 74B(3)(a), (b) (as so added). Such a request for the presentment of a cheque does not constitute dishonour of the cheque by non-payment: s 74B(4) (as so added).

6 Bills of Exchange Act 1882 s 74B(2) (as added: see note 3). As to what constitutes a reasonable hour, a business day and the proper place when this alternative mode of presentment does not apply see PARA 1522.

C. NOTICE OF DISHONOUR

1524. Necessity for notice of dishonour.

As in the case of dishonour by non-acceptance<sup>1</sup>, so also in that of dishonour by non-payment<sup>2</sup>, notice of dishonour must be given to the drawer<sup>3</sup> and each indorser<sup>4</sup>; otherwise the drawer or any indorser to whom such notice is not given is discharged<sup>5</sup>. But where a bill<sup>6</sup> has been dishonoured by non-acceptance, and due notice of dishonour has been given, it is unnecessary to give notice of a subsequent dishonour by non-payment unless the bill has in the meantime been accepted<sup>7</sup>.

The rules for giving due notice of dishonour<sup>8</sup> are the same whether the dishonour has been by non-acceptance or non-payment.

1 See PARA 1515 (where also the effect on the rights of a subsequent holder in due course of want of dishonour by non-acceptance is described).

Mere knowledge that the bill is dishonoured is not an equivalent to notice: Cory v Scott (1820) 3 B & Ald 619, distinguishing Bickerdike v Bollman (1786) 1 Term Rep 405; Caunt v Thompson (1849) 7 CB 400; Re Fenwick, Stobart & Co, Deep Sea Fishery Co's (Ltd) Claim [1902] 1 Ch 507; Carter v Flower (1847) 16 M & W 743. ### 1525. Dishonour by non-payment.

An instrument<sup>1</sup> is dishonoured by non-payment either when it is duly presented for payment and payment is refused or cannot be obtained, or when, presentment being excused, the instrument is overdue and unpaid<sup>2</sup>.

There accrues to the holder<sup>3</sup> immediately after dishonour by non-payment the right of recourse against all persons<sup>4</sup> secondarily liable on the instrument<sup>5</sup>. The onus of proof of dishonour, that is, that the right of action has arisen, lies on the claimant suing on the bill<sup>6</sup>.

Notice of dishonour must be given by or on behalf of the holder<sup>1</sup>, or by or on behalf of an indorser<sup>2</sup> who at the time of giving it is himself liable on the instrument<sup>3</sup>.

If the instrument is in an agent's hands when dishonoured, the agent may give notice either to his principal or to the parties liable on the instrument<sup>4</sup>, and if he adopts the latter course he may give notice in his own name or in the name of any party entitled to give notice, whether that party is his principal or not<sup>5</sup>.

Notice given by or on behalf of the holder<sup>1</sup> enures for the benefit of all subsequent holders and all prior indorsers<sup>2</sup> who have a right of recourse against the party to whom it is given<sup>3</sup>.

Where given by or on behalf of an indorser entitled to give notice<sup>4</sup>, it enures for the benefit of the holder<sup>5</sup> and all indorsers subsequent to the party to whom notice is given<sup>6</sup>.

NOTICE OF DISHONOUR/1528. To whom notice must be given.*

1528. To whom notice must be given.

It is unnecessary in order to render the acceptor<sup>1</sup> of a bill<sup>2</sup> or the maker<sup>3</sup> of a note<sup>4</sup> liable on it that he should be given notice of dishonour<sup>5</sup>. But in order to render the drawer<sup>6</sup> or any indorser<sup>7</sup> liable notice is, as a rule, necessary<sup>8</sup>.

It is for the holder<sup>9</sup> to give notice to such parties as he desires to charge. He may give notice to all prior parties or only to his immediate indorser, and the latter may in turn give notice to his immediate indorser, and so forth until the chain is complete up to the drawer himself<sup>10</sup>.

However, the sequence may be broken at any point by a failure to give notice within the proper time, the effect of which is to release from liability all parties antecedent to the indorser who has thus broken the sequence<sup>11</sup>. In addition to this, there is the increased difficulty of proving the sending of notice in each case. Hence it is the more prudent course for the holder to give notice to all prior parties at once.

1529. When notice unnecessary.

In the case of the drawer<sup>1</sup>, notice of dishonour is not required<sup>2</sup> where: (1) the drawer and the drawee<sup>3</sup> are the same person<sup>4</sup>; (2) the drawee is a fictitious person or a person not having the capacity to contract<sup>5</sup>; (3) the drawer is the person to whom the bill is presented for payment<sup>6</sup>; (4) the drawee or acceptor<sup>7</sup> is as between himself and the drawer under no obligation to accept or pay the bill<sup>8</sup>; (5) the drawer has countermanded payment.

In the case of an indorser<sup>9</sup> it is not required<sup>10</sup> where: (a) the drawee is a fictitious person or a person not having capacity to contract, and the indorser was aware of the fact at the time that he indorsed the instrument<sup>11</sup>; (b) the indorser is the person to whom the bill is presented for payment; (c) the instrument was accepted or made for his accommodation.

As regards persons who are not parties to the instrument, notice of dishonour is not required in the case of guarantors<sup>12</sup>, but it would seem that persons who are liable on the consideration are entitled to notice<sup>13</sup>.

- 1 As to the meaning of 'drawer' see PARA 1406.
- 2 Bills of Exchange Act 1882 s 50(2)(c). In all these cases the drawer is in the position, usually occupied by the acceptor, of the person primarily liable; see PARAS 1456-1457. - 8 I.e. where the bill is an accommodation bill (under the Bills of Exchange Act 1882 s 28); see PARA 1482. Where the drawer of a bill makes it payable at his own house, that fact is evidence that the bill is a mere accommodation bill: Sharp v Bailey (1829) 9 B & C 44.

9 As to the meaning of 'indorser' see PARA 1407 note 8.

10 Bills of Exchange Act 1882 s 50(2)(d). In these cases, again, the indorser is in the position of a party primarily liable on the instrument. However where the indorser for whose accommodation the instrument was accepted or made is not the first indorser, the previous indorsers cannot be sued unless they have had notice of dishonour: Turner v Samson (1876) 2 QBD 23, CA. BILLS OF EXCHANGE AND OTHER NEGOTIABLE INSTRUMENTS/(1) BILLS OF EXCHANGE, CHEQUES AND PROMISSORY NOTES/(xiii) Duties of Holder/C. NOTICE OF DISHONOUR/1530. Notice to party liable or his agent, etc.

1530. Notice to party liable or his agent, etc.

Notice may be given to any party whom it is sought to render liable by giving it either to the party himself or to his agent in that behalf<sup>1</sup>.

If the drawer<sup>2</sup> or indorser<sup>3</sup> is dead to the knowledge of the party giving notice, the notice must be given to a personal representative of the deceased, if there is one and if with reasonable diligence he can be found<sup>4</sup>. If the drawer or indorser is bankrupt<sup>5</sup>, notice may be given either to the party himself or to his trustee in bankruptcy<sup>6</sup>.

Where there are two or more parties to be made jointly liable, and they are partners, notice to any one partner is notice to all<sup>7</sup>, but where they are not partners, notice must be given to each of them, unless one of them has authority to receive such notice for the others<sup>8</sup>.

1 Bills of Exchange Act 1882 s 49(8). In general, notice delivered at the business premises of the party is sufficient (Crosse v Smith (1813) 1 M & S 545; Allen v Edmundson (1848) 2 Exch 719 at 723; Viale v Michael (1874) 30 LT 463; and cf The Elmville [1904] P 319); and in the case of a non-trader a message orally given to the wife of the party has been held a valid notice: Houseto v Cowne (1837) 2 M & W 348. It would appear that, if one person makes another his agent for the purpose of indorsing an instrument, that person is also an agent for the purpose of receiving notice of dishonour (Firth v Thrush (1828) 8 B & C 387 at 391 per Lord Tenterden); but where the name of a person is inserted by an indorser as a referee in case of need (as to which see PARA 1409), notice to that person is insufficient (Re Leeds Banking Co, ex p Prange (1865) LR 1 Eq 1). For the purpose of receiving notice each branch of a bank must be considered as a separate entity: Clode v Bayley (1843) 12 M & W 51. See also Fielding & Co v Corry [1898] 1 QB 268, CA. Where there were three separate companies, and company No 1 had drawn a bill on company No 2 to its own order and indorsed it to company No 3, notice of dishonour to No 3 must not be taken to be notice to No 1, although No 1 and No 3 had the same secretary, for, on the particular facts of the case, the secretary knew of the dishonour as secretary of No 3 in circumstances in which it was not his duty to communicate it to company No 1: Re Fenwick, Stobart & Co, Deep Sea Fishery Co's (Ltd) Claim [1902] 1 Ch 507. See also AGENCY vol 1 (2008) PARA 138.

2 As to the meaning of 'drawer' see PARA 1406.

3 As to the meaning of 'indorser' see PARA 1407 note 8.

4 Bills of Exchange Act 1882 s 49(9). Presumably, if there is no personal representative, notice may be sent to the last residence or last place of business of the deceased: see PARA 1520 text to note 11, where similar contingencies are provided for in the case of presentment for payment.

5 As to the meaning of 'bankrupt' see PARA 1514 note 4.

6 Bills of Exchange Act 1882 s 49(10); Re Bellman, ex p Baker (1877) 4 ChD 795, CA.

7 So even where the drawer is one of the partners in a firm which accepted a bill, the notice received by any member of the firm of the dishonour of the bill is sufficient to bind the partner who drew the bill (Hills v Thorowgood (1836) 5 LJB 214); and where a bill drawn by partners is dishonoured after the dissolution of the partnership, notice of dishonour to the continuing partner is sufficient notice to the retiring partner (Goldfarb v Bartlett and Kremer [1920] 1 KB 639). As to partnerships see PARA 1467.

8 Bills of Exchange Act 1882 s 49(11). Quaere whether, if the joint parties are not partners, notice to one of them would bind even him.

1531. Time of notice.

Time is an element of the utmost importance in regard to the due sending of notice of dishonour<sup>1</sup>.

Notice may be given as soon as the instrument<sup>2</sup> is dishonoured<sup>3</sup>, and it must at all events be given within a reasonable time thereafter<sup>4</sup>. What is a 'reasonable time' must, as in the case of presentment for payment<sup>5</sup>, be to some extent a matter of fact dependent upon the circumstances of the case<sup>6</sup>; but in respect of notices of dishonour the rules laid down by law for its determination are much more precise.

In the absence of special circumstances<sup>7</sup>, notice is not deemed to have been given within a reasonable time unless (1) where the party giving and the party to receive notice reside in the same place, the notice is given or sent off in time to reach the latter on the day after the dishonour of the instrument<sup>8</sup>; or (2) where the party giving and the party to receive notice reside in different places, the notice is sent off on the day after the dishonour of the instrument, if there is a post at a convenient hour on that day, or, if there is no such post on that day, then by the next post thereafter<sup>9</sup>.

As notice of dishonour is one of the things required by the statute to be done in less than three days, non-business days are excluded in reckoning the time<sup>10</sup>.

1 As to the necessity for notice of dishonour see PARA 1524.

2 As to the meaning of 'instrument' see PARA 1402 note 1.

5 See PARAS 1518-1519.

6 See The Elmville [1904] P 319 at 330 per Gorell Barnes J.

7 'Special circumstances' is a term which is no doubt intended to leave the court a wide discretion. It would cover the facts in The Elmville [1904] P 319 (notice delivered as soon as possible after inquiries made). It would also cover the facts in a case where an indorsee, who was a Jew, omitted to send notice on a Jewish festival, on which he was forbidden by his religious law to attend to secular business: Lindo v Unsworth (1811) 2 Camp 602. In Lombard Banking Ltd v Central Garage and Engineering Co Ltd [1963] 1 QB 220, [1962] 2 All ER 949, it was held that where the plaintiffs sent off notices of dishonour only after the dishonoured bills were returned to them by their bankers, they acted reasonably and that the circumstances were special exempting them from the timetable set out in the Bills of Exchange Act 1882 s 49(12), (13). As to s 49(13) see PARA 1532.

8 Bills of Exchange Act 1882 s 49(12)(a). See Yeoman Credit Ltd v Gregory [1963] 1 All ER 245, [1963] 1 WLR 343. If, in the ordinary course of post, the notice would reach its destination on the right day, it is sufficient (Hilton v Fairclough (1811) 2 Camp 633), but where an indorser received notice one day and posted it on so late on the following day that the next party in order received it on the day after that, it was held insufficient (Smith v Mullett (1809) 2 Camp 208). 10 See the Bills of Exchange Act 1882 s 92; and PARA 1437. Where a bill was dishonoured in a place where the post went out at 9.30 am and the day was Saturday, it was held a sufficient notice when sent out by the post on Tuesday morning: Hawkes v Salter (1828) 4 Bing 715. So, too, an indorser who received notice on a Sunday was held to have given sufficient notice by sending it out on Tuesday morning, for he was not obliged to open the letter apprising him of the dishonour on the Sunday: Wright v Shawcross (1819) 2 B & Ald 501n.

BILLS OF EXCHANGE AND OTHER NEGOTIABLE INSTRUMENTS/(1) BILLS OF EXCHANGE, CHEQUES AND PROMISSORY NOTES/(xiii) Duties of Holder/C. NOTICE OF DISHONOUR/1532. Time for passing on notice.

1532. Time for passing on notice.

Where a party receives due notice of dishonour, he has the same period of time after the receipt of such notice for giving notice to antecedent parties as the holder<sup>1</sup> has after the dishonour<sup>2</sup>.

So, too, if a dishonoured instrument<sup>3</sup> is in the hands of an agent who elects to give notice to his principal instead of to the parties liable on the instrument, he must give the notice within the same time as if he were the holder, and the principal upon receipt of the notice has himself the same time for giving notice as if the agent had been an independent holder<sup>4</sup>.

1 As to the meaning of 'holder' see PARA 1407.

2 Bills of Exchange Act 1882 s 49(14); Rowe v Tipper (1853) 13 CB 249. As to whom notice of dishonour must be given see PARA 1528. In the case of a sequence of holders, each successive notice must be given in due time, so that, if there has been any failure to give such due notice, a prior party cannot be made liable by showing that, having regard to the total time between the dishonour and the time that such prior party has received notice, he has received it as soon as he should; for where the break in the sequence occurred the party to whom notice was given too late has become a stranger to the bill, and cannot himself give notice to another: Turner v Leech (1821) 4 B & Ald 451. The fact that a party sent notice to an indorser, which notice, owing to the intervention of a Sunday, might have been sent to reach that indorser a day later than it actually did, does not excuse the latter for not sending notice to the drawers within the required time: Miers v Brown (1843) 11 M & W 372. principal may not add on to his own time for giving notice any time saved by the agent in giving notice to him: Yeoman Credit Ltd v Gregory [1963] 1 All ER 245, [1963] 1 WLR 343.

1533. Delay in giving notice.

Delay in giving notice of dishonour is excused when the delay is caused by circumstances which are beyond the control of the party giving notice and are not imputable to his default, misconduct or negligence, but when the cause of delay ceases to operate the notice must be given with reasonable diligence<sup>1</sup>.

<sup>1</sup> Bills of Exchange Act 1882 s 50(1); see The Elmville [1904] P 319, cited in PARA 1531 note 7. See also Gladwell v Turner (1870) LR 5 Exch 59 (where all the parties lived in the same place; on the morning after the bill was dishonoured the holder applied to his indorser for information as to the residence of the drawer; his indorser was out at the time, and although he obtained the information from him later in the day and then posted notice to the drawer, the notice did not reach the drawer that day, as it should have done; it was held, however, that he had acted with reasonable diligence, and the notice was therefore sufficient). BILLS OF EXCHANGE AND OTHER NEGOTIABLE INSTRUMENTS/(1) BILLS OF EXCHANGE, CHEQUES AND PROMISSORY NOTES/(xiii) Duties of Holder/C. NOTICE OF DISHONOUR/1534. Form and service of notice.

1534. Form and service of notice.

Notice may be given in writing<sup>1</sup> or by personal communication<sup>2</sup>. When it is in writing it need not be delivered personally. It may be sent through the post, and in that case if it is duly addressed and posted, a fact which it rests with the sender to prove, the sender is absolved from liability for any miscarriage by a postal operator<sup>3</sup>.

It may also be sent by special messenger<sup>4</sup>, but if it thereby reaches its destination on a later day than that on which it would have been delivered in the ordinary course by a postal operator, it is ineffectual<sup>5</sup>.

A written notice need not be signed<sup>6</sup>, and an insufficient written notice may be supplemented and validated by oral communication<sup>7</sup>.

It may be given in any terms which sufficiently identify the instrument<sup>8</sup> and intimate that it has been dishonoured by non-acceptance or non-payment, as the case may be<sup>9</sup>.

A misdescription of the instrument does not vitiate the notice unless the party to whom notice is given is in fact misled thereby<sup>10</sup>.

The return of a dishonoured instrument to the drawer<sup>11</sup> or indorser<sup>12</sup> is in point of form deemed to be a sufficient notice of dishonour<sup>13</sup>.

As to being duly addressed, the notice should be sent to the place of business of the person whom it is desired to notify, or to his residence: Berridge v Fitzgerald (1869) LR 4 QB 639. It should not in general be addressed to Messrs ----- at some larger place, eg London (Walter v Haynes (1824) Ry & M 149); but where the party in question has so described himself on the instrument, such an address will suffice (Burmester v Barron (1852) 17 QB 828). Where notice was by mistake sent to the wrong branch of a large bank, a subsequent telegram correcting the address has been held sufficient: Fielding & Co v Corry [1898] 1 QB 268, CA. See Caunt v Thompson (1849) 7 CB 400 at 411 per Cresswell J, summing up the previous cases ('In substance these cases seem to establish that in order to make a prior holder responsible he must derive from some person entitled to call for payment information that the bill has been dishonoured, and that the party is in a condition to sue him, from which he may infer that he is responsible'). Cf Hedger v Steavenson (1837) 2 M & W 799 at 805 per Parke B, holding that if the notice discloses by a reasonable intendment, and if it would be inferred from it by any man of business, that the bill had been presented to the acceptor and had not been paid by him, it is sufficient, although it does not so state in terms. See also Paul v Joel (1859) 4 H & N 355 (which points out that the contrary decision in Solarte v Palmer (1834) 1 Bing NC 194 was a decision on particular facts only) and Bailey v Porter (1845) 14 M & W 44.

As to what is a sufficient description of the bill see Shelton v Braithwaite (1841) 7 M & W 436 (which decides that, if it is set up that there is more than one bill to which the notice might apply, proof thereof lies on the defendant).

10 Bills of Exchange Act 1882 s 49(7); Bromage v Vaughan (1846) 9 QB 608; Mellersh v Rippen (1852) 7 Exch 578. In Rowlands v Springett (1845) 14 LJEx 227, a card was left at the house of the drawer of a bill with the name and address of an indorser, and on the back was written 'Bill for £30 drawn by S on W dishonoured lies due as on the other side'; in fact, the indorser was not then the holder, and the bill was not at his address, but the notice was held sufficient. It is immaterial if in the notice the instrument is described as a note when it should have been a bill (Stockman v Parr (1843) 11 M & W 809), or vice versa (Messenger v Southey (1840) 1 Man & G 76); nor is it material if the capacities in which the parties sign the bill are wrongly described: Mellersh v Rippen (1852) 7 Exch 578.

1535. When notice dispensed with.

Notice of dishonour is dispensed with altogether where despite the exercise of reasonable diligence it cannot be given to or does not reach the drawer<sup>1</sup> or indorser<sup>2</sup> whom it is sought to charge<sup>3</sup>.

1 As to the meaning of 'drawer' see PARA 1406.

2 As to the meaning of 'indorser' see PARA 1407 note 8.

3 Bills of Exchange Act 1882 s 50(2)(a). As to the necessity for notice of dishonour otherwise see PARA 1524. The question of reasonable diligence is a question of fact in each case: Bateman v Joseph (1810) 12 East 433. Where the drawer told the holder before maturity that he had no regular residence, and would call and see if the bill was honoured by the acceptor, the holder was held absolved from the duty of giving notice to him: Phipson v Kneller (1815) 4 Camp 285. So, too, where the holder went to the place of business of the drawer and found it shut up, it was held that notice might be dispensed with (Allen v Edmundson (1848) 2 Exch 719), but where the holder failed to find the drawer at the address given, yet was afterwards, but before action brought, informed of a place where the drawer was to be found, he was held not to be absolved from the duty of giving notice (Studdy v Beesty and Higgins (1889) 60 LT 647, CA).

1536. Waiver of notice.

Notice of dishonour may be waived expressly<sup>1</sup> or by implication<sup>2</sup>, and either before the time for giving notice has arrived<sup>3</sup>, or after the omission to give<sup>4</sup> due notice<sup>5</sup>; but an admission of liability by the drawer<sup>6</sup> or an indorser<sup>7</sup> must be made with full knowledge of the facts, or it will not operate as a waiver of notice<sup>8</sup>.

1 As to express waiver see the Bills of Exchange Act 1882 s 16(2); and PARA 1440. If the drawer or an indorser so waives his right to notice of dishonour, no subsequent party need give him notice, but it does not affect the duty of giving notice to prior parties: Turner v Leech (1821) 4 B & Ald 451.

2 As to implied waiver, suffering judgment by default in an action by the second indorser is evidence of notice or of a waiver of notice in a claim by the first indorser: Rabey v Gilbert (1861) 6 H & N 536.

3 Phipson v Kneller (1815) 4 Camp 285 (where the drawer, who had told the holder that he had no fixed address, promised, shortly before the bill fell due, to call in a few days to see if the bill had been paid); Brett v Levett (1811) 13 East 213 (where the drawer told the holder that the bill would not be paid when it fell due).

4 Mills v Gibson (1847) 16 LJCP 249; Woods v Dean (1862) 3 B & S 101 (where an indorser, who had not received notice of dishonour, on being told that the holder was going to sue him, said he would pay if given time); Cordery v Colvin (1863) 14 CBNS 374 (where the drawer of a bill, made payable at his own house, repeatedly promised, after its dishonour, to pay it).

6 As to the meaning of 'drawer' see PARA 1406.

7 As to the meaning of 'indorser' see PARA 1407 note 8.

8 Thus, where the drawer after the maturity of a bill wrote to the holder admitting liability in ignorance of the fact that it had not been presented, it was held that he had not by his admission dispensed with the duty of presentment or the consequences of the want of it: Keith v Burke (1885) Cab & El 551; cf Pickin v Graham (1833) 1 Cr & M 725.

NOTING AND PROTEST/1537. Noting.

D. NOTING AND PROTEST

1537. Noting.

A notary public is a duly appointed officer whose duty it is to draw, attest or certify documents<sup>1</sup>. In the case of bills of exchange<sup>2</sup> the notary or his clerk makes a formal demand upon the drawee<sup>3</sup> or acceptor<sup>4</sup> for acceptance or payment<sup>5</sup>, as the case may be, and on refusal notes the bill; that is, he writes a minute on the face of the bill. This minute consists of his initials, the date, the noting charges, and a reference to the notary's register.

A ticket or label is also attached to the bill, on which is written the answer given to the notary's clerk who makes the presentment, for example, 'No orders' or 'No effects'. Before sending out the bill the notary makes a full copy of it in his register and subsequently adds the answer, if any<sup>6</sup>.

Where an instrument<sup>7</sup> is required by the statute to be protested within a specified time or before some further proceeding is taken, it is sufficient that the instrument has been noted for protest before the expiration of the specified time or the taking of that proceeding, and the formal protest may be extended at any time thereafter as of the date of the noting<sup>8</sup>.

1539. Meaning of protest; protest before notary.

A protest is a declaration on behalf of the holder<sup>1</sup> that the bill<sup>2</sup> has been presented for payment and was unpaid<sup>3</sup>. It must be made and signed by a notary public<sup>4</sup>.

The object of requiring the protest to be made by a notary public is that his office is universally recognised not only in the courts of this country, but also in many foreign countries. By the law of nations his acts have credit everywhere<sup>5</sup>.

1539 Meaning of protest; protest before notary

NOTE 4--'Notary' includes a person who, for the purposes of the Legal Services Act 2007, is an authorised person in relation to any activity which constitutes a notarial activity (within the meaning of that Act) (see LEGAL PROFESSIONS vol 65 (2008) PARA 516); Bills of Exchange Act 1882 s 51(7A) (added by Legal Services Act 2007 Sch 21 para 9).

In cases where a protest is necessary<sup>1</sup>, and where the services of a notary cannot be obtained at the time and place where they are required, any householder or substantial resident of the place may in the presence of two witnesses give a certificate signed by them attesting the dishonour of the instrument<sup>2</sup>, and such a certificate operates, in all respects, as if it were a notarial protest<sup>3</sup>.

1540 Protest where no notary available

NOTE 3--Renumbered as Bills of Exchange Act 1882 s 94(1) (amended by Legal Services Act 2007 Sch 21 para 10). 'Notary' includes a person who, for the purposes of the Legal Services Act 2007, is an authorised person in relation to any activity which constitutes a notarial activity (within the meaning of that Act) (see LEGAL PROFESSIONS vol 65 (2008) PARA 516): Bills of Exchange Act 1882 s 94(2) (added by Legal Services Act 2007 Sch 21 para 10).

NOTING AND PROTEST/1541. Contents of protest.*

1541. Contents of protest.

A protest<sup>1</sup>, besides being made and signed, must contain a copy of the instrument<sup>2</sup>, and must specify: (1) the person<sup>3</sup> at whose request the instrument is protested<sup>4</sup>; (2) the place and date of protest<sup>5</sup>; (3) the cause or reason for protesting the instrument<sup>6</sup>; (4) the demand made<sup>7</sup>; and (5) the answer given, if any, or the fact that the drawee<sup>8</sup> or acceptor<sup>9</sup> could not be found<sup>10</sup>.

Where an instrument is lost or destroyed, or is wrongly detained from the person entitled to hold it, protest may be made on a copy or written<sup>11</sup> particulars thereof<sup>12</sup>.

A protest may be made out in duplicate, and the second copy is as much primary evidence as the copy first drawn out<sup>13</sup>.

No witnesses are required to attest a protest by a notary public<sup>14</sup>.

1542. Necessity for protest: inland instruments.

Where the instrument<sup>1</sup> which has been dishonoured is an inland instrument<sup>2</sup>, it may, if the holder<sup>3</sup> thinks fit, be noted for non-acceptance or non-payment<sup>4</sup>; but it is not necessary to note or protest<sup>5</sup> it in order to preserve the recourse against the drawer<sup>6</sup> or indorser<sup>7</sup>. There are certain advantages in causing even an inland instrument to be noted. Not only is the notary a person whose business it is to know and to adopt the proper measures when an instrument is dishonoured, and therefore both the best agent for the carrying out of such measures and the best witness at a trial of their having been carried out, but his minute on the instrument itself is the most satisfactory record of the non-payment of the instrument for the information of the parties who may thereafter be called upon to pay.

The costs of noting an inland instrument are recoverable as damages<sup>8</sup>.

It is necessary if it is desired to obtain an acceptance or payment for honour that the instrument should first be protested, or at least noted for protest<sup>9</sup>.

Protest is dispensed with altogether by any circumstance which would dispense with notice of dishonour<sup>10</sup>.

1543. Necessity for protest: foreign bills.

Protest<sup>1</sup> is only necessary in the case of a foreign bill<sup>2</sup> appearing on its face to be such. Where such a bill has been dishonoured by non-acceptance<sup>3</sup>, it must be duly protested for non-acceptance; and where it has not been previously dishonoured by non-acceptance, but is dishonoured by non-payment<sup>4</sup>, it must be duly protested for non-payment, otherwise the drawer<sup>5</sup> and indorsers<sup>6</sup> are discharged<sup>7</sup>. The costs of protest, when necessary, can be recovered as liquidated damages<sup>8</sup>.

A bill which has been protested for non-acceptance may be subsequently protested for non-payment<sup>9</sup>.

However, a bill which is in reality a foreign bill, but does not on the face of it appear to be so, need not be protested in case of dishonour<sup>10</sup>. Nor is protest necessary, for the purposes of English law, where a foreign promissory note is dishonoured<sup>11</sup>.

However both in this case and in the case of a foreign bill which does not appear to be such it must be remembered that the release from duty to protest applies to English law only. In order to charge a party in a foreign country, protest should be made in case it is required by the laws of that country.

1544. Protest for better security.

Where the acceptor<sup>1</sup> becomes a bankrupt<sup>2</sup> or insolvent, or suspends payment before maturity of the bill<sup>3</sup>, the holder<sup>4</sup> may cause the bill to be protested<sup>5</sup> for better security against the drawer<sup>6</sup> and indorsers<sup>7</sup>. The advantage of this course, beyond the inherent one of having the circumstances placed on record for the information of the drawer and indorsers, is that it enables the bill to be accepted for honour<sup>8</sup>.

The expenses, however, of a protest for better security are not recoverable, whereas those for protest for non-acceptance or non-payment are<sup>9</sup>.

The expenses of noting, or, when protest is necessary and the protest has been extended, the expenses of protest, are part of the damages recoverable on dishonour: s 57(1)(c). See PARAS 1542, 1543. However protest for better security is not 'necessary', and the expenses therefor cannot be recovered: Re English Bank of the River Plate, ex p Bank of Brazil [1893] 2 Ch 438. ### 1545. Protest where acceptance partial or qualified.

Where there is a qualified acceptance<sup>1</sup> the holder<sup>2</sup> is entitled to treat the bill as dishonoured by non-acceptance<sup>3</sup>, and the better course is so to treat it and to protest<sup>4</sup> absolutely for want of acceptance according to the tenor of the bill, unless the holder is authorised by antecedent parties to assent to the qualification; otherwise any antecedent party (whether drawer<sup>5</sup> or indorser<sup>6</sup>) who has not authorised or does not subsequently assent<sup>7</sup> to the qualification is released from his liability on the bill<sup>8</sup>.

In the case of a foreign bill<sup>9</sup> which has been accepted in part the bill must be protested as to the balance<sup>10</sup>.

The provisions described above do not apply to a partial acceptance, whereof due notice has been given<sup>11</sup>.

The general rule is that a bill<sup>1</sup> must be protested<sup>2</sup> at the place where it is dishonoured<sup>3</sup>; but when it has been presented through a postal operator<sup>4</sup>, and returned by post dishonoured, it may be protested at the place to which it is returned and on the day of its return if received during business hours, and if not received during business hours, then not later than the next business day<sup>5</sup>.

When, being drawn payable at the place of business or residence of some person<sup>6</sup> other than the drawee<sup>7</sup>, it has been dishonoured by non-acceptance<sup>8</sup>, it must be protested for non-payment at the place where it is expressed to be payable, and no further presentment for payment to or demand on the drawee is necessary<sup>9</sup>.

(xiv) Discharge

A. BY STATUTE

1550. Payment in due course.

Discharge of the instrument<sup>1</sup>, that is to say the ending of the life of the instrument and of all rights of action thereon, may be caused in a variety of ways.

By statute, an instrument may be discharged by payment in due course to the holder<sup>2</sup> by or on behalf of the drawee<sup>3</sup> or acceptor<sup>4</sup> (if the instrument is a bill<sup>5</sup>) or the maker<sup>6</sup> (if it is a note)<sup>7</sup>.

Payment in due course means payment<sup>8</sup> at or after the maturity of the instrument<sup>9</sup>, for otherwise a subsequent holder might take the instrument in ignorance of the fact of its payment<sup>10</sup>. The payment must be to the holder, and it must be made in good faith<sup>11</sup> and without notice of defect in his title to the instrument<sup>12</sup>.

1 As to the meaning of 'instrument' see PARA 1402 note 1. 'Discharge of the instrument' is to be distinguished from the release or discharge of a party to the instrument; a clear example of the distinction is afforded by comparison of the Bills of Exchange Act 1882 s 62(1) and s 62(2) (see PARA 1564). For the survival of rights of action notwithstanding the discharge where they arise out of the circumstances of the transaction see PARA 1564.

In London Banking Corpn Ltd v Horsnail, Hayward and Cooper (1898) 14 TLR 266, 3 Com Cas 105 Bigham J held that a 'banker's payment' (ie an order given by a bank directing payment at the banker's clearing house) constituted payment in law, but because with the assent of both parties the banker's payment had not been acted upon there had been no payment in fact, and the bill had not been discharged.

1551. Payment to wrong person.

There is a general right to recover money paid under a mistake, whether of fact or law<sup>1</sup>, subject to the defences available in the law of restitution<sup>2</sup>.

If agents for an acceptor<sup>3</sup> honour a bill<sup>4</sup> when due, mistakenly believing a forged signature to be that of the acceptor, they cannot recover the money paid from the holder<sup>5</sup>, for he was deprived of the opportunity of giving notice of dishonour and is therefore deemed to have changed his position<sup>6</sup>. Nor can repayment be recovered from an agent where money has been received by an innocent agent who has paid it out to his principal or on his instructions<sup>7</sup>.

If the party primarily liable on an instrument<sup>8</sup> pays the amount thereof to a wrong person, who holds it under a forged or unauthorised indorsement<sup>9</sup>, he remains liable for the amount to the true owner, though he may recover the amount from the person whom he has wrongly paid<sup>10</sup>.

1552. Payment by banker.

A banker<sup>1</sup> is in a somewhat exceptional position, for where a bill is drawn on him payable to order on demand<sup>2</sup>, and he pays the bill in good faith<sup>3</sup> and in the ordinary course of business, it is not incumbent on him to show that any indorsement<sup>4</sup> on the instrument<sup>5</sup> was made by or under the authority of the person<sup>6</sup> whose indorsement it purports to be; and he is deemed to have paid the bill in due course although the indorsement has been forged or made without authority<sup>7</sup>.

The need for indorsement of cheques was abolished in the majority of cases by the Cheques Act 1957 so that a banker paying a cheque<sup>8</sup> in good faith<sup>9</sup> and in the ordinary course of business which is not indorsed or is irregularly indorsed does not in so doing incur any liability by reason only of the absence of, or irregularity in, indorsement and he is deemed to have paid in due course<sup>10</sup>. But if he pays a cheque on which his customer's signature as drawer<sup>11</sup> is forged, he cannot charge him with the money paid<sup>12</sup>.

1553. Accommodation bill.

In the case of an accommodation bill<sup>1</sup>, the party accommodated is in reality the principal debtor and a payment in due course<sup>2</sup> by him operates as a discharge of the bill<sup>3</sup>. The reason is that although, on the face of the bill, the acceptor<sup>4</sup> of the accommodation bill is the person primarily liable, he is in fact only a surety for the debt of the party accommodated; evidence is admissible in a claim to show the real relationship of the parties<sup>5</sup>.

1554. Acceptor becoming holder.

1 As to the meaning of 'instrument' see PARA 1402 note 1.

6 Bills of Exchange Act 1882 s 61; Harmer v Steele (1849) 4 Exch 1. However this is not so if he is not the holder in his own right: Nash v De Freville [1900] 2 QB 72, CA. 'In his own right' must mean something more than 'not in a representative capacity' as executor for instance. It could not possibly mean that, if a thief stole the note from the holder and placed it in the possession of the maker at or after maturity, the note should ipso facto be satisfied. I think 'in his own right' must mean having a right not subject to that of anyone else, but his own—good against all the world' (at 89 per Collins LJ).

1555. Renunciation by the holder.

The discharge of the instrument<sup>1</sup> is also achieved in certain cases by the action of the holder<sup>2</sup>, as where either at or after its maturity he absolutely and unconditionally renounces his rights against the maker<sup>3</sup> or acceptor<sup>4</sup>, and the liabilities of any party to an instrument may be absolutely and unconditionally renounced by the holder before, at, or after maturity<sup>5</sup>. However, a renunciation will not affect the rights of a holder in due course<sup>6</sup> who has no notice of the renunciation<sup>7</sup>. The renunciation must be in writing<sup>8</sup>, unless the instrument is actually delivered up to the maker or acceptor<sup>9</sup>.

9 Bills of Exchange Act 1882 ss 62(1), 89. Where the renunciation is not in writing, a delivery of the instrument to the legatees or devisees of the maker or acceptor is insufficient to discharge the instrument: Edwards v Walters [1896] 2 Ch 157, CA. See also Abrey v Crux (1869) LR 5 CP 37. It seems, however, that, had it been delivered up to the executors, that would have been sufficient, because they might have been sued on the instrument as standing in the place of the maker or acceptor.

1556. Cancellation by holder.

Discharge of the instrument<sup>1</sup> also occurs where it is cancelled by the holder or his agent<sup>2</sup> in such a way that the cancellation is apparent on the instrument<sup>3</sup>. It must be cancelled intentionally, for a cancellation made unintentionally or under a mistake or without the authority of the holder is inoperative<sup>4</sup>. Where, however, the instrument appears to be cancelled, the burden of proof lies on the party who alleges that the cancellation was made unintentionally or under a mistake or without authority<sup>5</sup>.

Where the signature of any party to an instrument is intentionally cancelled by the holder or his agent, the party whose signature is cancelled, and any subsequent party to whom that party is liable, is released from his liability on the instrument<sup>6</sup>.

INSTRUMENTS/(1) BILLS OF EXCHANGE, CHEQUES AND PROMISSORY NOTES/(xiv) Discharge/A. BY STATUTE/1557. Discharge under statute.

1557. Discharge under statute.

One or more of the parties to an instrument may be discharged by circumstances that do not operate as a discharge of the instrument<sup>1</sup>.

1 As to the meaning of 'discharge of the instrument' see PARA 1550. The cases specifically noted by the Bills of Exchange Act 1882 are: s 44(2) (see PARA 1464); ss 42, 45; s 48 (see PARAS 1515-1516); s 59(2)(b) (see PARA 1558); s 62(1), (2) (see PARA 1555); s 63(2) (see PARA 1556); s 64(1) (see PARAS 1559-1561). As to discharge of parties at common law see PARA 1565.

BILLS OF EXCHANGE AND OTHER NEGOTIABLE INSTRUMENTS/(1) BILLS OF EXCHANGE, CHEQUES AND PROMISSORY NOTES/(xiv) Discharge/A. BY STATUTE/1558. Payment by indorser or drawer.

1558. Payment by indorser or drawer.

If the instrument<sup>1</sup> is paid by an indorser<sup>2</sup>, the liability of the indorser to his indorsee<sup>3</sup> and all subsequent parties is extinguished, and he resumes the rights which he possessed as a holder<sup>4</sup> before he indorsed the instrument as regards the acceptor<sup>5</sup> or maker<sup>6</sup> and other antecedent parties<sup>7</sup>. He may therefore at his discretion strike out his own subsequent<sup>8</sup> indorsements<sup>9</sup> and again negotiate the instrument<sup>10</sup>.

The effect is the same in the case of a bill payable to drawer's<sup>11</sup> order<sup>12</sup> which is paid by the drawer, for then the drawer is also the first indorser<sup>13</sup>.

But where the instrument is a bill drawn payable to a third party, payment thereof by the drawer, though it releases him from liability and entitles him to enforce payment against the acceptor<sup>14</sup>, does not entitle him to reissue<sup>15</sup> the bill<sup>16</sup>, for that would be to vary the contract by substituting himself for the payee<sup>17</sup> and thereby materially to alter the bill<sup>18</sup>.

Payment of an accommodation bill by the drawer or indorser for whose accommodation it was drawn discharges the instrument<sup>19</sup>.

BILLS OF EXCHANGE AND OTHER NEGOTIABLE INSTRUMENTS/(1) BILLS OF EXCHANGE, CHEQUES AND PROMISSORY NOTES/(xiv) Discharge/B. BY ALTERATION/1559. Alteration of instrument or of acceptance.

B. BY ALTERATION

1559. Alteration of instrument or of acceptance.

Where an instrument<sup>1</sup>, or if a bill<sup>2</sup> the acceptance<sup>3</sup> thereon, is materially altered<sup>4</sup> without the assent of all the parties liable on it, the instrument is avoided<sup>5</sup> as regards all the parties except any one who has himself made, authorised, or assented to the alteration, and those who have become parties to the instrument subsequent to the material alteration<sup>6</sup>. But where the alteration, although material, is not apparent<sup>7</sup>, a holder in due course<sup>8</sup>, in whose hands the instrument is, may avail himself of the instrument as if it had not been altered, and may enforce payment of it according to its original tenor<sup>9</sup>.

The materiality of an alteration has been said to be a question of law<sup>10</sup>. It does not matter whether the parties ever benefited or not<sup>11</sup> by the alteration. The onus is on a person claiming on a bill manifestly altered to show that the alterations do not alter the liability of parties, either by English law, or, if the bill is governed by foreign law, by that law<sup>12</sup>.

1 As to the meaning of 'instrument' see PARA 1402 note 1.

2 As to the meaning of 'bill' see PARA 1405.

3 As to the meaning of 'acceptance' see PARA 1406.

4 As to material alterations see PARA 1560. The alteration must be made once the bill is complete: see Foster v Driscoll [1929] 1 KB 470, CA; Koch v Dicks [1933] 1 KB 307, CA.

5 The effect of the word 'avoided' is that a stolen non-negotiable cheque or a stolen banker's draft that has been fraudulently and materially altered by the deletion of the original payee's name and the insertion of the name of a third party becomes a worthless piece of paper, and no action for damages in conversion for its face value can be brought against a bank collecting such a cheque or paying such a draft: Smith v Lloyds TSB Group plc; Harvey Jones Ltd v Woolwich plc [2001] QB 541, [2001] 1 All ER 424, CA.

6 Bills of Exchange Act 1882 ss 64(1), 89; Master v Miller (1793) 2 Hy Bl 141; Hamelin v Bruck (1846) 9 QB 306. The alteration has the same effect upon the parties to the instrument if the alteration is made by one who is not a party to it; for the party who may suffer if a bill is avoided by alteration has no right to complain, since there cannot be any alteration except through fraud or laches on his part, ie a fraudulent alteration effected by the party, or carelessness permitting it to be effected by another: Davidson v Cooper (1844) 13 M & W 343. As to accidental alteration, the provisions of the Bills of Exchange Act 1882 s 64 relate only to alterations effected at the will of the person by whom or under whose directions they are made and do not apply to a change made due to pure accident, which negatives the possibility of assent: Hong Kong and Shanghai Bank Corp v Lo Lee Shi [1928] AC 181, PC.

7 'Apparent' means noticeable on reasonable scrutiny by an intending holder: Woollatt v Stanley (1928) 138 LT 620.

8 As to the meaning of 'holder in due course' see PARA 1407.

9 Bills of Exchange Act 1882 s 64(1) proviso, s 89; Scholfield v Earl of Londesborough [1896] AC 514, HL (where the drawer altered an acceptance for £500 to one for £3,500, and a holder in due course was permitted to recover £500 only); Bank of Montreal v Exhibit and Trading Co (1906) 11 Com Cas 250 (where the word 'Limited' was added to the name of the makers of a promissory note by an indorser); Imperial Bank of Canada v Bank of Hamilton [1903] AC 49, PC. See also Smith v Prosser [1907] 2 KB 735 at 746, CA, per Vaughan Williams LJ; Lewes Sanitary Steam Laundry Co v Barclay & Co Ltd (1906) 11 Com Cas 255. These cases leave unimpaired the authority of Young v Grote (1827) 4 Bing 253 (where it was held that if a cheque was so carelessly drawn as to enable it to be tampered with without the alteration being apparent, the drawer was estopped by his own negligence from setting up the alteration, for a customer owes his banker a duty of care in the manner in which he fills his cheque, but no such duty exists as between the acceptor and the holder of a bill). In London Joint Stock Bank v Macmillan and Arthur [1918] AC 777, HL (where the House of Lords expressly approved Young v Grote above), a trusted clerk presented to his employer for signature an uncompleted cheque bearing the figure '2' in such a position that the clerk in completing the cheque for £2, as he was authorised to do, was enabled to surround the '2' with other figures making it £120; having inserted 'one hundred and twenty' pounds in the space provided for words the clerk presented the cheque, was paid in cash and absconded; the bank was held entitled to debit the employer's account with the full amount of the cheque. In view of this judgment the statements of the Privy Council to a contrary effect in Colonial Bank of Australasia Ltd v Marshall [1906] AC 559, PC, have lost their authority; and see Tai Hing Cotton Mill Ltd v Liu Chong Hing Bank Ltd [1986] AC 80 at 101, [1985] 2 All ER 947 at 952-953, PC, per Lord Scarman; Joachimson v Swiss Bank Corp [1921] 3 KB 110, CA; Lumsden & Co v London Trustee Savings Bank [1971] 1 Lloyd's Rep 114.

1560. Material alterations.

The following alterations are specifically declared to be material<sup>1</sup>: any alteration of: (1) the date<sup>2</sup>; (2) the sum payable<sup>3</sup>; (3) the time of payment<sup>4</sup>; (4) the place of payment<sup>5</sup>, or the addition of a place of payment where none is mentioned by the acceptor<sup>6</sup>, without the acceptor's assent<sup>7</sup>.

Other alterations which have held to be material are the addition<sup>8</sup> or alteration<sup>9</sup> of a rate of interest, the insertion of a particular rate of exchange<sup>10</sup>, the alteration of the description of the payee<sup>11</sup>, the alteration of the place of drawing of a complete bill<sup>12</sup>, which changes the bill from an inland to a foreign bill<sup>13</sup>, the addition of the name of a new maker to a joint and several note<sup>14</sup>, or the elimination of the name of an existing maker<sup>15</sup>, and the conversion of a joint note into a joint and several note<sup>16</sup>.

A crossing of a cheque as authorised by the Bills of Exchange Act 1882 becomes a material part of the cheque, so that an obliteration of the crossing or an addition thereto, when not so authorised, is a material alteration of the cheque, and is not lawful<sup>17</sup>.

In general terms, a materially altered cheque is a worthless piece of paper and, since it accordingly has no value, no action may be brought in conversion with respect to the face value of the instrument<sup>18</sup>.

1561. Alterations not material.

The following alterations have been held to be immaterial: the addition of a wrong date for the maturity of the instrument<sup>1</sup>, the elimination of the words 'or order' in an instrument payable to order<sup>2</sup>, the conversion of an instrument payable to the payee<sup>3</sup> 'or bearer' into one payable to him 'or order'<sup>4</sup>, the alteration of the style of the drawee<sup>5</sup> (when wrongly stated in the bill) to his true style as signed by him in his acceptance<sup>6</sup>, the alteration of the place where the bill was drawn<sup>7</sup> (unless it has the effect of changing the bill from an inland to a foreign bill<sup>8</sup>), or the addition to a promissory note<sup>9</sup> of the name of an addressee<sup>10</sup>.

The conversion of a blank indorsement into a special indorsement is sanctioned by statute<sup>11</sup>.

Though the materiality or otherwise of an alteration has been said to be a matter of law<sup>12</sup>, the circumstances in which the alteration took place are a matter of fact; and where an instrument appears to have been altered, it rests with the party who seeks to enforce the instrument to give some evidence of what those circumstances were<sup>13</sup>.

A holder<sup>14</sup> who cannot recover on an instrument that has been materially altered cannot recover on the consideration which he gave for it<sup>15</sup>, unless the alteration was made without his knowledge and before he took the instrument<sup>16</sup>, or, where the alteration was made while in his possession, provided it was not made fraudulently, and the party from whom he seeks payment would have had no right of recourse if the alteration had not been made<sup>17</sup>; in this last case, if the bill is given for goods sold, the holder can sue for the price.

BY COMMON LAW/1562. Discharge of instrument at common law.

C. BY COMMON LAW

1562. Discharge of instrument at common law.

An instrument<sup>1</sup> may be discharged by any form of discharge which at common law applies to a simple contract for the payment of money and is not inconsistent with the terms of the Bills of Exchange Act 1882<sup>2</sup>.

Thus, if sufficiently long<sup>3</sup>, lapse of time, although it does not discharge the instrument, will operate as a bar to an action on it<sup>4</sup>.

A release granted to the principal debtor on the instrument<sup>5</sup> operates as a discharge, but the release must be at or after maturity, for otherwise, though good between the parties, it will not discharge the instrument<sup>6</sup>. A release by one of two or more joint holders<sup>7</sup> or a release to one of two or more joint acceptors<sup>8</sup> or makers<sup>9</sup> operates as a valid discharge<sup>10</sup>.

Accord and satisfaction as between the holder and the principal debtor, whether acceptor or maker, will also discharge the instrument; and this may be the case if the satisfaction be afforded on behalf of the principal debtor by a third party who is a stranger to the instrument<sup>11</sup>. However, an accord and satisfaction, even when afforded by another party to the instrument, does not discharge the principal debtor, unless expressly made on his behalf<sup>12</sup>.

1 As to the meaning of 'instrument' see PARA 1402 note 1.

2 Rules of common law continue to apply except where they are inconsistent with the Bills of Exchange Act 1882 Act: see s 97(2); and PARA 1400 note 3. For forms of discharge applying to contracts at common law see CONTRACT vol 9(1) (Reissue) PARA 920 et seq.

BY COMMON LAW/1563. Renewal as conditional satisfaction only.*

1563. Renewal as conditional satisfaction only.

Prima facie the giving of a new instrument<sup>1</sup> in place of an existing one (such as payment of a bill<sup>2</sup> by cheque<sup>3</sup> with the bill attached) has the effect not of discharging the instrument then existing, but of being a conditional satisfaction of it<sup>4</sup>, so that if the new instrument is duly paid at maturity the first instrument is discharged<sup>5</sup>; but if not, then the dormant rights on the first instrument are revived<sup>6</sup>. Parties to the first instrument who do not assent to its renewal are in any case discharged<sup>7</sup>.

Where there is an agreement to renew, the renewal must be applied for within a reasonable time of the maturity of the instrument, though it need not be before maturity<sup>8</sup>. Where there is an agreement to renew, it is prima facie an agreement for one renewal only<sup>9</sup>.

If the consideration on which the instrument to be renewed was based was either absent<sup>10</sup> or illegal<sup>11</sup>, the new instrument is vitiated by the same defect in the hands of parties with notice.

So, too, a party who could not have sued upon the first instrument, owing to participation in or cognisance of fraud in connection with it, equally cannot sue upon the new one<sup>12</sup>. If a party primarily liable on a bill that is materially altered<sup>13</sup> without his knowledge renews the bill in ignorance of the facts, he is not liable on the renewed bill any more than on the old one<sup>14</sup>.

Discharge of instrument not necessarily discharge of parties.

1564. Discharge of instrument not necessarily discharge of parties.

A discharge of the instrument<sup>1</sup> may leave surviving rights of action between the parties to the instrument arising out of the circumstances of the relation of those parties to one another in respect of the instrument: for example, where there are two or more joint makers of a note<sup>2</sup>, and the note is discharged by payment by one of them, there remains a claim for contribution by that one as against the other<sup>3</sup>, or where a bill drawn for the accommodation of one party<sup>4</sup> has been discharged by payment by another, there remains a right of action against the party for whose accommodation the bill was drawn on the implied contract of indemnity<sup>5</sup>.

Moreover, where two persons become parties to a bill for the accommodation of a third, and one of the two is compelled to pay the amount of the bill, the relation inter se of the two is that of co-sureties, and the one who has paid is entitled to call upon the other for contribution without regard to their respective liabilities on the face of the bill: Reynolds v Wheeler (1861) 30 LJCP 350; Godsell v Lloyd (1911) 27 TLR 383. ### 1565. Discharge by giving of time.

The giving of time to the acceptor<sup>1</sup> or maker<sup>2</sup> may discharge those secondarily liable<sup>3</sup>.

Where there is a binding agreement to give time, all the persons secondarily liable are discharged, and the acceptor or maker remains the sole party against whom there is a right of action<sup>4</sup>, unless the agreement by its terms reserves the rights of the holder<sup>5</sup> against such parties<sup>6</sup>. However, mere delay in enforcing payment against the acceptor or maker does not have this result<sup>7</sup>.

Where persons are jointly liable on an instrument<sup>8</sup> the discharge of one operates as a discharge of them all, whether they are principals<sup>9</sup> or merely sureties<sup>10</sup>; and if they are jointly and severally liable, a discharge of one of them prima facie operates as a discharge of the others<sup>11</sup>.

A. ACCEPTANCE FOR HONOUR

1566. Acceptor for honour.

Upon the protest or noting for protest of a bill<sup>1</sup> a new party to the bill may be joined in the person of the acceptor for honour supra protest<sup>2</sup>.

He may intervene either where a bill has been protested for dishonour by non-acceptance or where it has been protested for better security and is not overdue<sup>3</sup>. But in either case he must be a person<sup>4</sup> who is not already liable as a party to the bill<sup>5</sup>; and he must have the consent of the holder<sup>6</sup>.

His acceptance may be for the honour of the drawer<sup>7</sup> or the indorser<sup>8</sup>, or one or more of them, or for the honour of the bill, that is, of all the parties liable on it<sup>9</sup>; but where an acceptance for honour does not expressly state for whose honour it is made, it is presumed to be for the honour of the drawer<sup>10</sup>. The acceptance for honour may be for part only of the sum for which the bill is drawn<sup>11</sup>.

In order to be valid, an acceptance for honour supra protest must be written<sup>12</sup> on the bill, signed by the acceptor for honour, and indicate that it is an acceptance for honour<sup>13</sup>.

1 As to the meaning of 'bill' see PARA 1405. Provisions of the Bills of Exchange Act 1882 relating to acceptance supra protest are not applicable to promissory notes: s 89(3)(c). As to noting and protest see PARA 1537 et seq.

1567. Second acceptor for honour.

It remains in doubt whether, after one has accepted a bill supra protest for the honour of one party<sup>1</sup>, another may accept it supra protest for the honour of another party, for such a proceeding would be repugnant to the principle that there cannot be more than one general acceptance of a bill<sup>2</sup>; but it may be that if the acceptor for honour becomes bankrupt<sup>3</sup> or insolvent or suspends payment before the bill matures, a second acceptance for honour may be obtained.

1 As to acceptance for honour supra protest see PARA 1566. As to the meaning of 'bill' see PARA 1405. Provisions of the Bills of Exchange Act 1882 relating to acceptance supra protest are not applicable to promissory notes: s 89(3)(c).

Liabilities and rights on acceptance.

1568. Liabilities and rights on acceptance.

The contract made by the acceptor for honour<sup>1</sup> by his acceptance is that he will on due presentment pay the bill<sup>2</sup> according to the tenor of his acceptance, if it is not paid by the drawee<sup>3</sup>, provided that it has been duly presented for payment and protested for non-payment, and that he receives notice of these facts<sup>4</sup>.

By so accepting he makes himself liable to the holder<sup>5</sup> and to all parties to the bill subsequent to the party for whose honour he has accepted<sup>6</sup>, and he is bound alike by the estoppels which bind the original acceptor and those which bind the party for whose honour he has accepted<sup>7</sup>.

If, in pursuance of his acceptance, he is called upon to pay, and does pay, the bill, he succeeds to the rights and duties of the holder as regards the party for whose honour he pays, and all parties liable to that party<sup>8</sup>.

8 See the Bills of Exchange Act 1882 s 68(5); and PARA 1573. Given the circumstances in which a bill can be protested for better security (as to which see PARA 1544), 'all parties liable to that party' will include the acceptor where a bill is so protested.

1571. Payment for honour.

Any person<sup>1</sup>, whether liable as a party to the bill<sup>2</sup> or not, may intervene after it has been protested for non-payment<sup>3</sup> and pay it supra protest for the honour of any party liable on it, or for the honour of the person for whose account it was drawn<sup>4</sup>.

In order to operate as a payment for honour supra protest, and not as a mere voluntary payment, the transaction must be attested by a notarial act of honour, which may be appended to the protest or form an extension of it<sup>5</sup>; but this notarial act of honour must be founded upon a declaration made by the payer for honour, or by his agent in that behalf, declaring his intention to pay the bill for honour, and for whose honour he pays it<sup>6</sup>.

Where two or more persons offer to pay a bill for the honour of different parties, the person whose payment will discharge most parties to the bill is the one preferred<sup>7</sup>.

Effect of payment for honour.

1573. Effect of payment for honour.

The effect of a payment for honour<sup>1</sup> is to discharge all parties to the bill<sup>2</sup> subsequent to the party for whose honour it is paid and to substitute for the holder<sup>3</sup> the payer for honour, who thereby succeeds both to the rights and to the duties of the holder in regard to the party for whose honour the bill is paid and all parties liable to that party<sup>4</sup>. On payment to the holder of the amount of the bill and the notarial expenses incidental to its dishonour, the payer for honour is entitled to receive both the bill itself and the protest<sup>5</sup>. If the holder does not deliver them up to him on demand, the holder is liable to him in damages<sup>6</sup>.

1575. Liability on cheques.

The drawer<sup>1</sup> of a cheque<sup>2</sup> gives an undertaking similar to that given by the drawer of a bill<sup>3</sup>, save that he undertakes that on presentment it will be duly paid (not accepted), and if it is not paid the holder<sup>4</sup> is referred for his remedy to the drawer<sup>5</sup>.

Where a cheque is crossed specially<sup>6</sup> to more than one banker<sup>7</sup>, except when it is crossed to an agent for collection being a banker, the banker on whom it is drawn must refuse payment of it<sup>8</sup>. If the banker nevertheless pays such a cheque, or if he pays a cheque that is crossed generally<sup>9</sup> otherwise than to a banker, or if he pays a cheque that is crossed specially otherwise than to the banker to whom it is crossed (or to his agent for collection being a banker), he is liable to the true owner of the cheque for any loss he may sustain owing to the cheque having been so paid<sup>10</sup>.

However, where a cheque is presented for payment<sup>11</sup> which does not at the time of presentment appear to be crossed, or to have had a crossing which has been obliterated, or to have been added to or altered otherwise than as authorised by the Bills of Exchange Act 1882, the banker paying such a cheque in good faith<sup>12</sup> and without negligence is not responsible and does not incur any liability<sup>13</sup>. Nor may the payment be questioned by reason of the cheque having been crossed, or of the crossing having been obliterated or having been added to or altered otherwise than as authorised by the Bills of Exchange Act 1882<sup>14</sup>, and of payment having been made otherwise than to a banker or to the banker to whom the cheque is or was crossed (or to his agent for collection being a banker), as the case may be<sup>15</sup>.

The drawer of a crossed cheque<sup>16</sup> which has come into the hands of the payee<sup>17</sup> and, if crossed generally, has been paid by the banker on whom it is drawn to another banker, or, if crossed specially, has been paid to the banker to whom it is crossed or to that banker's agent for collection, that agent also being a banker, is entitled to the same rights and is placed in the same position as if payment of the cheque had been made to the true owner, whether that is in fact the case or not<sup>18</sup>.

6 Bills of Exchange Act 1882 s 88(2); Drayton v Dale (1823) 2 B & C 293. It has been doubted whether the payee of a note could be a holder in due course, and in the case of Herdman v Wheeler [1902] 1 KB 361, where the maker, intending to borrow £15 from one lender, signed a blank stamped paper, which that lender afterwards filled in for a larger amount and made payable to a second lender, fraudulently keeping the balance for himself, the second lender failed to recover from the maker on the ground that he was not a holder in due course. In RE Jones Ltd v Waring and Gillow Ltd [1926] AC 670, the House of Lords held that the original payee of a cheque is not a holder in due course and (distinguishing Watson v Russell (1864) 3 B & S 34; on appeal 5 B & S 968) that when A by fraud of B is induced to draw a cheque in favour of C who cashes the cheque, A can recover the money as money paid under a mistake and that there is nothing in the Bills of Exchange Act 1882, concerning the position of a payee of a cheque, to prevent such recovery.

In Lloyds Bank Ltd v Cooke [1907] 1 KB 794, the Court of Appeal held that where a note was fraudulently filled in for a larger sum than was authorised by a joint maker, that joint maker was estopped from denying the validity of the note by the common law rules of estoppel; see also Brocklesby v Temperance Permanent Building Society [1895] AC 173, HL. The general rule of estoppel is that a person who has signed an instrument in blank cannot be heard, as against a person who has changed his position on faith of it, to assert that the instrument as filled in is a forgery or that it was filled in in excess of the agent's authority: see Wilson and Meeson v Pickering [1946] KB 422 at 427, [1946] 1 All ER 394 at 397, CA. ## C. INDORSER

1577. Liability of indorser.

The indorser<sup>1</sup> of a bill<sup>2</sup> by indorsing it undertakes that on due presentment it will be accepted, and paid according to its tenor<sup>3</sup>, and that, should it be dishonoured, he will compensate the holder<sup>4</sup> or a subsequent indorser who is compelled to pay it, provided that the requisite proceedings on dishonour are duly taken<sup>5</sup>. But it is open to him, as it is to the drawer<sup>6</sup>, to insert in the instrument<sup>7</sup> special stipulations restricting or extending his liability<sup>8</sup>.

In regard to his immediate indorsee<sup>9</sup> the liability of an indorser of an instrument arises out of the contract between them, which is founded not merely on the indorsement<sup>10</sup> itself, but also upon the delivery<sup>11</sup> to the indorsee and upon the intention with which the delivery was made and accepted, as proved by words spoken or written by the parties, and the circumstances, such as the usage of the place, and the course of dealing between the parties, under which the delivery takes place<sup>12</sup>.

In regard to the holder, the drawer and indorsers of any instrument are jointly and severally liable for its due payment and, in case of a bill, for its due acceptance also<sup>13</sup>.

1579. Persons liable as indorsers.

Where a person<sup>1</sup> signs an instrument<sup>2</sup> otherwise than as a maker<sup>3</sup>, drawer<sup>4</sup> or acceptor<sup>5</sup>, he incurs the liabilities of an indorser<sup>6</sup> to a holder in due course<sup>7</sup>. However, if there is ambiguity as to the capacity in which a party signed an instrument, the whole facts and circumstances attendant upon the making, issue<sup>8</sup> and transfer<sup>9</sup> of the instrument may be legitimately referred to for the purpose of ascertaining the true relation of the parties to each other; and reasonable inferences, derived from these facts and circumstances are admitted to the effect of qualifying, altering or even inverting the relative liabilities which the law merchant<sup>10</sup> would otherwise assign to them<sup>11</sup>.

This ambiguity as to the true relation of the parties can arise in relation to bills which are 'backed' or which are accommodation bills<sup>12</sup>. In the case of such a bill, the signature of a relation or friend of the acceptor for whose accommodation the bill is drawn, placed on the back of the bill, constitutes the party an indorser of the bill, and it is immaterial whether the drawer who advances money to the parties accommodated on the strength of their acceptance<sup>13</sup> does so before or after the signature is placed on the back of the bill<sup>14</sup>. If two persons indorse a note as co-sureties for the maker, the first indorser will not be liable to indemnify the second indorser, as normally he would be, but as between them their rights will be regulated in accordance with the law which regulates the rights of co-sureties<sup>15</sup>.

Again, if the drawer of a bill drawn to his order<sup>16</sup> indorses it to the surety, and the surety re-indorses it to him, then the surety, while liable to the holder<sup>17</sup> in the event of the bill being dishonoured<sup>18</sup>, will have no right to be indemnified by the drawer, and if the drawer sues him on the bill, will not be able to avail himself of the defence, usually open to an indorser when sued by the drawer, of circuity of action<sup>19</sup>. Even if a backer-indorser indorses the bill before the drawer, the drawer will have the right, in accordance with the authority conferred upon him by the agreement with the backer, to add his indorsement<sup>20</sup> above the latter's, and the position will then be the same as if the drawer had indorsed the bill first in point of time<sup>21</sup>.

It has been held also that, even if the drawer, when he indorses the bill in such circumstances, places his indorsement below instead of above the backer's (as strictly he ought to do), it will not have the effect of nullifying the intention of the parties, and consequently, if it is proved that the intention was that the backer should render himself liable to the drawer by indorsing the bill, he will still, as indorser, be liable to the drawer<sup>22</sup>.

The sons duly accepted the bill and M'Kinlay himself signed his name on the back of the bill before returning it to the lender. The acceptors became bankrupt, and in an action by the representatives of the lender against those of M'Kinlay, both the lender and M'Kinlay being dead, it was held that the latter was liable as an indorser, not as an acceptor of the bill, and, per Lord Watson (at 782), that it made no difference whether his signature was placed there before the money was lent or not.

D. TRANSFEROR BY DELIVERY

1581. Warranties by transferor by delivery.

A transferor by delivery is a holder<sup>1</sup> of a bill payable to bearer<sup>2</sup> which he negotiates by delivery<sup>3</sup> without indorsing it<sup>4</sup>. A transferor by delivery is not liable on the instrument<sup>5</sup>, but when he negotiates it he warrants to his immediate transferee, if the latter is a holder for value<sup>6</sup>, three distinct things in regard to it, namely: (1) that the instrument is what it purports to be<sup>7</sup>, for example, that if it purports to be a foreign bill of exchange<sup>8</sup> drawn at some place abroad, it is, in fact, a foreign and not an inland bill<sup>9</sup> and was in fact drawn as it appears to be drawn<sup>10</sup>; and (2) that he has a right to transfer it<sup>11</sup>; and (3) that at the time of transfer he is not aware of any fact which renders it valueless<sup>12</sup>, for example, that he does not know that any of the signatures on it are forged or unauthorised<sup>13</sup>, or that it has been altered in a material particular<sup>14</sup>. He is not liable on the bill<sup>15</sup>.

If the instrument is found not to correspond with the warranty, the transferee can recover the money paid for it, but he must act with reasonable diligence<sup>16</sup>.

TRANSFEROR BY DELIVERY/1582. Extent of liability.*****

1582. Extent of liability.

The liability on the warranties by a transferor by delivery<sup>1</sup> must be distinguished from a liability on the consideration. A transferor by delivery is in effect the vendor of an instrument<sup>2</sup> precisely as he might be the vendor of any other chattel<sup>3</sup>. Beyond the actual points in regard to it which he warrants, he is in no way responsible for the value of what he sells. If, therefore, its value diminishes or even vanishes altogether, for example, through the bankruptcy of any of the parties to it, he is not bound to compensate the transferee for his consequent loss<sup>4</sup>. However, where the instrument is transferred, not by way of sale, but in payment of a debt, the transferor is liable on the consideration unless the instrument was taken in absolute satisfaction of the debt<sup>5</sup>.

If, however, the transferor, on negotiating an instrument which passes by delivery, indorses it, he makes himself liable as an indorser<sup>6</sup>.

They were the holders of the bills and by not indorsing them have refused to pledge their credit to their validity, and [the plaintiff] must be taken to have received them in their own credit only').

E. ACCOMMODATION PARTY

1583. Duty to provide funds or indemnity.

Where the instrument<sup>1</sup> is an accommodation bill<sup>2</sup>, it is the duty of the party for whose accommodation it was drawn to provide funds to meet the bill at maturity<sup>3</sup>, or in default of that to indemnify the acceptor<sup>4</sup> or any other party who has been compelled to pay the holder<sup>5</sup>. The indemnity to be given may be extended to include the costs of a claim brought unsuccessfully against the holder, if there was a prima facie ground of defence<sup>6</sup>.

The duty to provide funds or to indemnify is a contract which may be expressed or implied. It is not required to be in writing<sup>7</sup>.

If two or more persons agree to become parties to an instrument<sup>1</sup> for the accommodation of some other party<sup>2</sup>, they are entitled and liable inter se to contribution as co-sureties without regard to the order of priority of their names upon the instrument<sup>3</sup>, and an accommodation party is entitled to contribution from another accommodation party although at the time when the former becomes party to the bill he is unaware of the capacity in which the latter had signed<sup>4</sup>.

1585. Enforcement of indemnity.

The right to an indemnity may be enforced by bringing a claim, but in such a claim the claimant must show not merely that the money paid pro tanto discharges the liability of the defendant to the holder of the instrument, but also that it was paid at the request, express or implied, of the defendant<sup>1</sup>. If the situation is such that he might be compelled by law to pay the money a request to pay will be implied, but a mere voluntary payment made with full knowledge that payment could not be compelled is no ground for an indemnity<sup>2</sup>.

In the case of the bankruptcy of the drawer<sup>3</sup> there cannot be a double proof against his estate, that is one proof by the holder of the bill, and the other proof by the acceptor<sup>4</sup> on the contract of indemnity<sup>5</sup>.

1586. Nature and object.

Bills of exchange<sup>1</sup> may be drawn in sets of two, three, or more parts.

Each part should be numbered and contain a reference to every other part of the set<sup>2</sup> and a condition that a part will be payable only so long as all the other parts are unpaid.

The whole of the parts constitute in such a case one bill<sup>3</sup>.

1 As to the meaning of 'bill of exchange' see PARA 1405. Provisions of the Bills of Exchange Act 1882 relating to bills in a set are not applicable to promissory notes: s 89(3)(d).

1587. Rights and duties of holder.

A holder<sup>1</sup> who negotiates a bill drawn in a set<sup>2</sup> is bound to deliver all the parts in his possession, but a negotiation<sup>3</sup> of one part by him does not warrant his possession of the other parts or make him liable to deliver them if not in his possession<sup>4</sup>.

Where he indorses two or more parts to different persons<sup>5</sup>, he is liable on every such part; and every indorser<sup>6</sup> subsequent to him is liable on the part he has himself indorsed as if the said parts were separate bills<sup>7</sup>.

However, as between different holders in due course, the holder whose title first accrues is deemed to be the true owner of the bill<sup>8</sup>. The true owner may possibly be entitled to recover the other parts even from a holder of them in due course<sup>9</sup>, but in any case the rights of a person who in due course accepts or pays the part first presented to him are preserved<sup>10</sup>.

The drawee<sup>1</sup> may write<sup>2</sup> his acceptance<sup>3</sup> on any part of a bill drawn in a set<sup>4</sup>, but he should do so on one part only, otherwise if two or more parts bearing his acceptance get into the hands of different holders in due course he is liable on every such part as if it were a separate bill<sup>5</sup>.

Where the bill or a part of it is presented to the acceptor<sup>6</sup> for payment, he should require the part which he has accepted to be handed over to him on payment of the bill, for otherwise, if the part bearing his acceptance is outstanding at maturity in the hands of a holder in due course<sup>7</sup>, he is liable on it<sup>8</sup>. Subject to this, however, the payment or other discharge of one part involves the discharge of the whole bill<sup>9</sup>.

1589. Lex loci contractus generally applicable.

Inasmuch as bills of exchange, cheques, and (though to a lesser extent) promissory notes<sup>1</sup> are more than local in their character and use, it follows that in the course of their existence they may be subject to the laws of foreign countries, which laws may, and in many cases do, differ from the law of England. This fact is recognised to some extent in the distinction between foreign and inland instruments<sup>2</sup>. But the special provisions of the statute, for example, as to the protest of foreign bills<sup>3</sup>, are more in the nature of practical expedients suited to the convenience of special cases than attempts to meet the difficulty of a conflict of laws.

It is therefore of the highest importance to determine by what principles the rights and liabilities of the various parties are to be governed where the laws of more than one country are concerned<sup>4</sup>. The principle adopted with regard to negotiable instruments<sup>5</sup> is in general that the lex loci contractus<sup>6</sup> should prevail<sup>7</sup>.

7 A notable exception is the question of legality: see Moulis v Owen [1907] 1 KB 746, CA; and Dicey and Morris Conflict of Laws (13th Edn, 2000) p 1445, where the editors submit that any contract embodied in a negotiable instrument must be legal according to the law governing the bill or note and also according to its own proper law. See PARA 1591 et seq. Note that the Convention on the Law Applicable to Contractual Obligations (Rome, 19 June 1980) does not apply to obligations arising under bills of exchange, cheques and promissory notes: see art 1 para 2(c); and CONFLICT OF LAWS vol 8(3) (Reissue) PARAS 349, 350.

Law applicable to requisites in form.*

1590. Law applicable to requisites in form.

As a general rule validity of an instrument<sup>1</sup> as regards requisites in form<sup>2</sup> is determined by the law of the place of issue<sup>3</sup> and the place of issue is the place at which the instrument is first delivered complete in form, not the place where it is signed<sup>4</sup>.

To this general rule, however, certain exceptions are admitted in the interests of persons<sup>5</sup> who become parties to a foreign instrument<sup>6</sup> in this country. Thus an instrument issued out of the United Kingdom is not invalid in this country by reason only that it is not stamped in accordance with the law of the place of issue<sup>7</sup>.

Where an instrument issued out of the United Kingdom conforms as regards requisites in form to the law of this country it may for the purpose of enforcing payment<sup>8</sup> be treated as valid as between all persons who negotiate, hold, or become parties to it in this country<sup>9</sup>.

1 As to the meaning of 'instrument' see PARA 1402 note 1.

2 The question whether a bill is conditional or not is a question relating to requisites of form: Guaranty Trust Co of New York v Hannay & Co [1918] 1 KB 43. (The correctness of the decision of Bailhache J on this point was left open in the Court of Appeal: see [1918] 2 KB 623.)

BILLS OF EXCHANGE AND OTHER NEGOTIABLE INSTRUMENTS/(1) BILLS OF EXCHANGE, CHEQUES AND PROMISSORY NOTES/(xviii) Conflict of Laws/1591. Law applicable to drawing and supervening contracts.

1591. Law applicable to drawing and supervening contracts.

Where a bill<sup>1</sup> drawn in one country is negotiated, accepted or payable in another, the law of the place where the particular contract is made determines: (1) the validity as regards requisites in form of the supervening contracts, such as acceptance or indorsement or acceptance supra protest<sup>2</sup>; and (2) the interpretation of the drawing, acceptance<sup>3</sup>, indorsement and acceptance supra protest<sup>4</sup>; but where an inland instrument<sup>5</sup> is indorsed abroad the indorsement is to be interpreted as regards the payer by the law of this country<sup>6</sup>.

As regards the payer, this rule perhaps contemplates the place of making the contract and the place of payment of the instrument being identical; if that be so, a qualification must be made where the places of contract and of payment are different. Where such is the case the interpretation of the contract would seem to be determined by the law of the place of payment<sup>7</sup>.

So, too, in the event of dishonour, the extent of the liability of each party to the instrument is governed by the law of the place at which he undertakes to pay it<sup>8</sup>.

1596. Scotland.

In Scotland, where the drawee<sup>1</sup> of a bill<sup>2</sup> has in his hands funds available for the payment of it, the bill operates as an assignment of the sum for which it is drawn in favour of the holder<sup>3</sup> from the time when the bill is presented to the drawee<sup>4</sup>. Therefore where a bill is payable in Scotland this rule must be taken into account when interpreting the contract.

Where the name of a referee in case of need<sup>1</sup> has been inserted abroad, the holder<sup>2</sup> here has it in his option whether to apply to him or not<sup>3</sup>; but, in as much as in some countries application to the referee in case of need is obligatory, it is the more prudent course for a holder in this country to exercise his option in favour of such an application.

1598. Discharge.

In the matter of discharge, the rules to be followed are the general rules of private international law, forming part of the common law<sup>1</sup>. Applying these rules, the validity and effect of the discharge of any party will depend upon the proper law of the contract involving that party, while discharge of the instrument<sup>2</sup> itself under the law of the place of payment will presumably discharge all parties<sup>3</sup>. Statements in the older cases that the law of the place where the particular contract affecting the party in question was made must prevail<sup>4</sup>, and that the discharge of a contract by the law of a place where the contract was not made or to be performed is not a discharge of it in any other country<sup>5</sup>, should now be read in the light of modern conflict of laws principles<sup>6</sup>. The common law rules relating to foreign limitation periods were replaced by the Foreign Limitation Periods Act 1984, which provides that, where any matter is governed by the law of a foreign country, then the rules of foreign law as to limitation (whether procedural or substantive) will generally apply<sup>7</sup>, unless there is a conflict with English public policy<sup>8</sup>.

- 1 Rules of common law continue to apply except where they are inconsistent with the Bills of Exchange Act 1882 Act: s 97(2); see PARA 1400 note 3. As to discharges generally see PARA 1550 et seq.

(2) LEGAL ENFORCEMENT

(i) Legal Proceedings

A. CLAIMS

1599. Claims.

Proceedings in the High Court on a bill of exchange<sup>1</sup> are started when the court issues a claim form at the request of the claimant<sup>2</sup>. The claim form must contain a concise statement of the nature of the claim and must specify the remedy sought by the claimant<sup>3</sup>. If the defendant files an acknowledgment of service or a defence, the claimant may then make an application for summary judgment<sup>4</sup>. If the case is one in which notice of dishonour<sup>5</sup> must be proved, the allegation that it was given must be included in the particulars of claim<sup>6</sup>, which must itself be verified by a statement of truth<sup>7</sup>.

A substantive allegation of fraud<sup>8</sup> against a holder<sup>9</sup> raises a triable issue entitling the defendant to permission to defend<sup>10</sup>; but where there is clear evidence of value given in good faith and no grounds are shown on which such evidence can be challenged, then the defendant's allegation of fraud does not constitute material which would afford a defence and permission to defend should not be given<sup>11</sup>. As between immediate parties<sup>12</sup>, the defendant may also raise by way of defence a total failure of consideration, an ascertained and liquidated partial failure of consideration<sup>13</sup>, and, possibly, an ascertained and liquidated cross-claim arising under the contract which forms the consideration for the bill of exchange<sup>14</sup>.

Subject to the foregoing exceptions, a holder for value<sup>15</sup> of a bill of exchange is entitled, save in truly exceptional circumstances<sup>16</sup>, on its maturity to have it treated as cash, so that in an action upon it the court will refuse to regard either as a defence or as grounds for a stay of execution, any set-off, legal or equitable, or any counterclaim, whether arising on the particular transaction upon which the bill of exchange came into existence or arising in any other way<sup>17</sup>. The rule of practice is thus, in effect, pay on the bill of exchange first and pursue claims later<sup>18</sup>.

It is unclear whether a defendant who is induced to draw an instrument<sup>19</sup> by the claimant's innocent misrepresentation is entitled to permission to defend<sup>20</sup>.

If an action is stayed on payment of the debt and costs, the claimant has no right to retain the bill<sup>21</sup>.

BILLS OF EXCHANGE AND OTHER NEGOTIABLE INSTRUMENTS/(2) LEGAL ENFORCEMENT/(i) Legal Proceedings/A. CLAIMS/1600. Right to sue.

1600. Right to sue.

The holder<sup>1</sup> has the right to sue on the instrument<sup>2</sup> in his own name<sup>3</sup>. Where the instrument is payable to bearer<sup>4</sup>, the holder who has it in his actual or constructive possession may sue on it in his own name, or in the name of a principal provided that the latter ratifies his act, which ratification may take place even after the proceedings have begun<sup>5</sup>. Where the bill<sup>6</sup> is made payable or indorsed to a specified person the claim should be brought in that person's name<sup>7</sup>.

The holder may or may not ever have had any personal interest in the bill<sup>8</sup> or, having had such interest, may have ceased to have any<sup>9</sup>.

He may sue either for himself or as agent or trustee for another party. In the second case he so far stands in the position of that other party that a defence or set-off which would have been good against that other party is equally good against him<sup>10</sup>. Conversely, where he personally is the defendant in proceedings, he cannot use in defence an instrument which he holds as agent or trustee for another<sup>11</sup>.

1 As to the meaning of 'holder' see PARA 1407; and see Crouch v Crédit Foncier of England (1873) LR 8 QB 374. Where the consideration for a bill payable to drawer's order is goods supplied to the drawee, and the drawer negotiates the bill to a third party who is in possession of the same at the date of commencement of the action, the drawer cannot sue the acceptor for the price of the goods, for he is not the holder of the bill, and recovery of the bill, before the action is actually tried, is insufficient to remedy his original lack of title to sue: Davis v Reilly [1898] 1 QB 1, DC.

B. DAMAGES

1601. Parties entitled to damages.

In the event of dishonour<sup>1</sup>, damages may be recovered by the several parties to the instrument<sup>2</sup>. The holder<sup>3</sup> may recover from any party liable on the instrument. The drawer<sup>4</sup> of a bill which he has been compelled to pay may recover from the acceptor<sup>5</sup>. An indorser<sup>6</sup> of an instrument which he has been compelled to pay may recover from the person<sup>7</sup> primarily liable on the instrument<sup>8</sup>, or on his default from any other prior party, for example, the drawer of a bill or any prior indorser<sup>9</sup>. But it seems that an accommodation party<sup>10</sup> cannot recover if he has paid voluntarily without legal obligation, when for example he is discharged by not receiving notice of dishonour<sup>11</sup>.

1602. Measure of damages.

The damages to be recovered are deemed to be liquidated damages<sup>1</sup>, and they may include<sup>2</sup>: (1) the amount of the instrument<sup>3</sup>; (2) interest<sup>4</sup> thereon, from the time of presentment for payment if the instrument is payable on demand, and from its maturity in any other case<sup>5</sup>; the interest claimed by way of damages may, however, be withheld wholly or in part if the justice of the case so requires<sup>6</sup>, and where the instrument is expressed to be payable with interest at a given rate, interest as damages may or may not be given at the same rate<sup>7</sup>; and (3) the expenses of noting, or when protest is necessary, and the protest has been extended, the expenses of protest<sup>8</sup>.

Damages may be awarded in the currency of the bill<sup>9</sup>.

As to the procedure in a claim for a liquidated demand see CPR 12.1-12.3 (default judgment) (see CIVIL PROCEDURE vol 11 (2009) PARAS 506-507); CPR 16.2-16.3 (contents of claim form) (see CIVIL PROCEDURE vol 11 (2009) PARAS 585-586); CPR 24 (summary judgment) (see CIVIL PROCEDURE vol 11 (2009) PARA 524 et seq).

2 Bills of Exchange Act 1882 s 57(1). In the case of Prehn v Royal Bank of Liverpool (1870) LR 5 Exch 92 other expenses incurred by the holder were allowed but that was an action on the contract and not on the bill; Kelly CB (at 97) said, 'It has been pointed out that in an action on a bill of exchange by an indorsee against an acceptor, neither general nor special damage can be recovered, the right of the indorsee being limited to the amount of the bill and interest. However in the case before us the action is not brought on the bill, but on a special contract, the incidents of which differ materially from those which belong to the contract constituted by becoming a party to a negotiable instrument and which are strictly limited by the law merchant.' As to the meaning of 'law merchant' see PARA 1400. Though that case was before the Bills of Exchange Act 1882, the reasoning was adopted by Mathew J in Banque Populaire de Bienne v Cavé (1895) 1 Com Cas 67 at 69. See also Re English Bank of the River Plate, ex p Bank of Brazil [1893] 2 Ch 438.

currency see PARA 1421; and as to damages in a foreign currency see DAMAGES vol 12(1) (Reissue) PARA 1132 et seq.

4 In the absence of an agreement to the contrary, a rate around or somewhat above base rate may properly be claimed; the Short Term Investment Account rate is a safe guide: Practice Direction [1983] 1 All ER 934, [1983] 1 WLR 377.

As to the practice on claiming interest see Practice Direction [1983] 1 All ER 934, [1983] 1 WLR 377. Where in the case of a bill payable on demand no demand has been made, interest will run from service: Pierce v Fothergill (1835) 2 Bing NC 167. The bill must, it seems, be produced at the trial in order to recover interest before service: Hutton v Ward (1850) 15 QB 26. Interest will apparently run until payment or judgment (London and Universal Bank v Earl of Clancarty [1892] 1 QB 689; Lawrence & Sons v Willcocks [1892] 1 QB 696, CA), unless there has been a tender of the amount due, in which case it will cease as from the date of the tender: Dent v Dunn (1812) 3 Camp 296. The guarantor of the due payment of a bill is liable for interest (Ackermann v Ehrensperger (1846) 16 M & W 99 at 103 per Pollock CB), and he may in some cases recover interest from the acceptor: Re Fox, Walker & Co, ex p Bishop (1880) 15 ChD 400, CA; see PARA 1585 note 2. Where payment would be illegal owing to the outbreak of war before the date of payment arrives, interest is only payable from the termination of the war: Biedermann v Allhausen & Co (1921) 37 TLR 662; NV Ledeboter and Van der Held's Textielhandel v Hibbert [1947] KB 964. The damages recoverable are not affected by the power to award interest under the Supreme Court Act 1981 s 35A: see the Supreme Court Act 1981 s 35A(8); the County Courts Act 1984 s 69(7); and DAMAGES vol 12(1) (Reissue) PARA 848.

The expenses of protest for better security (see PARA 1544) are not recoverable under this subsection, even though the acceptor became insolvent before maturity of the instrument; nor is a commission paid by the drawer to the acceptor for honour in consideration of his acceptance: Re English Bank of the River Plate, ex p Bank of Brazil [1893] 2 Ch 438.

C. COSTS

1603. Costs.

A holder<sup>1</sup> who has begun proceedings against several parties to the instrument<sup>2</sup> may, after payment of the instrument by one party, continue against the others for costs<sup>3</sup>. So also, in proceedings against the acceptor<sup>4</sup>, the holder may proceed for costs after payment of the instrument has been tendered by another party to the instrument and he has taken it<sup>5</sup>.

But an accommodation acceptor<sup>6</sup>, who pays the amount of a bill<sup>7</sup> to the holder after proceedings have commenced, cannot recover from the party liable to him the costs of the action<sup>8</sup>, unless there is some understanding or implied request from the party liable that he should defend<sup>9</sup>.

Where the holder brings two claims on two bills of exchange against the same parties where he might have brought one for the two bills, he may be allowed the costs of one claim only<sup>10</sup>.

In the discretion of the court a foreign claimant suing on a bill of exchange may be ordered to give security for costs<sup>11</sup>.

BILLS OF EXCHANGE AND OTHER NEGOTIABLE INSTRUMENTS/(2) LEGAL ENFORCEMENT/(ii) Limitation of Action/1604. Proceedings barred by lapse of time.

(ii) Limitation of Action

1604. Proceedings barred by lapse of time.

If proceedings to enforce payment against any party liable on an instrument<sup>1</sup> are not brought within six years from the time at which the right accrued, proceedings will, in general, be barred<sup>2</sup>.

The date at which the time begins to run, in the case of a negotiable instrument<sup>3</sup>, depends not upon its acquisition by a holder<sup>4</sup>, but upon the contract entered into by the parties liable.

In the case of the acceptor<sup>5</sup> of a bill<sup>6</sup> it runs from the maturity<sup>7</sup> of the bill, unless: (1) the bill was accepted subject to the condition of presentment for payment<sup>8</sup>, in which case time begins to run from the date of presentment; or (2) the bill was accepted after maturity<sup>9</sup>, in which case, it seems, time will run from the date of such acceptance; or (3) at maturity there was no person in existence capable of issuing a claim<sup>10</sup>.

If, however, a bill is accepted in blank and is not filled up for more than six years, the acceptor is nonetheless liable at the suit of a bona fide holder for value<sup>11</sup>, and in such a case time does not run against a bona fide holder for value until the bill, as filled up, becomes due<sup>12</sup>. But if such a bill remains uncompleted in the hands of the payee<sup>13</sup> for more than six years, the payee cannot then fill up the bill and sue the acceptor on it<sup>14</sup>.

In the case of a note<sup>15</sup> payable at a specified period after date<sup>16</sup> or after demand or sight<sup>17</sup> time runs for the maker<sup>18</sup> from the maturity of the note. Where the instrument is payable on demand, then time is, in general, calculated from the date of the instrument<sup>19</sup>, but, if the form of the instrument is such that presentment is necessary, time runs from the date of presentment<sup>20</sup>. The same principles apply where the instrument is in form a bill, but, by reason of the fact that the drawer<sup>21</sup> and drawee<sup>22</sup> are in law the same person<sup>23</sup>, the holder is entitled to treat it as a note<sup>24</sup>. If a note payable on demand is deposited with a banker for delivery<sup>25</sup> to the payee on his producing another note cancelled, time runs only from the date when the note is delivered by the banker<sup>26</sup>.

Time begins to run against the drawer or the indorser<sup>27</sup> of a bill or note from the date of receipt of notice of dishonour<sup>28</sup>. It is presumed that where notice of dishonour is excused time will begin to run from the date of the dishonour<sup>29</sup>. In the case of a bill payable at a fixed time after date time runs in favour of the drawer only from the date at which the bill or note becomes due, even although the action is for money lent for which the note is a security, because the money does not become payable until the time has expired<sup>30</sup>.

If a bill is dishonoured by non-acceptance, a future dishonour by non-payment does not create a fresh right of action so as to make time run from the latter date<sup>31</sup>.

As to the effect of an instrument containing an obligation collateral to a contract of loan, which contract (1) does not provide for repayment of the debt on or before a fixed or determinable date; and (2) does not effectively (whether or not it purports to do so) make the obligation to repay the debt conditional on a demand for repayment made by or on behalf of the creditor or on any other matter see s 6(2). As to the extension of time in certain cases see PARA 1606. ### 1605. Collateral transactions.

When a cheque<sup>1</sup> is given, not in payment of a debt but as a loan, time begins to run against the lender from the time when the cheque is paid, for the claim is not on the instrument<sup>2</sup>, but is a claim for the recovery of the loan<sup>3</sup>. In the same way with any other instrument where the claim is not on the instrument itself, but to enforce an obligation collateral to, although arising out of, the transaction for which the instrument was given, time will begin to run from the date when the particular obligation arises<sup>4</sup>.

BILLS OF EXCHANGE AND OTHER NEGOTIABLE INSTRUMENTS/(2) LEGAL ENFORCEMENT/(ii) Limitation of Action/1606. Extension of time.

1606. Extension of time.

The date at which time will begin to run may be postponed by circumstances peculiar to the holder<sup>1</sup>, for example if the holder is under a disability to sue<sup>2</sup>.

The right of action against any party liable on an instrument<sup>3</sup> may, as in the case of any other contract, be renewed or revived by an acknowledgment in writing, signed by that party or his agent, of his liability<sup>4</sup>, or by part payment<sup>5</sup>, but a right of action, once barred by the Limitation Act 1980, is not revived by any subsequent acknowledgment or payment<sup>6</sup>.

An acknowledgment or payment must be made to the person, or an agent of the person, whose title or claim is being acknowledged or in respect of whose claim the payment is being made<sup>7</sup>.

The running of time may also in certain circumstances be postponed on the ground of fraud or mistake<sup>8</sup>.

1 As to the meaning of 'holder' see PARA 1407.

1607. Death.

By the ordinary operation of law the title to bills and notes<sup>1</sup> passes at the death of the holder<sup>2</sup> to his personal representatives, who can thereupon either sue on the instrument<sup>3</sup> or indorse it to a new holder as they think fit<sup>4</sup>. This principle applies also to cheques<sup>5</sup>. In doing so it is open to them expressly to disclaim personal responsibility<sup>6</sup>. Even where an instrument is specifically bequeathed to a legatee, the latter must obtain the indorsement of the testator's executor before attempting either to negotiate or to enforce it<sup>7</sup>.

1608. Bankruptcy.

The rules in bankruptcy relating to bills of exchange, promissory notes and cheques<sup>1</sup> were expressly saved by the Bills of Exchange Act 1882<sup>2</sup>. Therefore, in the event of the bankruptcy of the holder<sup>3</sup>, the title to all bills, notes and cheques of which at the date of the bankruptcy he was the beneficial owner vests in his trustee without any form of transfer whatever<sup>4</sup>, as also does any lien which he may have had upon any such instrument<sup>5</sup>.

It seems that in the event of a bill being indorsed to a bankrupt before he obtains his discharge he may, unless his trustee intervenes, sue on it in his own name<sup>6</sup>, and he may during bankruptcy indorse a bill accepted for his accommodation prior thereto<sup>7</sup>.

Although at common law negotiable instruments<sup>1</sup> of all sorts and money itself were formerly immune from seizure in execution, they are alike by statute made liable to seizure by the sheriff under a writ of fieri facias<sup>2</sup> and a claim may be brought on them when the time of payment thereof arrives in the name of the sheriff on his receiving an indemnity therefor<sup>3</sup>.

They are also liable to seizure by a bailiff or officer executing any warrant of execution issuing out of the county court<sup>4</sup>, in which case the district judge<sup>5</sup> is to hold them as a security for the amount directed to be levied by such execution or so much of it as has not been otherwise levied or raised for the benefit of the claimant, and the claimant may sue on them, when the time of payment thereof arrives, in the name of the defendant or in the name of any person in whose name the defendant might have sued<sup>6</sup>.

(i) Rules for Determining Negotiability

1610. Law governing other negotiable instruments.

Though bills of exchange, cheques and promissory notes<sup>1</sup> are the only instruments specifically dealt with by the codifying statute, there are many other instruments to which the attribute of negotiability has gradually come to be ascribed, and which must now be regarded as having been definitely admitted to the same category<sup>2</sup>. The branch of the law from which, apart from statute, these other instruments draw their authority is the law merchant<sup>3</sup>. This term denotes the accumulated product of the customs of trade to which sanction has from time to time been given by decisions of the courts<sup>4</sup>, but not a permanently fixed and stereotyped body of law<sup>5</sup>. Customs and usages of trade indeed vary from time to time just as they vary in one place and another, and a custom that is known and recognised by the law merchant as existing in one place may be absolutely unknown elsewhere<sup>6</sup>. Moreover, the exigencies of trade and finance are continually expanding, and have led to new customs and usages being more speedily devised, adopted and recognised than formerly<sup>7</sup>.

1 As to the meanings of 'bill of exchange', 'cheque' and 'promissory note' see PARA 1405.

2 As to the meaning of 'negotiable instrument' see PARA 1402. As to bills of lading and other instruments relating to the transfer of goods, eg dock warrants (which in some respects resemble negotiable instruments) see CARRIAGE AND CARRIERS vol 7 (2008) PARA 313 et seq.

6 Eg a bill operates in Scotland as an assignment of funds in the hands of a drawee available for its payment, but not in England; and this usage was conferred by statute: see the Bills of Exchange Act 1882 s 53(2); and PARA 1596. Cf Lang v Smyth (1831) 7 Bing 284. As to the immemorial existence of custom see generally CUSTOM AND USAGE vol 12(1) (Reissue) PARA 607 et seq.

Requisites for negotiability.

1611. Requisites for negotiability.

There remain, however, always the same prime requirements with which an instrument must comply before it can be accorded negotiability. One of these requirements is the form of the instrument itself; the other is the custom of trade in regard to it.

It must be in a form which renders it capable of being sued on by the holder of it in his own name; and it must be by the custom of trade transferable, like cash, by delivery<sup>1</sup>. Failure to comply with either of these requirements prevents the instrument being a negotiable instrument at all<sup>2</sup>. Negotiable instruments come into existence for the purpose only of recording an agreement to pay money and nothing more<sup>3</sup>.

1 Including indorsement and delivery in the case of an instrument payable to order.

See also the observation per Dillon LJ in Claydon v Bradley [1987] 1 All ER 522 at 526, [1987] 1 WLR 521 at 526, CA, that if the statutory definition of a promissory note in the Bills of Exchange Act 1882 s 83 (see PARA 1405) is applied literally, it would seemingly cover a range of documents which no one would ordinarily dream of regarding as promissory notes or in any other way negotiable, such as four year covenants in favour of charities.

1612. Extent of negotiability.

Treasury bills<sup>1</sup> of the British government are negotiable instruments, and are thus expressed: 'This Treasury Bill entitles ----- or order to the payment of, etc.' So long as the blank remains unfilled the bill is an instrument transferable by delivery; so soon as the blank is filled in it becomes an instrument payable to order. In either case it is negotiable.

1613. Bank notes and certificates of deposit as negotiable instruments.

In England, bank notes are issued solely by the Bank of England and are in effect promissory notes payable on demand<sup>1</sup>.

Since 1968, instruments described as negotiable certificates of deposit have been issued by banks certifying the receipt of a stated sum deposited on terms that it is payable (with interest) to bearer on a fixed date against surrender of the certificate. The instruments appear not to be promissory notes; so far they have not been considered by the courts.

C. BRITISH AND FOREIGN BONDS

1615. Foreign bonds.

The bonds of a foreign government<sup>1</sup>, as also those of a foreign corporation<sup>2</sup>, may be negotiable<sup>3</sup>. For them to be recognised as such here they must either purport on their face to be transferable by indorsement or delivery or be shown to be otherwise negotiable according to the law of the country of issue<sup>4</sup>, and must be negotiable by custom in this country<sup>5</sup>. It is not sufficient to prove merely that they are negotiable in the country of issue<sup>6</sup>.

It has further been suggested that a foreign instrument is not negotiable here unless negotiable where it was made<sup>7</sup>; but it may be open to doubt how far this qualification would now be allowed to prevail.

See London Joint Stock Bank v Simmons [1892] AC 201 at 225, HL, per Lord Macnaghten.

3 No distinction is to be made for this purpose between the bonds of a foreign government and those of a foreign corporation, except that a foreign government can in no case be sued in this country either in its own name or in that of its agent (Twycross v Dreyfus (1877) 5 ChD 605, CA).

1616. Bonds issued by English companies.

An attempt was made to distinguish between the bonds of a foreign country or company and those issued by an English company in England<sup>1</sup>, but the case in which this distinction was drawn has been overruled<sup>2</sup>; and it is now settled that English and foreign bonds are upon the same footing. So well established, indeed, is the fact that English debenture bonds payable to bearer are negotiable that the court has stated that it would be prepared to presume the usage without proof thereof<sup>3</sup>.

An alleged custom that an unpaid seller of bearer bonds should have a lien over them or that they should be impressed with a trust in favour of an unpaid seller is inconsistent with the nature of negotiable securities and invalid<sup>4</sup>.

On the same principle<sup>1</sup> scrip certificates to bearer for shares in a joint stock company are negotiable<sup>2</sup>, and so also are share warrants to bearer<sup>3</sup>. Share warrants not to bearer are not negotiable instruments<sup>4</sup>.

If certificates for company shares issued with a blank form of transfer, which have been signed but not filled in by the original holder of the shares, are delivered by or with the authority of the owner with intent to transfer them, such delivery will suffice to pass title; but if there has been no intent on the part of the owner to transfer them, a good title can only be obtained as against him if he has so acted as to preclude himself from setting up a claim to them<sup>5</sup>.

1620. Nature of bill of sale.

A bill of sale may be described as an instrument in writing whereby one person transfers to another the property he has in goods or chattels<sup>1</sup>, or as a document given with respect to the transfer of goods or chattels, used in cases where possession is not intended to be given<sup>2</sup>. Where possession of goods is given immediately to the transferee, whether by way of sale, gift or mortgage, the delivery of possession perfects the transferee's title, and it will usually be unnecessary for him to rely on any document to establish his claim to the goods<sup>3</sup>. Hence the use of the term 'bill of sale' is normally confined to describing instruments of transfer given in transactions where it is intended that the transferor shall remain in possession of the goods<sup>4</sup>. However, the provisions of the Bills of Sale Acts 1878 and 1882<sup>5</sup> have considerably extended the classes of document that are to be regarded as bills of sale, and the fact that possession is intended to be given immediately to the transferee does not by itself prevent a document from amounting to a bill of sale within the Acts<sup>6</sup>.

A bill of sale is not the only method by which the transfer of ownership of goods, whether absolutely or by way of security, may be effected<sup>7</sup>; and there are also certain forms of consensual security over goods which do not involve the transfer of ownership to the secured party at all<sup>8</sup>.

1621. Classification.

There are two kinds of bill of sale, namely, absolute bills and conditional, or security, bills. A bill is termed absolute when it is given otherwise than as security for the payment of money. A conditional or security bill is a bill given to secure a money payment<sup>1</sup>.

<sup>1</sup> In normal parlance, the term 'security bill' would also embrace bills given to secure performance of a non-monetary obligation, but the Bills of Sale Act (1878) Amendment Act 1882 is limited to bills given as security for the payment of money (see s 3; and PARA 1638), and other security bills are for the purpose of the Bills of Sale Acts equated with absolute bills. This treatment is adopted in the text.

1622. Transfer of existing goods at common law.

At common law, the voluntary transfer of the legal title to existing goods may be effected by sale, exchange, mortgage or gift<sup>1</sup>. The goods must be ascertained before the property can pass<sup>2</sup>. Subject to this, the property will pass on a sale when the parties intend it to pass<sup>3</sup>, and, if their intention is expressed in the agreement, the law will give effect to it<sup>4</sup>. The agreement may be made orally, and the transfer of title is not dependent either on a written document or, except for gift, on the delivery of possession. Similar principles govern the passing of property on an exchange<sup>5</sup>.

A legal mortgage of goods is effected by assignment with a proviso, express or implied, for re-assignment on redemption<sup>6</sup>. Where possession is given by way of security without any express transfer of ownership, the court must ascertain the intention of the parties in order to determine the nature of the security interest created, that is, whether there was a transfer of title by way of mortgage or whether title remained in the debtor and possession was given merely by way of equitable charge, pledge or contractual lien<sup>7</sup>.

A gift of goods inter vivos must, to be effective at law, be made either by deed<sup>8</sup> or by delivery of possession<sup>9</sup>, though beneficial ownership can be transferred in equity by declaration of trust or transfer to a third party as trustee for the donee<sup>10</sup>. A purported gift not effected by one of these methods is nugatory<sup>11</sup>.

1 See GIFTS; MORTGAGE vol 77 (2010) PARA 101 et seq; PERSONAL PROPERTY; SALE OF GOODS AND SUPPLY OF SERVICES.

2 In the case of a contract for the sale of goods this principle is embodied in the Sale of Goods Act 1979 s 16. See SALE OF GOODS AND SUPPLY OF SERVICES vol 41 (2005 Reissue) PARA 124.

3 In relation to a contract for the sale of goods see the Sale of Goods Act 1979 s 17(1); and SALE OF GOODS AND SUPPLY OF SERVICES vol 41 (2005 Reissue) PARA 112.

4 In relation to a contract for the sale of goods see the Sale of Goods Act 1979 s 17(2); and SALE OF GOODS AND SUPPLY OF SERVICES vol 41 (2005 Reissue) PARA 112. Section 18 lays down rules for ascertaining the intention of the parties where no different intention appears in the contract: see SALE OF GOODS AND SUPPLY OF SERVICES vol 41 (2005 Reissue) PARA 113 et seq.

5 2 Bl Com (14th edn) 446; and see PERSONAL PROPERTY vol 35 (Reissue) PARA 1258; SALE OF GOODS AND SUPPLY OF SERVICES vol 41 (2005 Reissue) PARA 1. Contracts of exchange are, however, outside the Sale of Goods Act 1979, as by definition a contract of sale requires that the consideration for the transfer of the property be a money consideration: see s 2(1); and SALE OF GOODS AND SUPPLY OF SERVICES vol 41 (2005 Reissue) PARA 29.

The legal ownership of personal chattels being indivisible, it is not possible, as can be done in the case of land, to create a legal mortgage of chattels by demise for a term of years. A legal mortgage usually involves the transfer of title from the mortgagor himself but exceptionally it may be transferred by a third party: see Maas v Pepper [1905] AC 102, HL; and PARA 1677. A bank financing the purchase of imported goods usually takes delivery of the indorsed bill of lading by way of pledge (see PARA 1680), but there is nothing to prevent the parties agreeing that the bank shall take a full legal title by way of mortgage: see Sewell v Burdick (1884) 10 App Cas 74 at 95-97, HL. As to personal chattels see PARA 1662 et seq.

Since the law does not recognise divided interests in pure personalty, a legal mortgage of goods divests the mortgagor of his legal title and leaves him merely with an equitable interest in the form of an equity of redemption, so that if he thereafter grants a second mortgage, this is a disposition of an equitable interest which, to be valid, must be in writing signed by him or on his behalf: Law of Property Act 1925 s 53(1)(c). Section 53(1)(c) does not apply to any transfer of title to uncertificated units of a security by means of a relevant system and any disposition or assignment of an interest in uncertificated units of a security title to which is held by a relevant nominee: see the Uncertificated Securities Regulations 2001, SI 2001/3755, reg 38(5), (6). ### 1623. Transfer of future goods at common law.

Subject to three exceptions, a purported transfer of goods inter vivos which at the date of the transfer were not owned by the transferor, either because they belonged to another or because they had not then come into existence, was of no dispositive effect at common law<sup>1</sup>, and could at most amount to a contract to transfer, creating no rights over the goods even after acquisition by the transferor<sup>2</sup>. The three exceptions to this rule were: (1) sales of future goods, which passed the property on fulfilment of the conditions agreed between the parties<sup>3</sup>; (2) transfers of potential produce<sup>4</sup> of property already owned by the transferor and conveyed by the transfer, which operated to pass the legal title to the produce in question when it came into existence without any further act by the transferor<sup>5</sup>; and (3) transfers of future goods which specified or contemplated the performance of some 'new act' of transfer by the transferor, in performance of his contract, after he had acquired the goods, which passed the legal title to the transferee when the new act in question was performed<sup>6</sup>. These remain the only three cases in which a transfer of future goods inter vivos can have effect at law.

In so far as a transfer of future goods is effective at common law no special formality is required<sup>7</sup> and an oral agreement suffices.

2 See the cases cited in note 1. However, a disposition of goods by will to A for life with remainder to B was considered to create an executory interest in favour of B which, though having no effect as a transfer of property to B during A's lifetime, operated to vest the goods in B at law on A's death without further act of transfer (Re Thynne, Thynne v Grey [1911] 1 Ch 282; following Re Tritton, ex p Singleton (1889) 61 LT 301). ### 1624. Transfer of goods in equity.

A transfer of existing goods which is not effective in law, because it is merely an executory agreement for transfer or because the transferor's own interest in the goods is merely equitable<sup>1</sup>, will normally take effect in equity, pursuant to the maxim that equity treats as done that which ought to be done<sup>2</sup>. To this principle there are two exceptions. First, an uncompleted agreement for a gift has no effect even in equity, which does not perfect imperfect gifts<sup>3</sup>; and secondly, an agreement to sell goods is a pure contract, since the passing of property is governed by the Sale of Goods Act 1979, which deals with the legal title and is considered to leave no scope for equity to operate on the agreement<sup>4</sup> unless, of course, the terms of the agreement themselves create an equitable interest in favour of the buyer, as by providing that the seller is to hold the goods as the buyer's trustee pending transfer of the legal title.

Although the common law did not in general accord a proprietary effect to a transfer of future goods<sup>5</sup>, in equity a transfer, or agreement for transfer, of future goods, if for value<sup>6</sup> and if the goods are described sufficiently to be identifiable when acquired<sup>7</sup>, passes the beneficial ownership to the transferee when the goods are acquired by the transferor, without the necessity for any new act of transfer<sup>8</sup>. However, this equitable principle does not apply to contracts of sale, these being governed by the provisions of the Sale of Goods Act 1979, under which the property in future goods passes in accordance with the provisions of that Act<sup>9</sup> and until then the buyer has a mere contractual right to them<sup>10</sup>; and a voluntary transfer of future goods is nugatory, even in equity<sup>11</sup>.

A transfer of future goods does not require writing in order to be effective in equity<sup>12</sup>.

1 If the debtor has already granted a legal mortgage a second mortgage is necessarily equitable: see PARA 1622 note 6.

2 See EQUITY vol 16(2) (Reissue) PARA 561. However, the transferee's title is imperfect until he has actually made his advance: see Shaw v Foster (1872) LR 5 HL 321; Lysaght v Edwards (1876) 2 ChD 499; Rayner v Preston (1881) 18 ChD 1 at 13, CA, per James LJ. Although these cases are concerned with the transfer of land the same principle applies in relation to goods.

1625. Forms of consensual security in goods.

English law recognises four distinct forms of security in goods, namely, the mortgage, the pledge, the contractual lien and the equitable charge<sup>1</sup>.

Halsbury's Laws of England/FINANCIAL SERVICES AND INSTITUTIONS (VOLUME 48 (2008) 5TH EDITION, PARAS 1-589; VOLUME 49 (2008) 5TH EDITION, PARAS 590-1619; VOLUME 50 (2008) 5TH EDITION, PARAS 1620-2586)/7. BILLS OF SALE/(1) INTRODUCTION/(i) Common Law/1626. Mortgage.

1626. Mortgage.

A mortgage of goods is a transfer of ownership by way of security. The mortgagor parts with his full interest in the goods and transfers this to the mortgagee, subject only to a right of retransfer on redemption<sup>1</sup>. As security owner the mortgagee has in theory an immediate right to possession, unless otherwise agreed, as well as a power of sale in certain conditions.

1627. Pledge.

A pledge of goods is effected by the delivery of possession by way of security and, unlike a mortgage, does not pass ownership but endows the pledgee with what has been termed a special property<sup>1</sup> (by which is meant a possessory interest enforceable at law and carrying with it an implied right of sale in the event of default by the pledgor<sup>2</sup>). The delivery of possession may be actual or constructive, and may be effected by the pledgor himself or by a third party with his authority<sup>3</sup>.

1628. Contractual lien.

A contractual lien is a contractual right to retain possession pending payment of sums due to the possessor. The contractual lien, which is often equated with a pledge, is to be distinguished from it in that possession is taken for purposes other than security (for example, for storage or repair) and unless otherwise agreed the lienholder has merely a right to detain the goods until payment of what is due to him, not a right to sell them on default in payment<sup>1</sup>.

Halsbury's Laws of England/FINANCIAL SERVICES AND INSTITUTIONS (VOLUME 48 (2008) 5TH EDITION, PARAS 1-589; VOLUME 49 (2008) 5TH EDITION, PARAS 590-1619; VOLUME 50 (2008) 5TH EDITION, PARAS 1620-2586)/7. BILLS OF SALE/(1) INTRODUCTION/(i) Common Law/1629. Equitable charge.

1629. Equitable charge.

A form of security which neither involves the transfer of ownership nor is dependent on the delivery of possession is the equitable charge, or hypothecation. A mere charge (that is, one that does not include an agreement for a mortgage) gives the creditor no interest in the goods, merely a right in preference to other creditors, to look to the goods to satisfy the debt due to him, and for this purpose to follow the goods into the hands of any third party other than a purchaser for value of the legal title without notice of the charge or a person having a charge or other claim over the goods ranking in priority to that of the chargee<sup>1</sup>. As a charge involves no transfer of ownership, an instrument of charge would not, at common law, have been considered a bill of sale<sup>2</sup>; but the extended definition of 'bill of sale' in the Bills of Sale Act 1878 now covers such instruments<sup>3</sup>.

<sup>1</sup> Re Slee, ex p North Western Bank (1872) LR 15 Eq 69; Tennant v Trenchard (1869) 4 Ch App 537. A charge may be created by act of parties or by statute. The former derives from equity or, in the case of maritime hypothecations, from maritime law.

<sup>2</sup> Re Slee, ex p North Western Bank (1872) LR 15 Eq 69. The case of Edwards v Edwards (1876) 2 ChD 291, CA, which might appear to suggest the contrary, is to be explained on the basis that the document in that case, while purporting to create a charge, was in fact an equitable mortgage because it included a covenant to assign: see Re Standard Manufacturing Co [1891] 1 Ch 627 at 638, CA, per Fry LJ.

1630. Legislation governing bills of sale.

The practice of granting bills of sale under arrangements by which the grantor remained in possession after execution of the bill caused much hardship to creditors, who might be led to extend credit to the grantor of the bill on the strength of his apparent ownership of goods which he had in fact conveyed to another. In order to prevent secret transfers, the Bills of Sale Act 1854 introduced a requirement of registration; and by the Bills of Sale Act 1866 renewal of registration was required every five years. These Acts were repealed by the Bills of Sale Act 1878<sup>1</sup> (the 'principal Act')<sup>2</sup>, and replaced by that Act. This was subsequently amended by the Bills of Sale Act (1878) Amendment Act 1882 (the 'amending Act'). The two Acts may be cited together as the Bills of Sale Acts 1878 and 1882<sup>3</sup>. The Bills of Sale Act 1890, as amended by the Bills of Sale Act 1891, provides that certain instruments hypothecating imported goods are not to be deemed bills of sale within the meaning of the principal and amending Acts<sup>4</sup>; and various other statutes confer exemption from the Bills of Sale Acts 1878 and 1882 as regards specified classes of transfer<sup>5</sup>. Absolute assignments of book debts, though not bills of sale, are in certain circumstances required to be registered as if they were bills of sale<sup>6</sup>.

There is no other legislation directly governing bills of sale<sup>7</sup>, apart from local registration rules made pursuant to the principal Act<sup>8</sup>, and rules of court<sup>9</sup>.

1 Repealed by the Bills of Sale Act 1878 s 23 (relevant words repealed), by which it was also provided that the repealed Acts continued in force, and had effect in place of the new legislation, as regards bills of sale executed before 1 January 1879 (see s 2 (amended by the Statute Law Revision Act 1894)), except that any subsequent renewal after that date of a bill registered under the previous legislation would be made under the new legislation. As to renewals see PARA 1781 et seq.

3 Bills of Sale Act (1878) Amendment Act 1882 s 1. So far as consistent with its tenor, the amending Act is to be construed as one with the Bills of Sale Act 1878: see the Bills of Sale Act (1878) Amendment Act 1882 s 3. The Bills of Sale Acts have attracted considerable opprobrium, both from litigants and from the courts, because of the great obscurity and technicality of the statutory provisions. They were severely criticised in the Report of the Committee on Consumer Credit (Cmnd 4596) (1971), which recommended their repeal and replacement by a comprehensive Lending and Security Act regulating all security interests in personal property, based on Article 9 of the American Uniform Commercial Code. Similar recommendations were made by the Insolvency Law Review Committee in its report Insolvency Law and Practice (Cmnd 8558) (1982) and by Professor AL Diamond in his report A Review of Security Interests in Property (1989). No legislation has so far been enacted to give effect to any of these recommendations. Over the last 30 or so years the number of registrations has fallen to the point where the number registered is currently in the region of only 5000. Almost all of these are security bills, the vast majority of which relate to finance for motor vehicles.

4 See the Bills of Sale Act 1890 s 1; and PARA 1661. As to the meaning of 'bills of sale' in the principal and amending Acts see PARA 1638.

5 See PARA 1684 et seq.

6 See PARA 1854.

7 Note, however, that a bill of sale taken to secure an agreement which is a regulated agreement for the purposes of the Consumer Credit Act 1974 is governed by various provisions of that Act (see CONSUMER CREDIT vol 9(1) (Reissue) PARAS 200, 222).

8 Repealed under the Bills of Sale Act 1878 s 21: see the Bills of Sale (Local Registration) Rules 1960, SI 1960/2326; and PARA 1776.

1631. Absolute and security bills.

The regulation of absolute bills of sale differs markedly from that of security bills, and this reflects the difference in the objects of the Bills of Sale Act 1878 (the 'principal Act') and the Bills of Sale Act (1878) Amendment Act 1882 (the 'amending Act')<sup>1</sup>. The purpose of the principal Act, like that of the enactments it replaced<sup>2</sup>, was to prevent credit being given to persons on the strength of their apparent ownership of goods in their possession which in fact had ceased to belong to them as the result of a secret transfer<sup>3</sup>. The principal Act seeks to protect creditors from such secret transfers by requiring bills of sale to be registered and by rendering unregistered bills void against execution creditors and trustees in bankruptcy or liquidators of the grantor, in cases where the grantor remained in possession after executing the bill<sup>4</sup>.

The purpose of the amending Act<sup>5</sup> was twofold. First, it was designed to strengthen protection for creditors, as by rendering void, except as against the grantor, after-acquired property clauses in bills of sale<sup>6</sup>. Its second and predominant objective was to prevent needy persons being trapped into signing complicated documents which they might often be unable to comprehend, and so being subjected by their creditors to the enforcement of harsh and unreasonable provisions<sup>7</sup>. To this end, the amending Act prescribes a form of bill of sale which must be closely followed<sup>8</sup> and which is intended to ensure that the nature and terms of the loan and security are clearly set out<sup>9</sup>. The statutory form and various provisions in the body of the Act severely restrict the terms that may validly be inserted in a security bill<sup>10</sup>. Indeed, the requirement of conformity with the statutory form may have the result that certain classes of document falling within the statutory definition of 'bill of sale' cannot be employed at all, as they are by nature incompatible with the statutory form<sup>11</sup>.

The amending Act, so far as is consistent with the tenor thereof, is to be construed as one with the principal Act<sup>12</sup>. It does not apply to bills of sale given otherwise than as security for the payment of money<sup>13</sup>. Accordingly, absolute bills are unaffected by the amending Act; and to the extent to which the amending Act contains provisions repealing portions of the principal Act<sup>14</sup> the impact of those provisions is limited to security bills, leaving absolute bills controlled by the principal Act in its original form<sup>15</sup>. Security bills, on the other hand, are governed by both the principal and the amending Acts<sup>16</sup>.

The amending Act requires registration of a security bill not only to make it effective against third parties but also to preserve the validity of the security against the grantor. It is difficult to see how the grantor can either benefit from registration or suffer from non-registration. Third parties would, of course, be prejudiced by the absence of machinery for giving notice of a bill, but they are protected by the separate provisions of the principal Act, if falling within one of the limited categories of person against whom a bill is rendered void for want of registration: see the Bills of Sale Act 1878 s 8; and PARA 1849.

BILLS OF SALE/(i) INTRODUCTION/(ii) Legislation/1632. Impact of the Bills of Sale Acts on the transfer of goods.

1632. Impact of the Bills of Sale Acts on the transfer of goods.

The Bills of Sale Acts<sup>1</sup> regulate documents by which an interest in the property in goods is transferred or a charge or right of seizure over goods is given. The Acts do not constitute a code replacing the rules of common law and equity relating to the transfer of goods. They engraft statutory provisions on to the common law, which continues to apply except to the extent to which it has been modified by the Acts. Accordingly, while the Acts require that written instruments of transfer must be registered and must conform to certain requirements, they do not apply to oral transactions<sup>2</sup> or displace common law rules permitting the transfer of goods otherwise than in writing<sup>3</sup>. Again, apart from limited restrictions on the right of the grantee of a security bill to seize and sell the security<sup>4</sup>, the Acts do not regulate the rights of the parties to a valid bill, which continue to be governed by the common law and, in the case of a sale, by the Sale of Goods Act 1979<sup>5</sup>. Thus, subject to such restrictions, the right of the grantee of a security bill to enforce the personal covenants in the bill, to realise his security by sale or to obtain foreclosure, and of the grantor of such a bill to redeem the security before sale or foreclosure, are unaffected by the Acts and are governed by general principles of mortgage law<sup>6</sup>.

The principal impact of the Acts is to render void, either wholly or in part, certain types of written transfer that would be fully effective at common law and to impose in relation to written transfers within the Acts various formal requirements which do not exist at common law.

2 See PARA 1639.

3 As to which see PARAS 1622-1624. Moreover it is in some cases necessary to refer to the common law rules in order to determine whether a document is a bill of sale within the Acts. This applies, for example, to building contracts containing a vesting clause (see PARA 1649) and to mortgages of future growing crops on land owned by the mortgagor at the date of the mortgage (see PARA 1699 note 3).

1633. Transactions affected by the Bills of Sale Acts.

Before a transaction can be affected by the Bills of Sale Acts<sup>1</sup>, five conditions must be fulfilled.

154 (1) There must be a document on which the Acts can operate. Oral transactions are unaffected by the Acts<sup>2</sup>.

155 (2) The document must constitute a bill of sale within the statutory definition. This definition is considerably wider than the common law understanding of the term 'bill of sale', but it also excludes certain classes of document that would have been considered bills of sale at common law<sup>3</sup>.

156 (3) The document must relate to personal chattels as defined by the Acts<sup>4</sup>. The statutory definition embraces forms of property that would not be classified as personal chattels at common law<sup>5</sup> and excludes types of property that would constitute personal chattels at common law<sup>6</sup>.

157 (4) The document must confer on the grantee, by its express or implied terms or as a matter of law, a power to seize or take possession of some or all of such personal chattels<sup>7</sup>.

158 (5) The grantee's rights over such personal chattels must for some moment of time derive from the document, not from some independent act or event such as the taking of possession<sup>8</sup>.

1 Ie the Bills of Sale Act 1878 and the Bills of Sale Act (1878) Amendment Act 1882: see PARA 1630.

2 See PARA 1639. Similarly, the Acts do not apply to a lien, charge or right of disposal conferred by operation of law, as there is then no document on which the Acts can fasten: Re Vulcan Ironworks Ltd (1888) 4 TLR 312; Lord's Trustee v Great Eastern Rly Co [1908] 2 KB 54 at 60, CA, per Cozens-Hardy MR; Re Webber, ex p Slater (1891) 64 LT 426.

4 As to the statutory definition of 'personal chattels' see the Bills of Sale Act 1878 s 4; and PARA 1662 et seq.

5 Notably fixtures and growing crops, when separately assigned: see PARAS 1666, 1670.

6 Namely farming stock and produce: see PARA 1671.

7 See the Bills of Sale Act 1878 s 3. Prior to the enactment of the Bills of Sale Act 1878 a charge on goods would probably have been outside the legislation, as a charge confers no right to take possession, and although the chargee can appoint a receiver the latter is not his agent: see Bank of Victoria Ltd v Langlands Foundry Co

Ltd (1898) 24 VLR 230 at 252-256 per Holroyd J, discussing Edwards v Edwards (1876) 2 ChD 291, CA; PARA 1629 note 2; and RECEIVERS vol 39(2) (Reissue) PARA 303. However, the expanded definition of 'bill of sale' in the Bills of Sale Act 1878 s 4, covering an agreement by which a 'right in equity to personal chattels, or to any charge or security thereon, shall be conferred' (see PARA 1638), must be taken to have enlarged the meaning of the phrase 'power . . . to seize' in s 3. See further PARA 1638 note 10.

Where the grantor does retain possession, the fact that the document confers on the grantee a right to immediate possession and that it was intended that he should be given immediate possession does not exclude the operation of the Acts: see Re Townsend, ex p Parsons (1886) 16 QBD 532, CA; and PARA 1647.

Halsbury's Laws of England/FINANCIAL SERVICES AND INSTITUTIONS (VOLUME 48 (2008) 5TH EDITION, PARAS 1-589; VOLUME 49 (2008) 5TH EDITION, PARAS 590-1619; VOLUME 50 (2008) 5TH EDITION, PARAS 1620-2586)/7. BILLS OF SALE/(1) INTRODUCTION/(ii) Legislation/1634. Spent bills.

1634. Spent bills.

Even where all five of the requisite conditions<sup>1</sup> are satisfied, so that the Bills of Sale Acts<sup>2</sup> become applicable to a document, the Acts will cease to apply, and the bill of sale will become spent, if after execution of the bill and before the occurrence of an avoiding event the grantee either perfects his title in some other manner, as by exercising a right to take possession of the chattels<sup>3</sup> or by taking a new and valid bill<sup>4</sup>, or exercises a right to dispose of the chattels<sup>5</sup>.

The requirement that the seizure or sale must be in pursuance of a right to seize or sell sets a limit on the extent to which the grantee, by taking possession or realising his security, can avoid the adverse consequences resulting from the invalidity of the bill he has taken. In this respect, there is an important distinction between an absolute bill and a security bill<sup>6</sup>.

Apart from the statutory provision relating to successive bills<sup>7</sup>, an absolute bill is never rendered void against the grantor for non-compliance with the Bills of Sale Act 1878<sup>8</sup>. The sole consequence of infringement is that the bill is rendered void against a very limited class of third parties<sup>9</sup>. It follows that the grantee of an absolute bill is entitled, as against the grantor, to exercise a right of seizure or sale conferred by the bill, even if it is not registered or otherwise fails to comply with the Bills of Sale Act 1878; and the perfection of his title in this way will be effective against everyone other than a person who, at the time of seizure or sale, was a member of the class of third parties against whom the bill is rendered void through contravention of the Act<sup>10</sup>.

As regards security bills, the position is somewhat different, because: (1) the breach of certain of the statutory provisions renders the bill void, either as to the security or as a whole, even against the grantor, with the result that any right of possession or sale which might otherwise have been exercisable under the bill is nullified<sup>11</sup>, and any purported sale by the grantee is ineffective because he has no title to convey<sup>12</sup>; and (2) even where the statutory provision infringed avoids the bill only against third parties and not against the grantor, such avoidance is not limited, as in the case of absolute bills, to a restricted category of third parties but extends to all persons other than the grantor.

The taking of a new bill in place of a prior bill renders the prior bill spent, and avoids the consequences of its invalidity, provided that the new bill is not given within seven days of the old bill<sup>13</sup> and that, in the case of a security bill, the consideration is openly stated as the discharge of a prior invalid bill<sup>14</sup>.

The decision in Karet v Kosher Meat Supply Association Ltd (1877) 2 QBD 361, where the grantee of an absolute bill assigned his rights under the bill before it was registered, and the goods comprised in it, and the assignee's title was held to be defeated by non-renewal of the original bill, is to be explained on the basis that the correct ground of invalidity of the assignee's title was not non-renewal of the original bill but failure of the assignee to register the assignment itself as a bill of sale: see Antoniadi v Smith above at 594-595 per Stirling J; Cookson v Swire (1884) 9 App Cas 653 at 663, HL, per Earl of Selborne LC. Earlier cases such as Chapman v Knight (1880) 5 CPD 308 and Re Walden, ex p Odell (1878) 10 ChD 76, CA (in which it appears to have been overlooked that as the law then stood non-registration of a bill of sale, whether absolute or by way of security, did not affect the title of the grantee except as against one of the classes of person mentioned in the Bills of Sale Act 1878 s 8 (see PARA 1849)) must be reconsidered in the light of these later decisions. See also Hopkins v Gudgeon [1906] 1 KB 690, DC. However, under the Bills of Sale Act (1878) Amendment Act 1882, non-registration of a security bill avoids the security even as against the grantor: see s 9; and the text and note 11. The transfer or assignment of a registered bill does not itself require to be registered as a bill of sale (Bills of Sale Act 1878 s 10 (see also PARA 1842)), and registration of the original bill does not have to be renewed by reason only of such transfer (s 11); however, the position is otherwise if the instrument of transfer goes beyond a mere assignment or if the grantee, instead of assigning the bill, exercises a right to sell the goods (see PARA 1791).

However the apparently limited impact of s 8 is somewhat expanded by s 10, which has been construed by the courts as giving a registered bill priority over a previous unregistered bill even though the grantee of the later bill is not, as such, within the classes of person protected by s 8: see PARA 1800.

However, the position is otherwise if the grantee of the void bill can show that he took possession pursuant to some subsequent and distinct oral agreement: Re Townsend, ex p Parsons at 542-543, 547.

12 It is otherwise if the grantee acquired a title independently of the void bill, as by a subsequent effective transfer or the taking of a valid new bill (see the text and notes 13-14), or if the grantor expressly or by conduct adopted the sale (see Wallis v Sayer [1890] WN 120, DC, where on the facts it was held that the grantor had not affirmed the sale).

13 Unless for the purpose of correcting some material error: see the Bills of Sale Act 1878 s 9; and PARA 1755. The new bill will not, of course, be effective if title has meanwhile been acquired by a third party: see the cases cited in note 10.

1635. Future goods.

Despite certain dicta to the contrary<sup>1</sup>, after-acquired chattels have rightly been held to constitute personal chattels for the purpose of the Bills of Sale Acts<sup>2</sup> even if they are not merely not owned by the grantor at the date of the bill of sale but are not then in existence; and a document purporting to assign future chattels is, it is thought, a bill of sale governed by the Acts even if not embracing any existing goods at all<sup>3</sup>. This was not the case under the Bills of Sale Act 1854, under which a document assigning future goods was held not to constitute an assurance of goods capable of complete transfer by delivery<sup>4</sup>. However, the Bills of Sale Act 1878, in order to catch agreements conferring a right in equity over after-acquired goods<sup>5</sup>, added a third limb to the statutory definition of 'bill of sale'<sup>6</sup>. Moreover, that Act has to be read with the Bills of Sale Act (1878) Amendment Act 1882<sup>7</sup>, which was designed not only to safeguard borrowers but also to protect creditors against various forms of abuse, of which the most strongly criticised was the after-acquired property clause in bills of sale<sup>8</sup>; and it is not to be supposed that the Bills of Sale Act (1878) Amendment Act 1882, when rendering void against third parties security given over after-acquired chattels, intended that documents confined to such chattels should be outside the scope of the Acts altogether<sup>9</sup>.

In Australia, the bills of sale legislation has been held inapplicable to after-acquired property, but the decisions to this effect make it clear that this is because the enactments in question differed from the English Acts in vital respects, as by (1) retaining the definition of 'bill of sale' which featured in the Bills of Sale Act 1854 (repealed) without the third limb added by the Bills of Sale Act 1878; and (2) not having any requirement corresponding to that in the Bills of Sale Act (1878) Amendment Act 1882 s 5 (see PARA 1697) that the grantor must be the true owner at the date of the bill and that the goods must be specifically described: see R v Greig [1931] VLR 413, Vict FC; Re Grezzana, Painter v Short (1932) 4 ABC 216; Malick v Lloyd (1913) 16 CLR 483, Aust HC; Bank of Victoria Ltd v Langlands Foundry Co Ltd (1898) 24 VLR 230, Vict FC; Akron Tyre Co Pty Ltd v Kittson (1951) 82 CLR 477, Aust HC.

8 The provisions of the Bill leading to the Bills of Sale Act (1878) Amendment Act 1882 were the subject of a Report from the Select Committee of the House of Commons, which devoted much of its attention to after-acquired property clauses in such bills that had the effect of depriving creditors of their claims against the apparent assets of the grantor upon his bankruptcy.

9 Otherwise the Acts could be readily evaded, both as to stock-in-trade and other types of property, by the taking of a bill shortly before the grantor had acquired ownership of the assets in question.

Two difficult decisions are Re Thynne, Thynne v Grey [1911] 1 Ch 282 and Re Tritton, ex p Singleton (1889) 61 LT 301, in both of which it was held that an assignment of an executory interest in chattels bequeathed subject to a prior life interest created by the will was outside the Acts because such an interest was not a chose in possession but a mere chose in action and thus excluded from the statutory definition of personal chattels. If these decisions were correct, the principles enunciated would not be confined to executory interests arising in this way but would extend to all chattels of which the grantor was not the owner at the date of the bill, thus rendering the Bills of Sale Act (1878) Amendment Act 1882 s 5 (see PARA 1697) entirely nugatory. Indeed, such an approach would mean that s 5, which speaks of personal chattels not owned by the grantor at the date of the bill, would be a contradiction in terms, since lack of ownership would, on the reasoning of the above cases, prevent the subject matter of the bill from constituting personal chattels. The fallacy of the decisions lies in their failure to recognise that, whilst the assignment of an executory interest may be an immediate transfer of a chose in action, in the sense of a right to obtain judicial protection of the executory interest even before it has vested (Re Swan, Witham v Swan [1915] 1 Ch 829), it is also a future assignment of personal chattels as choses in possession, and thus falls within the third limb of the statutory definition of 'bill of sale' (see PARA 1638), which otherwise would be deprived of significance.

1636. Territorial application of the Acts.

The Bills of Sale Acts do not extend to Scotland or Northern Ireland<sup>1</sup>, and thus do not form part of the law of either of those countries. It does not follow from this that, as a matter of English law, the Acts are confined to transactions in England, but the Bills of Sale Act 1882 expressly excludes bills of sale of goods in foreign parts or at sea<sup>2</sup>, and for this purpose Scotland and Northern Ireland are considered 'foreign parts', so that a bill of sale given in England over goods in Scotland or Northern Ireland is not affected by the Acts<sup>3</sup>.

Whether the Acts apply where a foreign element other than the location of the goods is concerned, as where a bill of sale is executed in a foreign country over goods situated in England, appears never to have been decided. The answer to this question depends on whether the Acts are to be interpreted as confined to bills of sale governed by English law. If they are so confined, the applicability of English law would fall to be determined by conflict of laws principles<sup>4</sup>, but as the Acts were enacted for the purpose of preventing frauds on creditors and protecting grantors of security bills against oppression, their provisions would, it is thought, be regarded by an English court as mandatory in character, so as to be applicable to a bill of sale over goods situated in England regardless of the applicable law and of any choice of law clause in the bill of sale purporting to select a foreign law to govern the transaction<sup>5</sup>. Quite independently of this principle (which applies even if the selection of foreign law is made in good faith and not for the purpose of evasion) an English court would be unlikely to give effect to a choice of law clause selecting a foreign legal system for the sole or primary purpose of evading the Bills of Sale Acts<sup>6</sup>.

3 Coote v Jecks (1872) LR 13 Eq 597 (the word 'not' in the penultimate line at the foot of p 600 of this report appears to be an error), 41 LJCh 599; Brookes v Harrison (1880) 6 LR Ir 85 (affd 6 LR Ir 332, CA). It is thought that this construction of the words 'foreign parts' in the Bills of Sale Act 1878 s 4 continues to be valid despite the provision in the Ireland Act 1949 s 2 that for the purpose of any enactment in force in any part of the United Kingdom the Republic of Ireland is not a foreign country (see further COMMONWEALTH).

4 In general, the transfer of tangible movables is governed by the lex situs, that is, the law of the state in which the movables in question are situated at the time of the transfer: see CONFLICT OF LAWS vol 8(3) (Reissue) PARA 405. In the case of a security bill, the fact that the bill is executed abroad would not by itself render the Acts inapplicable, because the Bills of Sale Act (1878) Amendment Act 1882 s 8 provides a special time limit for registration of security bills executed out of England (see PARA 1759). This provision would seem to indicate that in relation to all bills of sale, whether or not by way of security, Parliament did not contemplate execution abroad as being a foreign element that would by itself displace the application of the Acts. For the conflict of laws rules governing the contractual aspect of bills of sale see the Contracts (Applicable Law) Act 1990, giving effect to the Convention on the Law Applicable to Contractual Obligations (Rome, 19 June 1980); and CONFLICT OF LAWS vol 8(3) (Reissue) PARA 349 et seq.

5 See English v Donnelly 1958 SC 494, Ct of Sess; Vita Food Products Inc v Unus Shipping Co Ltd [1939] AC 277, [1939] 1 All ER 513, PC. No foreign element other than the location of the goods at the time of execution of the bill appears to be relevant, because the Acts are expressed to be inapplicable to bills of sale of goods in foreign parts or at sea (see the text to note 2), and, if the goods are situated in England, the mandatory character of the provisions would bring the bill within the Acts regardless of any foreign element in the transaction. As under conflict of laws rules the efficacy of a bill of sale would ordinarily be determined by the lex situs in any event, the only effect of the mandatory character of the legislation would be to displace a choice of law clause in the bill itself. See generally CONFLICT OF LAWS vol 8(3) (Reissue) PARA 405 et seq.

1637. Effect of choice of English law where otherwise inapplicable.

The converse question to that examined in the previous paragraph is whether a written chattel mortgage which would otherwise fall outside the Bills of Sale Acts<sup>1</sup> because of the foreign element involved (for example, location of the goods abroad) becomes subject to the Acts because the mortgage is expressed to be governed by English law. By parity of reasoning this would seem not to be the case. Just as the scope of the Acts as mandatory statutes cannot be narrowed by choosing foreign law, so also it cannot be expanded by designating English law as the foreign law. The reach of the Acts depends in every case on the interpretation of the legislation itself. Thus as the Acts do not apply to bills of sale relating to goods situated abroad<sup>2</sup> the choice of English law to govern a bill of sale comprising goods so situated will not by itself render the Acts applicable. Moreover, it is not competent to parties to contract into legislative provisions dealing with issues that could not effectively have been regulated by express terms of the contract, for example, the statutory machinery for registration of bills of sale and the provisions relating to priority of bills and avoidance of a bill of sale against third parties.

(2) DEFINITIONS COMMON TO SECURITY AND ABSOLUTE BILLS

(i) Meaning of 'Bill of Sale'

1638. Statutory definition.

The term 'bill of sale' is defined at length in the Bills of Sale Act 1878<sup>1</sup>, and this definition is extended to cover instruments giving powers of distress<sup>2</sup>.

The Bills of Sale Act 1878 declares that the expression 'bill of sale', unless there is something in the subject or context repugnant to such construction, includes bills of sale, assignments, transfers, declarations of trust without transfer, inventories of goods with receipt thereto attached, or receipts for purchase moneys of goods, and other assurances of personal chattels<sup>3</sup>, and also powers of attorney, authorities, or licences to take possession of personal chattels as security for any debt, and also any agreement, whether intended or not to be followed by the execution of any other instrument, by which a right in equity to any personal chattels, or to any charge or security thereon, shall be conferred<sup>4</sup>.

This definition<sup>5</sup> divides bills of sale into three broad categories, namely: (1) instruments transferring legal or beneficial ownership of personal chattels; (2) instruments conferring a right to take possession of personal chattels as security for any debt<sup>6</sup>; and (3) agreements by which a right in equity to any personal chattels, or to any charge or security thereon, is to be conferred. The first two categories correspond to those originally provided in the Bills of Sale Act 1854<sup>7</sup>, and decisions on that Act are therefore relevant to determine whether a document is a bill of sale within either of these two limbs of the Bills of Sale Act 1878. The third limb of the definition in the Bills of Sale Act 1878 was new and was evidently intended to catch documents containing an assignment of future goods which would vest in the assignee in equity<sup>8</sup> upon acquisition by the assignor<sup>9</sup>. The addition of this third limb therefore significantly extends the meaning of the term 'bill of sale' beyond that which it bore under the Bills of Sale Act 1854<sup>10</sup>. It is, however, restricted to agreements conferring a right in equity, and thus does not embrace documents under which the vesting of future property does not arise automatically on acquisition by the assignor but is dependent on some new act by him after acquisition; for the effect of such act is to vest the goods in the assignor at law, and not merely in equity<sup>11</sup>.

1 See the Bills of Sale Act 1878 s 4. The statutory definition of 'bills of sale' only extends to documents: see PARAS 1639-1640. As to the documents which are expressly excluded from the definition see PARA 1656 et seq.

2 See the Bills of Sale Act 1878 s 6; and PARA 1652.

3 Bills of Sale Act 1878 s 4. The meaning of 'personal chattels' is discussed at PARA 1662 et seq. Only transfers inter vivos are within the definition. Chattels bequeathed by will do not thereby vest in the legatee on the death of the testator but, like other property of the testator, pass to the testator's personal representatives by operation of law: see EXECUTORS AND ADMINISTRATORS vol 17(2) (Reissue) PARA 335.

4 Bills of Sale Act 1878 s 4. Certain of the constituent elements of this definition are considered in PARA 1639 et seq. The term 'bill of sale' has the same meaning in the Bills of Sale Act (1878) Amendment Act 1882, save for one important qualification, namely, that the latter Act does not apply to bills of sale given otherwise than by way of security for the payment of money: Bills of Sale Act (1878) Amendment Act 1882 s 3.

5 The constituent parts of the definition are analysed in turn in PARA 1642 et seq.

6 A mere licence to seize otherwise than as security for a debt is outside this limb of the definition. It is for this reason, inter alia, that vesting clauses in building contracts do not normally attract the operation of the Bills of Sale Acts: see PARA 1649.

7 The Bills of Sale Act 1854 was repealed by the Bills of Sale Act 1878 s 23, and was replaced by that Act: see PARA 1630.

8 I.e. under the rule in Holroyd v Marshall (1862) 10 HL Cas 191: see PARA 1635.

9 See R v Greig [1931] VLR 413 at 440 per Cussen ACJ, Vict FC; and the other cases cited in PARA 1635 note 3.

10 R v Greig [1931] VLR 413, Vict FC. It would also appear to enlarge the effect of the Bills of Sale Act 1878 s 3 (see PARA 1633) to cover cases where the power of seizure is exercisable only by a receiver, as in the case of a charge. See PARAS 1633 note 7, 1651 note 4. As to vesting at law see PARAS 1649, 1699 note 3.

11 Reeves v Barlow (1884) 12 QBD 436, CA. For the common law rules, under which the vesting of the property takes place at law and is not dependent on the equitable principle enunciated in Holroyd v Marshall (1862) 10 HL Cas 191, see PARA 1629. This is a further reason why a vesting clause in a building contract does not make the contract a bill of sale: see PARA 1649. Similarly the definition does not extend to a document giving a mortgage or charge over future growing crops on land owned by the grantor at the date of execution of the document: see PARA 1699 note 3. Certain instruments falling within the statutory definition of 'bill of sale' are not capable of being reduced to the statutory form and therefore cannot be used: see PARA 1711.

Halsbury's Laws of England/FINANCIAL SERVICES AND INSTITUTIONS (VOLUME 48 (2008) 5TH EDITION, PARAS 1-589; VOLUME 49 (2008) 5TH EDITION, PARAS 590-1619; VOLUME 50 (2008) 5TH EDITION, PARAS 1620-2586)/7. BILLS OF SALE/(2) DEFINITIONS COMMON TO SECURITY AND ABSOLUTE BILLS/(i) Meaning of 'Bill of Sale'/1639. Oral transactions.

1639. Oral transactions.

The Bills of Sale Acts<sup>1</sup> affect documents, not transactions, and leave unimpeached titles or rights acquired by oral contract or transfer completed without writing<sup>2</sup>. They do not require that any transaction be put into writing<sup>3</sup>, but they do require that if a transaction is reduced to writing constituting a bill of sale of personal chattels within the statutory definition, the document must be registered<sup>4</sup>.

If the bargain between the parties is complete without any writing, so that the property intended to be dealt with passes independently, the Acts have no application to a document which merely refers to or confirms the transaction<sup>5</sup>; and the fact that such a document is drawn up without being registered does not invalidate the transaction<sup>6</sup>. The test is whether the grantee can establish his rights over the goods solely by reliance on the oral agreement. If he can, the Acts do not apply to the subsequent written document. If, however, the grantee cannot establish his title without putting the document in evidence<sup>7</sup> or if the document varies or enlarges the rights of the parties under the oral contract<sup>8</sup>, the Acts will apply to it.

3 Other rules of law may, however, bear on the validity of oral transactions. Thus a gift of chattels made otherwise than by declaration of trust and unaccompanied by the delivery of possession is ineffective unless made by deed: Re Cole (a bankrupt), ex p Trustee of the Property of the Bankrupt [1964] Ch 175, [1963] 3 All ER 433, CA; Re Kirkland (1964) 108 Sol Jo 197, CA. See further PARA 1852. A mortgage of goods securing an agreement which is a regulated agreement within the Consumer Credit Act 1974 need not itself be in writing but must be embodied in the required written agreement (ie referred to in it: s 189(4)) and the agreement must describe the security: see the Consumer Credit (Agreements) Regulations 1983, SI 1983/1553, regs 2, 3(7); and CONSUMER CREDIT vol 9(1) (Reissue) PARAS 162, 164. 5 Ramsay v Margrett [1894] 2 QB 18 at 23, CA, per Lord Esher MR. Thus the existence of a document which does not express, or which is not intended to express, the real agreement between the parties does not necessarily exclude proof of title under an independent oral contract: see Newlove v Shrewsbury (1881) 21 QBD 41, CA, where proof of an oral transfer as security was not excluded by the existence of a written receipt as on sale; and Parker v Lyon (1888) 5 TLR 10, CA, where an oral grant of a lien for purchase money, paid on a sale by deed, was upheld. See also note 6.

6 Thus a written notification of assignment to a bank, sent by the assignor through the bank to auctioneers then in possession of the goods for the purpose of sale, was held not to be within the Bills of Sale Acts: London and Yorkshire Bank Ltd v White (1895) 11 TLR 570. See also Parker v Lyon (1888) 5 TLR 10, CA, where it was held that though a deed of 'sale' was in reality a mortgage and void for non-compliance with the Bills of Sale

Acts, a subsequent agreement to rescind the 'sale' and to give the 'purchaser' (ie the mortgagee) a lien to secure repayment of the advances created a possessory right independent of the original deed, and was thus unaffected by the Bills of Sale Acts.

BILLS OF SALE/(2) DEFINITIONS COMMON TO SECURITY AND ABSOLUTE BILLS/(i) Meaning of 'Bill of Sale'/1640. Pledges.

1640. Pledges.

The Bills of Sale Acts<sup>1</sup> apply to documents, not to transactions. It follows that where, as will usually be the case, a pledge comes into existence independently of any document, as where the debtor physically delivers the goods to the creditor or orally attorns to him, the Acts will not apply, even where a document later comes into existence which refers to the pledge or its terms<sup>2</sup>. Whether an antecedent agreement in writing recording an intention to create a pledge is a bill of sale depends upon whether it binds the debtor to give possession of the goods to the creditor, in which case it falls within the statutory definition as a licence to seize<sup>3</sup>, or whether (as is more usual) the delivery of possession is voluntary and is merely a non-promissory condition of the creditor's willingness to make the advance, in which case the agreement is not a bill of sale, for it confers no licence to seize or any other rights in the goods (the pledge itself being dependent on delivery of possession) and the creditor's possession derives from delivery, not from the document<sup>4</sup>. Similarly, a mandate to hold and sell goods which is intended to operate only after possession has actually been transferred is not a bill of sale<sup>5</sup>.

The position is otherwise where the pledge is effected by way of constructive delivery through the debtor's written attornment<sup>6</sup> or where, though created orally, it is subsequently recorded in a written agreement between debtor and creditor which supersedes or varies the prior oral contract so as to become, wholly or in part, the source of the creditor's rights over the goods<sup>7</sup>. In the first case the pledge derives from the document from the beginning; in the second, the pledgee's rights over the goods, though initially based on an oral agreement, become subject, wholly or in part, to a written agreement. In both cases the document is registrable as a bill of sale unless falling within one of the statutory exclusions.

It would seem that a written attornment given not by the debtor himself but by a third party in possession of the goods, for example as carrier or warehouseman, is not a bill of sale, for the third party may have attorned without the debtor's authority and even if he acted with authority there could be no pledge in the absence of agreement between debtor and creditor. Such an agreement does not of itself constitute a bill of sale, for the reasons stated above, and the courts have refused to treat a combination of a written agreement for a pledge between debtor and creditor and a written attornment by a third party as together constituting a bill of sale<sup>8</sup>.

BILLS OF SALE/(2) DEFINITIONS COMMON TO SECURITY AND ABSOLUTE BILLS/(i) Meaning of 'Bill of Sale'/1641. Substance of the transaction.

1641. Substance of the transaction.

Parties are entitled to carry out a transaction in a manner which does not attract the operation of the Bills of Sale Acts<sup>1</sup>, and, if the documents employed are not on their face documents of a character bringing them within the scope of the Acts and they genuinely record the agreement reached between the parties, the court will enforce the documents according to their terms, even if the avowed intention of the parties was to avoid the Acts<sup>2</sup>. However, the court looks at the substance of the transaction and is entitled to go behind the documents if not satisfied of their veracity, and where it appears that these were sham documents intended to cloak the true nature of a transaction that would bring them within the Acts, then the Acts will apply to them<sup>3</sup>. Thus, if what is in reality a loan on the security of goods is dressed up as a sale and letting back on hire-purchase or a sale and repurchase under reservation of title, the documents will be treated as a security bill of sale<sup>4</sup>. The same applies where, though the documents genuinely record the intention of the parties, the transaction is incapable of taking effect as a sale and supply back and is in substance a mortgage<sup>5</sup>.

5TH EDITION, PARAS 1620-2586)/7. BILLS OF SALE/(2) DEFINITIONS COMMON TO SECURITY AND ABSOLUTE BILLS/(i) Meaning of 'Bill of Sale'/1642. 'Bills of sale'.

1642. 'Bills of sale'.

The opening words of the definition of 'bill of sale'<sup>1</sup> state, somewhat unhelpfully, that this expression includes 'bills of sale', which evidently means instruments in the form of a bill of sale<sup>2</sup> by which the property in goods is transferred<sup>3</sup>.

1 See the Bills of Sale Act 1878 s 4; and PARA 1638. As to the documents which are expressly excluded from the statutory definition of 'bill of sale' see PARA 1656 et seq.

2 As opposed to 'transfers', which produce the same effect but are not in the form of a bill of sale: see PARA 1643.

3 See Allsopp v Day (1861) 7 H & N 457; and PARA 1620.

Halsbury's Laws of England/FINANCIAL SERVICES AND INSTITUTIONS (VOLUME 48 (2008) 5TH EDITION, PARAS 1-589; VOLUME 49 (2008) 5TH EDITION, PARAS 590-1619; VOLUME 50 (2008) 5TH EDITION, PARAS 1620-2586)/7. BILLS OF SALE/(2) DEFINITIONS COMMON TO SECURITY AND ABSOLUTE BILLS/(i) Meaning of 'Bill of Sale'/1643. 'Assignments', 'transfers' and 'declarations of trust'.

1643. 'Assignments', 'transfers' and 'declarations of trust'.

The expressions 'assignments' and 'transfers' appear to mean the same thing.

'Transfers' are instruments which, though not in form bills of sale, purport to transfer the property in goods as a bill of sale would do<sup>1</sup>. An agreement for the transfer or assignment of goods is normally effective as a transfer or assignment in equity and if in writing constitutes a bill of sale<sup>2</sup>. However, an agreement by which the document is to operate and the property in the goods is to pass only on the occurrence of some external act, such as the delivery of possession or the bringing of goods on to land, is not even an equitable assignment but a mere contract<sup>3</sup> and is therefore not within this, or indeed any other, limb of the statutory definition.

A 'declaration of trust' of goods is a statement by one party that he holds the goods on trust for another. The effect is that whilst the legal title remains in the trustee, beneficial ownership passes to the designated beneficiary. Declarations of trust of chattels may be made orally<sup>4</sup>, in which case they will not be within the Bills of Sale Acts<sup>5</sup>. If, however, the trust is reduced to writing the Bills of Sale Acts will apply to it unless it falls within one of the categories excluded from the statutory definition<sup>6</sup> or the grantee's rights over the goods stem from a prior, independent pledge<sup>7</sup>.

2 Re Jeavons, ex p Mackay, ex p Brown (1873) 8 Ch App 643; Edwards v Edwards (1876) 2 ChD 291 at 297, CA, per Mellish LJ. An agreement to give a bill of sale is not in accordance with the statutory form (see PARA 1711), which embodies an actual transfer. See further PARA 1651. The impossibility of drawing an agreement for a bill of sale to conform to the statutory form does not mean that such an agreement is taken outside the Bills of Sale Acts but has the effect that it is void.

3 Reeves v Barlow (1884) 12 QBD 436 at 442, CA, per Bowen LJ. Hence in Brown v Bateman (1876) LR 2 CP 272 and Re Garrud, ex p Newitt (1880) 16 ChD 522, CA, the party attacking the instrument as a bill of sale did not attempt to argue that it was an assignment but sought to bring it within the phrase 'other assurances', which the court rejected, holding that this latter expression had to be construed ejusdem generis with the preceding words 'assignments, transfers, declarations of trust without transfer' in the Bills of Sale Act 1854 s 7 (now the Bills of Sale Act 1878 s 4: see PARA 1638). As to 'other assurances' see PARA 1645. As to the documents which are expressly excluded from the statutory definition of 'bill of sale' see PARA 1656 et seq.

1644. 'Inventories of goods with receipt thereto attached, or receipts for purchase moneys of goods'.

The expression 'bill of sale' includes 'inventories of goods with receipt thereto attached, or receipts for purchase moneys of goods, and other assurances of personal chattels'<sup>1</sup>. The controlling words are 'other assurances of personal chattels', and inventories and receipts do not come within the Bills of Sale Acts unless they are assurances on which the title claimed depends<sup>2</sup>. In other words, the inventory or receipt is not a bill of sale unless it is intended to be part of the bargain to pass the property in the goods<sup>3</sup>.

It is questionable whether an invoice and receipt given as separate instruments and not intended to be operative in connection with each other can be regarded as an inventory of goods with receipt thereto attached<sup>4</sup>. But an inventory and receipt may be as solemn an assurance as a deed<sup>5</sup> and, if embodying and intended to embody the terms of the contract, an inventory and receipt, or a receipt alone, may be a bill of sale<sup>6</sup>.

Where, however, there is a complete and effectual oral contract of sale or charge, enforceable without the need to rely on any document, an instrument of the kind mentioned, though drawn up contemporaneously with the transaction, will not affect the parties' rights so as to require registration as a bill of sale<sup>7</sup>. Thus, where goods are bought by oral contract and paid for, the buyer stipulating that a receipt shall be drawn up by a solicitor, the buyer's title is complete even though afterwards the seller gives a receipt in the form of an assurance<sup>8</sup>.

BILLS OF SALE/(2) DEFINITIONS COMMON TO SECURITY AND ABSOLUTE BILLS/(i) Meaning of 'Bill of Sale'/1645. 'Other assurances'.

1645. 'Other assurances'.

The words 'other assurances of personal chattels'<sup>1</sup>, which control the preceding words of the definition<sup>2</sup>, must be construed ejusdem generis with those words<sup>3</sup>. They therefore do not cover vesting clauses in a building contract<sup>4</sup>. But an express lien for unpaid purchase money, given by written agreement over goods sold and delivered to the purchaser, is an assurance within the Bills of Sale Acts<sup>5</sup>. So also a memorandum of the sale of goods in an auctioneer's book, signed by his clerk for the purchaser and by the auctioneer himself for the seller, may be an assurance within the Act requiring registration<sup>6</sup>.

An agreement by which a manufacturer, with a view to obtaining earlier payment for his goods, undertakes for the future to sell them at a discount to a sales company is not an assurance of personal chattels within the Acts, but merely regulates the terms on which goods will be sold in the future<sup>7</sup>.

The word 'assurances' would not, without more, embrace assignments of future property, since these convey nothing until the property is acquired by the grantor<sup>8</sup>. But the third limb of the statutory definition of 'bill of sale' includes such assignments so far as they take effect in equity and not at law<sup>9</sup>.

BILLS OF SALE/(2) DEFINITIONS COMMON TO SECURITY AND ABSOLUTE BILLS/(i) Meaning of 'Bill of Sale'/1646. 'Powers of attorney'.

1646. 'Powers of attorney'.

A power of attorney is a formal instrument by which one person, the donor of the power, confers on another, the donee, power to act on behalf of the donor in the performance of a specified act or classes of act or generally<sup>1</sup>. A power of attorney is within the Bills of Sale Acts<sup>2</sup> only where it confers the power, directly or indirectly, to take possession of personal chattels (as defined by the Acts)<sup>3</sup> as security for a debt<sup>4</sup>. If the debtor gives the creditor a power of attorney to execute a bill of sale in the name and on behalf of the debtor, the power of attorney is itself a bill of sale<sup>5</sup>, and, as the nature of the document is such that it cannot be made to accord with the statutory form for a security bill, the document is void<sup>6</sup>. The subsequent execution of a bill of sale by the grantee in the grantor's name pursuant to the purported power will therefore be nugatory<sup>7</sup>.

7 In Furnival v Hudson [1893] 1 Ch 335, it was held that the court would not grant an injunction to restrain the execution of a bill of sale in proper form by the grantee in the name of the grantor pursuant to a power of attorney given by the latter. However, argument in that case was directed solely to the question whether a bill of sale could be executed under a power of attorney and, if so, whether the grantee could be the attorney. The court answered both questions in the affirmative, but the point was not taken that the power of attorney was itself void as constituting a bill of sale not in accordance with the statutory form. Had this point been argued, the result of the case would almost certainly have been different. As to the statutory form see PARA 1711.

'Authorities or licences to take possession'.

1647. 'Authorities or licences to take possession'.

Licences to take possession otherwise than as security for a debt are not bills of sale<sup>1</sup>. However, a licence or authority in writing to take possession as security for a debt is within the Bills of Sale Acts<sup>2</sup> even if the intention is to secure a future debt and no debt exists at the time when the authority or licence is given<sup>3</sup>. A licence to sell has been said to import a licence to seize<sup>4</sup>, but, if possession is given to the grantee at the time of the licence, the Acts will not apply, because they only operate in cases where the grantor remains in possession<sup>5</sup>. Hence a document recording the terms on which goods have been pledged is not within the Acts, the pledgee's power over the goods deriving from his possession, not from the document<sup>6</sup>. Similarly, a licence to the grantee to retain goods already in his possession, or to sell such goods, is not within the Acts<sup>7</sup>.

6 The position is otherwise, of course, if the document is executed before the delivery of possession and confers a right to take possession. In such a case the Acts will apply to the document (see PARA 1640), and, if the document is void for non-compliance with the Acts, the grantee will not be able to rely on it as authorising him to seize the goods and will thus not be able to perfect his title by taking possession unless he reaches a subsequent independent agreement with the grantor empowering him to do so: see PARA 1634.

1649. Vesting clauses in building contracts.

A provision in a building contract that all materials brought on to the site by the contractor shall become the property of the building owner, whether the vesting is expressed to take effect immediately or only on default by the contractor, does not make the contract a bill of sale<sup>1</sup>. It is outside the first limb of the statutory definition since it is not an 'assurance' of personal chattels<sup>2</sup>, the word 'assurances' being required to be construed ejusdem generis with the preceding words<sup>3</sup>. It is not within the second limb of the definition<sup>4</sup>, as a licence to seize, even where expressed to become operative on default by the builder and to be provided as damages or in reduction of damages payable by him on his default, for damages do not constitute a debt and the licence to seize is thus not given 'as security for a debt' within the definition<sup>5</sup>. It is outside the third limb<sup>6</sup> because the bringing of the materials onto the land constitutes a new act which vests the materials in the building owner at law, not merely in equity<sup>7</sup>.

1650. Licences to seize in hiring, hire-purchase and conditional sale agreements.

The Bills of Sale Acts<sup>1</sup> are concerned with documents by which the owner of personal chattels grants to another a licence to seize them in stated events<sup>2</sup>. Hence the Acts do not apply to an ordinary hiring, hire-purchase or conditional sale agreement empowering the owner or seller of the goods to repossess them in the event of default, for in this case the licence to seize is given by the hirer or buyer, not by the owner, and merely empowers the owner to retake possession of his own property<sup>3</sup>. However, if a purported sale and hiring back is a disguised chattel mortgage, and there is no genuine hire-purchase agreement at all, the Acts will apply<sup>4</sup>.

BILLS OF SALE/(2) DEFINITIONS COMMON TO SECURITY AND ABSOLUTE BILLS/(i) Meaning of 'Bill of Sale'/1651. Agreements.

1651. Agreements.

An agreement, whether intended or not to be followed by the execution of any other instrument, by which a right in equity to any personal chattels<sup>1</sup>, or to any charge or security thereon, is to be conferred is a bill of sale<sup>2</sup>. This part of the statutory definition did not feature in the Bills of Sale Act 1854 and is evidently intended to reverse decisions under that Act<sup>3</sup> to the effect that an assignment of future goods was not a bill of sale<sup>4</sup>. In consequence, such an assignment constitutes a bill of sale within the Bills of Sale Acts<sup>5</sup>, and it is to be inferred that future goods are to be considered articles capable of complete transfer by delivery so as to constitute personal chattels within the Acts, even though they would not have been so regarded for the purpose of the corresponding provision of the Bills of Sale Act 1854<sup>6</sup>.

A written agreement to give a bill of sale of existing goods was a bill of sale even under the Bills of Sale Act 1854<sup>7</sup>, which did not expressly mention this class of document, and it is within the express words of the Bills of Sale Act 1878<sup>8</sup>. Consequently such an agreement will not confer any rights over the goods unless it complies with the requirements of the Bills of Sale Acts<sup>9</sup>. However, where the agreement is given to secure a money payment, compliance with those requirements would seem impossible, as a mere agreement to transfer is not in accordance with the statutory form of a security bill, which requires an actual assignment; and failure to accord with the statutory form renders the instrument void<sup>10</sup>.

Where a written agreement to give a bill of sale is void for want of registration or compliance with the statutory form, it cannot form the basis of an action for specific performance, and any power of attorney which the agreement purports to confer, whether on the grantee or on anyone else, to execute a bill of sale in the name of the grantor is of no effect<sup>11</sup>.

An oral agreement to give a bill of sale is not within the Bills of Sale Acts<sup>12</sup>, nor is an agreement pursuant to which after-acquired property vests at law, and not merely in equity<sup>13</sup>.

1 As to personal chattels see PARA 1662 et seq.

2 See the Bills of Sale Act 1878 s 4; and PARA 1638. An agreement for a bill of sale is not in accordance with the statutory form, which embodies a completed transfer, and is therefore void: see the text and notes 3-13; and PARA 1711. As to the documents which are expressly excluded from the statutory definition of 'bill of sale' see PARA 1656 et seq.

4 See R v Greig [1931] VLR 413 at 440 per Cussen ACJ, Vict FC; and see PARA 1635. The new words added by the Bills of Sale Act 1878 would have no significance if construed to refer only to agreements to assign existing goods, as these were within the scope of the earlier legislation. The reference to agreements by which a right to a charge is conferred must also be taken to enlarge the meaning of 'power . . . to seize' in the Bills of Sale Act 1878 s 3; see PARA 1633.

6 See PARA 1635. However, this limb of the definition is confined to documents under which a right is conferred in equity. If the future goods will vest at law as potential property or because of some new act of transfer after acquisition, the document will not be within the statutory definition of 'bill of sale': see PARAS 1638, 1699.

BILLS OF SALE/(2) DEFINITIONS COMMON TO SECURITY AND ABSOLUTE BILLS/(i) Meaning of 'Bill of Sale'/1652. Instruments with power of distress.

1652. Instruments with power of distress.

Any attornment instrument or agreement, not being a mining lease, whereby a power of distress is given or agreed to be given by any person to any other person by way of security for any present, future or contingent debt or advance, and whereby any rent is reserved or made payable as a mode of providing for the payment of interest on such debt or advance, or otherwise for the purpose of such security only, is deemed to be a bill of sale of any personal chattels<sup>1</sup> which may be seized or taken under such power of distress<sup>2</sup>. The effect of this provision is that such an instrument must be registered as if it were a bill of sale, but being only 'deemed to be' a bill of sale, need not be in accordance with the statutory form<sup>3</sup>.

1653. Landlord's power of distress.

Mining leases are expressly excluded from the provisions set out above<sup>1</sup> and are thus not deemed to be bills of sale even if granted to reserve rent by way of security for a debt; and this exclusion extends to a power of distress in a mining lease on goods upon land or premises near to and worked with those demised<sup>2</sup>.

Apart from this exception, the powers of distress which exist at common law, or are reserved to landlords in any usual form of lease<sup>3</sup>, are not affected by the Bills of Sale Acts<sup>4</sup>. If, however, with the object of securing a debt, a power of distress is given in terms so general as to be outside the scope of ordinary leases or agreements between landlord and tenant, the instrument is to be deemed a bill of sale<sup>5</sup>. The essential test is whether the power of distress is inserted to secure the payment of a genuine rent for the demised premises<sup>6</sup> or to secure payment of a debt<sup>7</sup> or rent for premises other than those demised by the instrument conferring the power<sup>8</sup>.

Where a power of distress results in the lease being deemed a bill of sale, this affects the instrument only as regards the power of distress and does not alter the relationship of the parties as landlord and tenant or preclude the lessor from enforcing the covenants in the lease otherwise than by distress, as by bringing proceedings for possession for rent in arrear<sup>9</sup>.

1654. Indemnities against rentcharges, etc.

Although at one time some doubt existed, it is now declared by statute that a power of distress given by way of indemnity against a rent (or any part thereof) payable in respect of land, or against the breach of any covenant or condition in relation to land, is not and is not deemed ever to have been a bill of sale within the meaning of the Bills of Sale Acts<sup>1</sup>.

1655. Mortgages.

Before the Bills of Sale Act 1878 came into force<sup>1</sup>, an attornment clause inserted in a mortgage deed, though having the effect of conferring on the mortgagee an additional security by way of a power of distress on goods for both principal and interest<sup>2</sup>, was not on that account alone within the Bills of Sale Acts<sup>3</sup>. A mortgage containing such an attornment clause is now deemed to be a bill of sale for the purposes of the Bills of Sale Act 1878<sup>4</sup> so as to render the clause void<sup>5</sup>, and any distress under it unlawful, unless the clause has been registered under the Bills of Sale Act (1878) Amendment Act 1882 as a bill of sale<sup>6</sup>. This is so whether the distress is on the goods of the borrower or of a third party<sup>7</sup>, and whether the power of distress is express or conferred by law as incident to the demise<sup>8</sup>. The attornment clause is, however, void only to the extent of the power of distress it would otherwise have conferred: it remains fully effective to establish the relationship of landlord and tenant between the parties<sup>9</sup>.

The instrument is only 'deemed to be' a bill of sale of any personal chattels which may be seized or taken under the power of distress<sup>10</sup>. It, therefore, need not be in accordance with the statutory form; it is simply treated as if it were a bill of sale for the purpose of registration and, if not registered, is void as regards chattels which may be seized or taken under the power<sup>11</sup>.

It is, however, provided that a demise by a mortgagee in possession to the mortgagor at a fair and reasonable rent is not to be deemed a bill of sale<sup>12</sup>, although this does not give exemption where actual possession has not been taken by the mortgagee, and the inclusion of an attornment clause in the mortgage deed does not of itself make the mortgagee a mortgagee in possession for this purpose<sup>13</sup>. Thus, where a mortgagor under a mortgage with an attornment clause, being in arrear with interest, undertakes in writing to hold as tenant of the mortgagee at a fair rent, but the mortgagee is not at the time in actual possession, the intention being further to secure the mortgage debt and not to create a real demise, the instrument is a bill of sale, and, unless it has been registered, a distress levied by the mortgagee is avoided<sup>14</sup>.

In determining what is a fair and reasonable rent, the court will not make fine calculations, the statute being aimed not at leases at a genuine rent but at transactions where the rent fixed is so excessive, considering the nature of the property, as to lead to the conclusion that the lease was a mere device to enable the mortgagee to obtain an additional security<sup>15</sup>. However, the words of the statute cannot be ignored; and, whereas for bankruptcy purposes the essential question is whether the transaction is genuine or an attempt to evade bankruptcy law, the Bills of Sale Acts will apply to the lease if the rent is excessive, even if it is intended as a genuine rent and not as a means of further securing the loan made by the mortgagee<sup>16</sup>.

Exclusions from the statutory definition.

1656. Exclusions from the statutory definition.

The Bills of Sale Act 1878 provides that the expression 'bill of sale' does not include assignments for the benefit of the creditors of the person making or giving the same, marriage settlements, transfers or assignments of any ship or vessel or any share thereof, transfers of goods in the ordinary course of business of any trade or calling, bills of sale of goods in foreign parts or at sea, bills of lading, warehouse-keepers' certificates, warrants or orders for the delivery of goods, or any other documents used in the ordinary course of business as proof of the possession or control of goods, or authorising or purporting to authorise, either by indorsement or by delivery, the possessor of such document to transfer or receive goods thereby represented<sup>1</sup>. In addition, the Bills of Sale Acts 1890 and 1891 exempt certain letters of hypothecation relating to imported goods<sup>2</sup>, while other statutes remove various classes of security instrument from the operation of the Bills of Sale Acts<sup>3</sup>.

1 Bills of Sale Act 1878 s 4. Certain of the constituent elements of this exclusion are considered in PARA 1657 et seq. As to the documents which do comprise bills of sale for these purposes see s 4; and PARA 1638 et seq. Section 4 also provides for the exclusion of India warrants from the statutory definition, but these are now obsolete.

1657. Assignments for the benefit of creditors.

Assignments for the benefit of the creditors of the person making or giving the same are excluded from the statutory definition of 'bill of sale'<sup>1</sup>. To be within the exception such assignments must be available for creditors generally who choose to come in<sup>2</sup>, none being excluded from the benefits of the deed<sup>3</sup>. However, a deed of assignment is nonetheless for the benefit of creditors because a time limit is fixed within which they must accede<sup>4</sup>. If, however, the deed is for the benefit of certain creditors only, it is a bill of sale<sup>5</sup>, and so is a licence to seize given to a creditor with an authority to pay himself and other creditors out of the proceeds<sup>6</sup>.

An assignment of chattels to secure a composition is also within the exemption if it is for the benefit of creditors generally<sup>7</sup>.

1 See the Bills of Sale Act 1878 s 4; and PARA 1656. Such assignments are regulated by the Deeds of Arrangement Act 1914, as to which, and for the validity of deeds of arrangement as against creditors and in bankruptcy, see BANKRUPTCY AND INDIVIDUAL INSOLVENCY vol 3(2) (2002 Reissue) PARA 860 et seq.

BILLS OF SALE/(2) DEFINITIONS COMMON TO SECURITY AND ABSOLUTE BILLS/(ii) Documents Excluded from the Statutory Definition of 'Bill of Sale'/1658. Marriage settlements.

1658. Marriage settlements.

Marriage settlements are not bills of sale within the Bills of Sale Acts<sup>1</sup>. The exception includes instruments which create a trust for the purpose of carrying out provision for a marriage. Thus an informal ante-nuptial memorandum of agreement for a marriage settlement is excepted<sup>2</sup>, and a transfer of chattels after marriage in pursuance of an ante-nuptial contract is within the exception, as, for example, an assignment of chattels, acquired after marriage, in pursuance of a covenant contained in an ante-nuptial marriage settlement to transfer to trustees the settlor's after-acquired property<sup>3</sup>.

Post-nuptial settlements not made pursuant to an ante-nuptial agreement are not marriage settlements within the exception<sup>4</sup>. When they are carried out by means of absolute transfers, they require attestation and registration under the provisions of the Bills of Sale Act 1878<sup>5</sup>, but post-nuptial settlements do not come within the Bills of Sale Act (1878) Amendment Act 1882 unless they are assurances by way of security for the payment of money<sup>6</sup>.

1659. Transfers of ships.

Although any transfer of a registered ship<sup>1</sup>, or a share in such a ship, is required to be effected by a bill of sale satisfying prescribed requirements<sup>2</sup>, transfers or assignments of ships are not 'bills of sale' for the purposes of the Bills of Sale Acts<sup>3</sup> notwithstanding any requirement as to registration under the Merchant Shipping Act 1995<sup>4</sup>. The exception applies to a transfer or assignment of anything ordinarily called a vessel, and not only of what is technically so called, and includes a dumb barge worked by oars<sup>5</sup>, but not a mere boat<sup>6</sup>.

1 As to the registration of British ships see the Merchant Shipping Act 1995 Pt II (ss 8-23); and SHIPPING AND MARITIME LAW vol 93 (2008) PARA 245 et seq.

2 Transfers and assignments of ships and vessels are governed by the provisions of the Merchant Shipping Act 1995 s 16, Sch 1, which require a transfer of a registered ship to be by bill of sale satisfying the prescribed requirements (see Sch 1 para 2(1); the Merchant Shipping (Registration of Ships) Regulations 1993, SI 1993/3138; and SHIPPING AND MARITIME LAW vol 93 (2008) PARA 306 et seq). In this context, 'bill of sale' denotes an absolute transfer. A mortgage of a registered vessel must likewise be in the prescribed form (see Sch 1 para 7; and SHIPPING AND MARITIME LAW vol 93 (2008) PARA 318 et seq). See also PARA 1690.

BILLS OF SALE/(2) DEFINITIONS COMMON TO SECURITY AND ABSOLUTE BILLS/(ii) Documents Excluded from the Statutory Definition of 'Bill of Sale'/1660. Transfers in the ordinary course of business.

1660. Transfers in the ordinary course of business.

Transfers of goods in the ordinary course of business of any trade or calling<sup>1</sup> are excluded from the statutory definition of 'bills of sale'<sup>2</sup>, as are bills of sale of goods in foreign parts or at sea<sup>3</sup>, bills of lading, warehouse-keepers' certificates, warrants or orders for the delivery of goods, or any other documents used in the ordinary course of business as proof of the possession or control of goods<sup>4</sup>, or authorising or purporting to authorise, either by indorsement or by delivery, the possessor of such document to transfer or receive goods thereby represented<sup>5</sup>.

Whether a transfer is in the ordinary course of business must necessarily depend on the facts of the particular case and on business practice prevailing at the relevant time. Hence previous cases dealing with transfers in the ordinary course of business cannot be taken to lay down any absolute or unchangeable rule, as what may then have been a transfer in the ordinary course of business may have ceased to be normal through a change in business practice, and transfers at one time regarded as outside the ordinary course of business may now be considered to be within it.

A trust receipt<sup>6</sup> taken by a bank as a condition of release of documents of title to imported goods the purchase of which has been financed by the bank falls within this exception, as well as being excepted on other grounds<sup>7</sup>. Similarly, a letter of hypothecation over goods still in the possession of a third party<sup>8</sup>, such as a carrier or warehouse, is excepted, but it is doubtful whether a general letter of pledge or lien taken by a bank over its customer's future purchases in general, rather than an identified consignment of goods in particular, would be treated as within the exception<sup>9</sup>. Retention of title clauses are not of themselves within the exception<sup>10</sup>.

1     le the trade or calling of the grantor: R v Greig [1931] VLR 413 at 423 per Cussen ACJ, Vict FC. The word 'goods' in the phrase 'transfer of goods in the ordinary course of business' bears its normal common law meaning and thus covers industrial growing crops even though not at the date of the instrument of transfer capable of complete transfer by delivery so as to constitute personal chattels within the Bills of Sale Act 1878 s 4: Stephenson v Thompson [1924] 2 KB 240, CA.

2     As to the statutory definition see the Bills of Sale Act 1878 s 4; and PARA 1638 et seq.

3     See R v Townshend (1884) 15 Cox CC 466. As to the meaning of 'foreign parts' see PARA 1636.

4     The words 'any other documents used in the ordinary course of business as proof of possession or control of goods' are to be construed ejusdem generis with the preceding reference to 'bills of lading, warehouse keepers' certificates, warrants or orders for the delivery of goods': Ian Chisholm Textiles Ltd v Griffiths [1994] 2 BCLC 291, [1994] BCC 96.

5     See the Bills of Sale Act 1878 s 4; and PARA 1656. Section 4 also provides for the exclusion of India warrants from the statutory definition, but these are now obsolete.

6     A trust receipt is also termed a letter of trust. A letter of lien, also termed a letter of pledge, letter of charge and letter of hypothecation, is to be distinguished from a trust receipt in that it relates to future consignments generally rather than to an identified consignment of existing goods. See also the text and note 10.

7     See PARA 1661.

8     Re Hamilton, Young & Co, ex p Carter [1905] 2 KB 772, CA.

9     There is no authority on the point, but it is hard to see how a transfer of goods not yet in existence or acquired by the debtor can be a transfer in the ordinary course of business. It has been held that a general charge on future goods does not enjoy the separate exemption in favour of letters of hypothecation of imported goods. See PARA 1661.

1661. Hypothecations of imported goods.

An instrument charging or creating any security on or declaring trusts of imported goods given or executed at any time prior to their deposit in a warehouse, factory or store or to their being reshipped for export, or delivered to a purchaser not being the person giving or executing such instrument, is not to be deemed a 'bill of sale' within the meaning of the Bills of Sale Acts<sup>1</sup>. A trust receipt taken by a bank as a condition of release of documents of title to imported goods the purchase of which has been financed by the bank would, in addition to being excepted on other grounds<sup>2</sup>, fall within this exception if related to imported goods and otherwise fulfilling the conditions of the excepting provision<sup>3</sup>. The exception is, however, confined to instruments covering identified goods or an identified consignment of goods and does not extend to a general letter of charge over all goods from time to time to be imported by the pledgor<sup>4</sup>.

1662. The statutory definition.

The Bills of Sale Acts<sup>1</sup> relate only to personal chattels<sup>2</sup>, which term bears a special meaning. The Bills of Sale Act 1878 provides that the expression 'personal chattels' means goods, furniture, and other articles capable of complete transfer by delivery, and (when separately assigned or charged)<sup>3</sup> fixtures and growing crops, but does not include chattel interests in real estate, nor fixtures (except trade machinery as therein defined)<sup>4</sup>, when assigned together with a freehold or leasehold interest in any land or building to which they are affixed, nor growing crops when assigned together with any interest in the land on which they grow, nor shares or interests in the stock, funds or securities of any government, or in the capital or property of incorporated or joint stock companies, nor choses in action<sup>5</sup>, nor any stock or produce upon any farm or lands which by virtue of any covenant or agreement or of the custom of the country ought not to be removed from any farm where the same are at the time of making or giving of such bill of sale<sup>6</sup>.

BILLS OF SALE/(2) DEFINITIONS COMMON TO SECURITY AND ABSOLUTE BILLS/(iii) Meaning of 'Personal Chattels'/1663. Classes of personal chattels.

1663. Classes of personal chattels.

The definition of 'personal chattels' for the purposes of the Bills of Sale Acts<sup>1</sup> has the effect of dividing personal chattels into four classes of things: (1) goods, furniture and other articles capable of complete transfer by delivery; (2) growing crops, when assigned or charged separately from the land; (3) fixtures (other than trade machinery), when assigned or charged separately from the land; and (4) trade machinery, which, even if it would otherwise have constituted a fixture, is to be deemed personal chattels for the purpose of the Acts<sup>2</sup>. The subject matter of bills of sale within the Acts is confined to things which come under one or other of these four heads.

It will be seen that the definition of 'personal chattels' embraces unsevered growing crops and fixtures that could not, under the general law, be regarded as chattels at all<sup>3</sup>, but excludes from the definition farm stock and produce that would constitute personal chattels under the general law.

BILLS OF SALE/(2) DEFINITIONS COMMON TO SECURITY AND ABSOLUTE BILLS/(iii) Meaning of 'Personal Chattels'/1664. Relevance of statutory definition.

1664. Relevance of statutory definition.

The definition of 'personal chattels' in the Bills of Sale Act 1878 is applicable only for the purposes of the Bills of Sale Acts<sup>1</sup>. Thus growing crops or fixtures, though assigned, were held not to be goods within the former statutory provisions relating to reputed ownership in bankruptcy<sup>2</sup>. Again, it is only for the purpose of the Bills of Sale Acts that trade machinery is deemed to be personal chattels<sup>3</sup>, and the question whether goods have become fixtures, for the purpose of resolving conflicting claims by the owner of the goods and a person having an interest in the land to which they are claimed to have become affixed, is determined by common law principles<sup>4</sup>, not by reference to the Bills of Sale Acts.

The definition of 'personal chattels' is relevant to the applicability of the Bills of Sale Acts both in relation to absolute transfers and in relation to transfers by way of security, neither types of transfer being within the Act unless they include personal chattels as defined. In the case of security bills, however, the definition of 'personal chattels' has added significance in that a security bill, in order to accord with the statutory form prescribed by the Bills of Sale Act (1878) Amendment Act 1882<sup>5</sup>, must be confined to personal chattels<sup>6</sup>. Hence, where a security bill contains some personal chattels, so that the Bills of Sale Acts apply, the inclusion of items which are outside the definition of personal chattels, such as real property, chattels real or choses in action, renders the bill not in accordance with the statutory form and thus void except in relation to the items outside the definition<sup>7</sup>.

1665. Articles capable of complete transfer by delivery.

The first category of personal chattels defined for the purposes of the Bills of Sale Acts<sup>1</sup> comprises 'goods, furniture, and other articles capable of complete transfer by delivery'<sup>2</sup>. Under the Bills of Sale Act 1854, this phrase was held not to include growing crops, as, even if these were industrial growing crops so as to constitute goods at common law<sup>3</sup>, they were not goods capable of complete transfer by delivery in their unsevered state<sup>4</sup>. The current definition, however, now expressly covers growing crops when separately assigned or charged<sup>5</sup>.

The words 'capable of complete transfer by delivery' refer to the physical characteristics of the asset sought to be transferred, not to the ability of the transferor to deliver the asset, and the fact that the goods comprised in the bill are in the hands of a third party at the date of the transfer does not alter their character as goods capable of complete transfer by delivery<sup>6</sup>. Moreover, since the third limb of the statutory definition of the bill of sale is aimed at after-acquired property<sup>7</sup>, so far as vesting in equity and not at law<sup>8</sup>, what is relevant is the physical character of the asset as described in the bill, whether or not it is then owned by the grantor or, indeed, in existence at all. Thus a bill of sale assigning after-acquired property (whether or not in existence at the date of the bill) is a bill comprising goods capable of complete transfer by delivery, if the description of the property in the bill is wide enough to cover assets possessing this physical characteristic<sup>9</sup>. There appears to be no distinction in this respect between a bill covering both currently-owned and after-acquired property and a bill dealing exclusively with after-acquired property<sup>10</sup>.

1 ie the Bills of Sale Act 1878 and the Bills of Sale Act (1878) Amendment Act 1882: see PARA 1630.

2 As to the statutory definition of 'personal chattels' and the division of that definition into classes see the Bills of Sale Act 1878 s 4; and PARA 1662 et seq. Note, however, that the Bills of Sale Acts only apply where such chattels, though capable of complete transfer by delivery, have not actually been delivered (Brantom v Griffiths (1877) 2 CPD 212 at 214, CA) and do not affect transactions completed by delivery independently of any document. The term 'goods' embraces all personal chattels capable of physical possession: see Stadium Finance Ltd v Robbins [1962] 2 QB 664 at 676, [1962] 2 All ER 633 at 639, CA, per Danckwerts LJ, considering the meaning of 'goods' for the purpose of the Factors Act 1889 (in relation to which see AGENCY vol 1 (2008) PARA 148). Money, though excluded from the definition of 'goods' for the purpose of the Sale of Goods Act 1979 (see s 61(1); and SALE OF GOODS AND SUPPLY OF SERVICES vol 41 (2005 Reissue) PARA 30), constitutes personal chattels, whether used as currency or retained in specie as a collector's curio. Hence in theory it is possible to have a bill of sale of money, provided that it is identifiable, as by being kept separately in a chest or bag: Taylor v Plumer (1815) 3 M & S 562 at 570 per Lord Ellenborough. As regards money which is legal currency, though, such a bill would be of limited efficacy, since upon the money coming into the possession of a person taking in good faith and for value he would acquire title free from the bill: see Miller v Race (1758) 1 Burr 452 at 457-458 per Lord Mansfield; Clarke v Shee and Johnson (1774) 1 Cowp 197 at 200 per Lord Mansfield. Title deeds relating to land, though savouring of the realty, are nevertheless goods to the extent that they are possessed as pieces of parchment and wax, as opposed to mere indicia of title to land (Swanley Coal Co v Denton [1906] 2 KB 873, CA; Re Knight's Question [1959] Ch 381, [1958] 1 All ER 812); and a bill of sale can properly include title deeds as personal chattels if they are intended to be dealt with as such and not for the purpose of creating an equitable mortgage or charge on the land (Swanley Coal Co v Denton above).

3 See PARA 1670.

4 Brantom v Griffiths (1877) 2 CPD 212, CA. It has never been directly decided whether the words 'capable of complete transfer by delivery' govern the whole phrase 'goods, furniture and other articles' or whether they merely qualify 'other articles', but even if they are so confined, the effect appears to be that both 'goods' and 'furniture' have to be construed ejusdem generis with 'other articles capable of complete transfer by delivery', and thus to be confined to such articles: Brantom v Griffiths at 214 per Cockburn CJ.

10 The bill cannot, of course, transfer any interest over after-acquired property until acquisition but it constitutes an agreement 'by which a right in equity to any personal chattels, or to any charge or security thereon shall be conferred' for the purposes of the Bills of Sale Act 1878 s 4 (see PARA 1638 et seq).

Fixtures.

1666. Fixtures.

The expression 'personal chattels' does not include fixtures<sup>1</sup> (other than trade machinery<sup>2</sup>) when assigned together with a freehold or leasehold interest in any land or building to which they are affixed<sup>3</sup>. It is only when fixtures are separately assigned or charged<sup>4</sup> by the bill of sale that the Bills of Sale Acts<sup>5</sup> apply to them<sup>6</sup>. However, the Bills of Sale Act 1878 provides that no fixtures are to be deemed to be separately assigned or charged by reason only that they are assigned by separate words, or that power is given to sever them from the land or building to which they are affixed without otherwise taking possession of or dealing with such land or building, if by the same instrument any freehold or leasehold interest in the land or building to which such fixtures are affixed is also conveyed or assigned to the same person or persons<sup>7</sup>.

The effect of these statutory provisions, as regards fixtures other than trade machinery, is that: (1) a conveyance or mortgage of land which is silent as to fixtures does not constitute a separate assignment of the fixtures even though at common law these effectively pass under the conveyance as part of the land<sup>8</sup>; (2) fixtures included in a conveyance or mortgage of land<sup>9</sup> do not constitute personal chattels even if they are assigned by separate words and even if power is given to the purchaser or mortgagee to sever them or sell them separately from the land<sup>10</sup>; (3) a conveyance or mortgage of fixtures alone without land always constitutes a separate assignment, even if by a contemporaneous conveyance or mortgage the land to which they are affixed is conveyed or mortgaged to the same person<sup>11</sup> unless it is confined to fixed motive-powers, fixed power machinery and steam, gas or water pipes used in or attached to a factory or workshop, all of which are specifically excluded from the definition of personal chattels<sup>12</sup>; (4) the fact that other goods are assigned with them will not by itself preclude fixtures from being regarded as separately assigned<sup>13</sup>.

Where fixtures are separately assigned, they constitute personal chattels for the purpose of the Bills of Sale Acts even though at common law they would be considered part of the land; and whereas, as previously stated<sup>14</sup>, ordinary goods are outside the definition of personal chattels unless capable of complete transfer by delivery, this qualification does not apply to fixtures.

1 Fixtures are articles which have become affixed to land or buildings in such a way that they form part of the land, in accordance with the maxim that whatever is affixed to the soil belongs to the soil (quicquid plantatur solo, solo cedit), and lose their character as chattels: see generally LANDLORD AND TENANT vol 27(1) (2006 Reissue) PARA 172 et seq; MORTGAGE vol 77 (2010) PARA 195.

2 See PARAS 1667-1669.

3 As to the statutory definition of 'personal chattels' and the division of that definition into classes see the Bills of Sale Act 1878 s 4; and PARA 1662 et seq.

4 'Separately assigned or charged' means assigned or charged separately from the land to which they are affixed: Roberts v Roberts (1884) 13 QBD 794, CA.

5 Ie the Bills of Sale Act 1878 and the Bills of Sale Act (1878) Amendment Act 1882: see PARA 1630.

6 Where fixtures are separately assigned or charged, they will be personal chattels for the purpose of the Bills of Sale Acts (the words 'capable of complete transfer by delivery' (see PARA 1665) not qualifying this part of the definition) even if under the general law they would be regarded as part of the land and therefore as having ceased to be chattels. Hence, if fixtures constituting personal chattels for the purpose of the Acts are comprised in a bill of sale which for some reason is void in relation to them, it is not open to the grantee to claim that they nevertheless pass to him as fixtures under a mortgage of the land: Johns v Ware [1899] 1 Ch 359. Fixtures separately assigned or charged are personal chattels only for the purpose of the Acts and not for other purposes: see PARA 1662 et seq.

1667. Trade machinery deemed to be personal chattels.

In the case of trade machinery, the foregoing rules relating to fixtures<sup>1</sup> do not apply. Trade machinery, by which is meant machinery used in or attached to any factory or workshop<sup>2</sup> other than certain fixed machinery and effects which are specifically excluded<sup>3</sup>, is deemed to be personal chattels<sup>4</sup>, even though the machinery is not 'separately assigned' within the meaning of the Bills of Sale Act 1878; and any mode of disposition of trade machinery by the owner thereof which would be a bill of sale as to any other personal chattels is to be deemed a bill of sale within the meaning of the Act<sup>5</sup>.

1 See PARA 1666.

2 'Factory or workshop' means any premises on which any manual labour is exercised by way of trade, or for purposes of gain, in or incidental to the following purposes or any of them: (1) in or incidental to the making of any article or part of an article; (2) in or incidental to the altering, repairing, ornamenting or finishing of any article; or (3) in or incidental to the adapting for sale of any article: Bills of Sale Act 1878 s 5.

1668. Trade machinery excluded from definition of personal chattels.

Certain fixed machinery and effects are excluded from the statutory definition of 'trade machinery'<sup>1</sup>, and these are not deemed to be personal chattels within the meaning of the Bills of Sale Acts<sup>2</sup>, even though assigned separately from the land to which they are affixed, or assigned with land other than land to which they are affixed<sup>3</sup>. The machinery and effects so excluded are: (1) the fixed motive-powers, such as the water wheels and steam engines, and the steam boilers, donkey engines, and other fixed appurtenances of such motive-powers; (2) the fixed power machinery, such as the shafts, wheels, drums, and their fixed appurtenances, which transmit the action of the motive-powers to the other machinery, fixed and loose; and (3) the pipes for steam, gas and water in the factory or workshop<sup>4</sup>. A bill of sale may give an effective security over machines or effects so excluded although void as regards things within the definition of personal chattels<sup>5</sup>.

BILLS OF SALE/(2) DEFINITIONS COMMON TO SECURITY AND ABSOLUTE BILLS/(iii) Meaning of 'Personal Chattels'/1669. What constitutes an assignment of personal chattels as regards trade machinery.

1669. What constitutes an assignment of personal chattels as regards trade machinery.

A document dealing only with land and containing no reference to trade machinery will not be deemed to be an assignment of personal chattels simply because the land has trade machinery affixed to it which as a matter of law passes as part of the land by virtue of the conveyance<sup>1</sup>. In this respect there is no distinction between a disposition of leasehold property and a disposition of freehold property<sup>2</sup>. In order for the document to be caught as a bill of sale assigning personal chattels in the form of trade machinery, it must contain some specific provision covering that machinery showing an intention to deal with it separately as chattels. As regards machinery constituting a fixture<sup>3</sup>, the same principles apply as operated prior to the enactment of the Bills of Sale Act 1878 to determine whether a document was a separate assignment of fixtures<sup>4</sup>. The document will be regarded as showing an intention to deal with the machinery separately as chattels if it confers rights over the machinery beyond those that would pass as a matter of law on a conveyance of the land<sup>5</sup>. This will be the case if the document confers on the grantee a power to sever the machinery from the land or to sell or otherwise deal with it separately from the land<sup>6</sup>. The power may be expressly stated or it may be inferred from a reading of the instrument as a whole, as where the machinery is grouped with separate chattels so as to indicate that it may be dealt with in like manner<sup>7</sup>, but the mere inclusion of separate words of disposition relating to the machinery will not by itself make the document a bill of sale of personal chattels within the Bills of Sale Acts if the disposition does not confer on the grantee greater rights over the machinery than would pass at law on a conveyance or mortgage of the land<sup>8</sup>. In this respect, there is a distinction between a transfer of freehold land and a transfer of leasehold land. An outright, express assignment of trade machinery affixed to freehold land will not of itself carry more than would pass on a transfer of the land alone; but the assignor of a leasehold estate cannot transfer more than the term vested in him, so that, if he includes in his assignment a separate disposition of trade machinery which is not limited to the residue of the leasehold term assigned but is, for example, an absolute disposition of the machinery, this will constitute a separate dealing with the machinery as chattels so as to bring the document within the Bills of Sale Acts<sup>9</sup>.

A mortgage of land carries with it as a matter of law all fixtures annexed to the land, without express mention (see the Law of Property Act 1925 ss 62, 205(1)(ii); DEEDS AND OTHER INSTRUMENTS vol 13 (2007 Reissue) PARA 236; MORTGAGE vol 77 (2010) PARA 195); and this is so whether the mortgage is express or implied, as by deposit of the title deeds: Re Lusty, ex p Lusty v Official Receiver (1889) 60 LT 160; Williams v Evans (1856) 23 Beav 239. It has, however, been held that the mere fact that a mortgage enumerates only those classes of trade fixtures which are outside the Bills of Sale Acts (ie the Bills of Sale Act 1878 and the Bills of Sale Act (1878) Amendment Act 1882: see PARA 1630), and not those within the Acts, does not prevent the latter passing under the mortgage by operation of law. The enumeration is not by itself sufficient to justify the inference that the non-enumerated classes are intended to be excluded from the mortgage: Southport and West Lancashire Banking Co v Thompson (1887) 37 ChD 64, CA; Mather v Fraser (1856) 2 K & J 536.

As to the statutory definition of 'personal chattels' and the division of that definition into classes see the Bills of Sale Act 1878 s 4; and PARA 1662 et seq.

2 Meux v Jacobs (1875) LR 7 HL 481.

3 The other than the fixed motive-powers, and other machinery and effects excluded from the definition of trade machinery in the Bills of Sale Act 1878; see PARA 1668. If the trade machinery is not a fixture, an express assignment of it in the document will, of course, attract the operation of the Bills of Sale Acts, as without express mention the machinery would not pass under a conveyance or mortgage of the land.

4 These principles, though overridden by the Bills of Sale Act 1878 s 7 in relation to fixtures generally (see PARA 1666), continue to apply to such fixed trade machinery as falls within the definition of 'trade machinery' in s 5, as by that section such machinery is to be deemed personal chattels (see PARA 1667). It is, however, unlikely that these pre-1878 Act principles will normally operate, because in most cases fixed machinery will be within the exclusion contained in s 5 (see PARA 1668). If the machinery is not fixed, it will not, of course, pass merely by virtue of a conveyance of the land or buildings where it is situated but will require to be expressly mentioned or included in a group of chattels referred to in the deed.

BILLS OF SALE/(2) DEFINITIONS COMMON TO SECURITY AND ABSOLUTE BILLS/(iii) Meaning of 'Personal Chattels'/1670. Growing crops.

1670. Growing crops.

At common law, growing crops other than industrial growing crops were not goods until severance<sup>1</sup>, and even as regards industrial growing crops the Bills of Sale Act 1854 did not apply, as these were not considered goods capable of complete transfer by delivery<sup>2</sup>. Severed crops were always regarded as goods, and this remains the case<sup>3</sup>. As regards unsevered crops, the Bills of Sale Act 1878 largely assimilated these with fixtures, so that such crops will constitute personal chattels if separately assigned or charged<sup>4</sup>, but not otherwise. As in the case of fixtures<sup>5</sup>, an assignment or charge of growing crops by separate words, or containing a power to sever and sell them apart from the land, does not operate as a separate assignment if by the same instrument any freehold or leasehold interest in the land is also conveyed or assigned to the same person or persons<sup>6</sup>.

Where a document transfers or charges existing crops which have been severed or which, though unsevered, have been separately assigned or charged, the document will be registrable as a bill of sale unless: (1) the crops are industrial growing crops assigned by a transfer made in the ordinary course of business<sup>7</sup>; (2) they are farming stock or produce which by virtue of any covenant or agreement or custom of the country ought not to be removed from the farm<sup>8</sup>; or (3) the document is otherwise excluded from the definition of 'bill of sale'<sup>9</sup> or is exempt from the Bills of Sale Acts, for example as an agricultural charge<sup>10</sup>.

Accordingly, a transfer of industrial growing crops in the ordinary course of business falls within the exception in the Bills of Sale Act 1878 s 4 (see PARA 1666) (Stephenson v Thompson [1924] 2 KB 240, CA) even if they are transferred before severance.

BILLS OF SALE/(2) DEFINITIONS COMMON TO SECURITY AND ABSOLUTE BILLS/(iii) Meaning of 'Personal Chattels'/1671. Farming stock and produce.

1671. Farming stock and produce.

The statutory definition of 'personal chattels' expressly excludes stock or produce<sup>1</sup> upon any farm or lands which by virtue of any covenant or agreement or of the custom of the country<sup>2</sup> ought not to be removed from any farm where the same are at the time of making or giving of such bill of sale<sup>3</sup>. It would seem that, to the extent to which the prohibition against removal of produce, by agreement or custom, has been overridden by statute<sup>4</sup>, such prohibition is not effective to take the produce out of the definition of 'personal chattels', so that a bill of sale of produce which the grantor has a right to remove under the Agricultural Holdings Act 1986, notwithstanding any custom of the country or the provisions of the contract of tenancy or of any agreement respecting the disposal of crops or the method of cropping arable land, is within the Bills of Sale Acts unless exempt on some other ground, as, for example, an agricultural charge<sup>5</sup>.

The grantee of any bill of sale covering goods, chattels, stock or crop of any person or persons engaged or employed in husbandry on any lands let to farm is not permitted to take, use or dispose of any hay, straw, grass or grasses, turnips, or other roots, or any other produce of such lands, or any manure, compost, ashes, seaweed, or other dressings intended for such lands, and being thereon, in any other manner and for any other purpose than the grantor of the bill ought to have taken, used or disposed of the same if no such bill of sale had been granted<sup>6</sup>.

1 As to the statutory definition of 'personal chattels' and the division of that definition into classes see the Bills of Sale Act 1878 s 4; and PARA 1662 et seq. The phrase 'stock or produce' covers all movable property on or belonging to the farm (see Harvey v Harvey (1863) 32 Beav 441), and thus includes livestock, dead stock, movable tools or equipment and severed crops. But whilst in its ordinary connotation the word 'stock' would cover growing crops (Re Roose, Evans v Williamson (1880) 17 ChD 696; and cf the Agricultural Credits Act 1928 s 5(7); and AGRICULTURAL PRODUCTION AND MARKETING vol 1 (2008) PARA 1328), yet, in the context of the Bills of Sale Acts, crops appear to be within the exemption only if severed: Brantom v Griffiths (1876) 1 CPD 349. As to the Bills of Sale Acts (ie the Bills of Sale Act 1878 and the Bills of Sale Act (1878) Amendment Act 1882) see PARA 1630.

2 'Custom of the country' denotes not a custom from time immemorial in the strict legal sense but prevalent usage in the neighbourhood where the land is situated, being usage which has subsisted for a reasonable length of time: Williams v Lewis [1915] 3 KB 493 at 494 per Bray J; Tucker v Linger (1882) 21 ChD 18 at 34, CA, per Jessel MR. A common custom is that relating to the removal of away-going crops by an agricultural tenant: see AGRICULTURAL LAND vol 1 (2008) PARA 353 et seq. Apart from any applicable statutory provisions, the right of removal depends on custom, and the custom may be not that the outgoing tenant shall remove a standing crop but that this should be purchased by the incoming tenant at valuation. See, however, the Agricultural Holdings Act 1986 s 15(1); and AGRICULTURAL LAND vol 1 (2008) PARA 344. As to custom and usage see further CUSTOM AND USAGE.

3 See the Bills of Sale Act 1878 s 4; and PARA 1662. It would seem that the words 'covenant or agreement' do not extend to a covenant or agreement in the bill of sale itself: Teague v Farrell (1880) 6 VLR 480.

4 See the Agricultural Holdings Act 1986 s 15(1); and AGRICULTURAL LAND vol 1 (2008) PARA 344.

5 See PARA 1687.

BILLS OF SALE/(2) DEFINITIONS COMMON TO SECURITY AND ABSOLUTE BILLS/(iii) Meaning of 'Personal Chattels'/1672. Choses in action.

1672. Choses in action.

Choses or things in action are excluded from the definition of 'personal chattels'<sup>1</sup>. The term 'chose in action' embraces all rights of a kind enforceable only by action, not by possession<sup>2</sup>. In its current usage, the term covers not only rights in personam but also incorporeal property conferring rights in rem. It thus includes patents<sup>3</sup> and copyrights<sup>4</sup> as well as bills of exchange<sup>5</sup>, bills of lading<sup>6</sup>, debts<sup>7</sup>, shares and debentures in companies<sup>8</sup>, shares in a partnership<sup>9</sup>, policies of insurance<sup>10</sup> and legacies<sup>11</sup>. It has also been held to include the interest of a remainderman in chattels subject to a life interest<sup>12</sup>, but the conclusion that on that account the assignment of such an executory interest does not also constitute a transfer of personal chattels for the purpose of the Bills of Sale Acts does not appear to be warranted<sup>13</sup>.

The transfer of the owner's rights under a hire-purchase agreement is a transfer of a chose in action, because such assignment does not by implication carry ownership of the goods comprised in the agreement<sup>14</sup>. However, if title to the goods is expressly included in the transfer, the instrument will be a bill of sale covering personal chattels<sup>15</sup>.

The transfer of a bill of sale carries with it the ownership of the goods comprised in the bill and thus itself constitutes a bill of sale of personal chattels, not merely the transfer of a chose in action<sup>16</sup>. The assignment of the benefit of a charge on goods, though not itself transferring ownership<sup>17</sup>, conveys an equitable right over the goods and so constitutes a bill of sale of personal chattels<sup>18</sup>.

7 Although book debts are choses in action, a general assignment of trade debts, whilst not within the Bills of Sale Acts, must in certain circumstances be registered as if it were a bill of sale: see PARA 1854. 15 Re Isaacson, ex p Mason [1895] 1 QB 333, CA.

16 See PARA 1634 note 5. If, however, the bill so transferred is registered, the transfer neither requires to be registered as a bill of sale nor necessitates renewal of registration of the original bill (see the Bills of Sale Act 1878 ss 10, 11; and PARAS 1634, 1832).

17 This is because a charge does not involve the transfer of ownership but merely constitutes an incumbrance: see PARA 1679.

18 The exemption from registration conferred by the Bills of Sale Act 1878 s 10 will not normally apply, as this is confined to a transfer of a registered bill, and a charge on goods, being incompatible with the statutory form (see PARAS 1638, 1662 note 2), is not capable of effective registration.

5TH EDITION, PARAS 1620-2586)/7. BILLS OF SALE/(2) DEFINITIONS COMMON TO SECURITY AND ABSOLUTE BILLS/(iii) Meaning of 'Personal Chattels'/1673. Other property outside the definition of personal chattels.

1673. Other property outside the definition of personal chattels.

Apart from the exemptions, previously referred to, in respect of fixtures<sup>1</sup>, growing crops<sup>2</sup>, farming stock and produce<sup>3</sup> and choses in action<sup>4</sup>, the Bills of Sale Act 1878 excludes from the definition of 'personal chattels': (1) chattel interests in real estate<sup>5</sup>; and (2) shares or interests in the stock, funds or securities of any government<sup>6</sup>, or in the capital or property of incorporated or joint stock companies<sup>7</sup>. All these kinds of property would in any event fall outside the term 'personal chattels' even if not expressly excluded by the statutory provisions.

The list of exclusions from the definition of 'personal chattels' does not mention real property (other than fixtures)<sup>8</sup>, or incorporeal hereditaments<sup>9</sup>, but it is clear that, with the exception of fixtures separately assigned or charged<sup>10</sup>, these types of property do not fall within the expression 'personal chattels'.

1 See PARA 1666.

2 See PARA 1670.

3 See PARA 1671.

4 See PARA 1672.

5 As to the statutory definition of 'personal chattels' and the division of that definition into classes see the Bills of Sale Act 1878 s 4; and PARA 1662 et seq. The usual term for chattel interests in real estate is 'chattels real'. The most important of these are leaseholds: 2 Bl Com 386. Tenant right (ie the customary right of an outgoing tenant to be compensated for standing crops and for tillage and other acts of husbandry enuring for the benefit of the landlord or the incoming tenant (see AGRICULTURAL LAND vol 1 (2008) PARA 364)) is also a chattel real and outside the Bills of Sale Acts: Cochrane v Entwistle (1890) 25 QBD 116, CA. As to the Bills of Sale Acts (ie the Bills of Sale Act 1878 and the Bills of Sale Act (1878) Amendment Act 1882) see PARA 1630.

6 The specific reference to these forms of property in the Bills of Sale Act 1878 s 4 (see PARA 1662) is superfluous, as they are comprehended in the wider term 'choses in action' (see PARA 1672) referred to later in that provision.

7 See PARA 1657. As to the exemption from the Bills of Sale Acts of debentures and charges by companies see PARA 1684.

1674. Forms of security over goods.

Consensual security<sup>1</sup> over goods may take the form of a contractual lien, a pledge, a legal or equitable mortgage, or a mere equitable charge (or hypothecation)<sup>2</sup>. A person may make a declaration of trust by way of security but this is not an independent form of security, merely a particular type of equitable mortgage.

1 Security over goods may also be conferred by operation of law, as in the case of possessory and equitable liens.

2 See PARAS 1675-1680.

Halsbury's Laws of England/FINANCIAL SERVICES AND INSTITUTIONS (VOLUME 48 (2008) 5TH EDITION, PARAS 1-589; VOLUME 49 (2008) 5TH EDITION, PARAS 590-1619; VOLUME 50 (2008) 5TH EDITION, PARAS 1620-2586)/7. BILLS OF SALE/(3) SECURITY BILLS OF SALE/(i) Creation of Security over Goods/1675. Contractual lien.

1675. Contractual lien.

A contractual lien is a right given to a person by contract to detain goods of another to secure payment of charges arising from the delivery of goods for some independent purpose such as custody, storage or repair<sup>1</sup>. The contractual lien is often equated with pledge but differs from the latter both in nature and in effect. The two forms of security differ in their nature in that a contractual lien is exercised over goods deposited not (or not primarily) for the purpose of giving security but for some independent purpose such as described above, whereas in the case of pledge the sole or primary purpose of the delivery is to furnish security; and they differ in their effect in that a pledge carries with it an implied right of sale on default in payment whereas a contractual lien gives a mere right of detention unless otherwise agreed<sup>2</sup>.

1676. Pledge.

A pledge is a delivery of possession of goods to secure payment of money or the performance of some other obligation owed to the deliverer<sup>1</sup>. A pledge can only be created by the delivery of actual or constructive possession<sup>2</sup>, but once possession has been given with the intention to create a pledge no other formality is necessary, except in the case of a pledge taken by a pawnbroker to secure a regulated agreement within the Consumer Credit Act 1974<sup>3</sup>. A pledge does not by itself confer more than a possessory interest enforceable at law and carrying with it an implied right of sale in the event of default<sup>4</sup>; and, as the pledgee's rights over the goods stem from the delivery of possession, the mere fact that a document is executed setting out the terms on which possession is to be held does not attract the operation of the Bills of Sale Acts<sup>5</sup>.

Legal mortgage.

1677. Legal mortgage.

A legal mortgage of goods is a transfer of legal title to the creditor with an express or implied proviso for retransfer on redemption<sup>1</sup>. In order for a mortgage of chattels to take effect at law, the transfer must usually<sup>2</sup> be a present transfer, not merely an agreement for transfer, and it must relate to goods to which the transferor holds the legal title at the date of the transfer<sup>3</sup>. If these two conditions are satisfied, no further formality is necessary and the mortgage can be effected by word of mouth<sup>4</sup>. Almost invariably, a legal mortgage involves the passing of legal title from the mortgagor himself, but this is not essential, and a legal mortgage can be effected even where the mortgagor does not himself hold the legal title but directs a third party who holds it to transfer it to the mortgagee by way of security<sup>5</sup>.

1 See PARA 1622 note 6. As to legal mortgages see further MORTGAGE vol 77 (2010) PARAS 117, 187 et seq.

2 For the exceptional cases where a transfer of future goods can, upon their acquisition by the transferor, take effect at law without a new act, see PARA 1623.

3 The transferor need not, however, necessarily be the mortgagor himself: see the text to note 5.

5 See eg Maas v Pepper [1905] AC 102, HL. A bank taking an indorsed bill of lading from the seller as security for an advance of the price on behalf of the buyer usually does so by way of pledge, not mortgage, but there is nothing to prevent the transfer from being by way of mortgage if the parties so intend: Sewell v Burdick (1884) 10 App Cas 74, HL.

Halsbury's Laws of England/FINANCIAL SERVICES AND INSTITUTIONS (VOLUME 48 (2008) 5TH EDITION, PARAS 1-589; VOLUME 49 (2008) 5TH EDITION, PARAS 590-1619; VOLUME 50 (2008) 5TH EDITION, PARAS 1620-2586)/7. BILLS OF SALE/(3) SECURITY BILLS OF SALE/(i) Creation of Security over Goods/1678. Equitable mortgage.

1678. Equitable mortgage.

An equitable mortgage of goods is a transfer of equitable title to the creditor, or a declaration of trust in his favour, with an express or implied proviso for retransfer or termination of the trust on redemption. An equitable mortgage can be effected in one of two ways, namely by a present mortgage of an equitable interest or by an agreement to give a legal or equitable mortgage<sup>1</sup>.

An example of the first method is a second mortgage of goods where the first mortgage is a legal mortgage. The second mortgage is necessarily equitable in this case, as the effect of the legal mortgage is to divest the transferor of his legal title, leaving him only with an equity of redemption<sup>2</sup>. A transfer by way of equitable mortgage requires no consideration, being an assignment and not a contract<sup>3</sup>, but since it is ex hypothesi a transfer of an equitable interest it must be in writing in order to be effective<sup>4</sup>.

The second method of creating an equitable mortgage, namely by agreement to create a mortgage, rests on contract, not on assignment, and must therefore be supported by consideration or made by deed<sup>5</sup>. If at the time of the agreement the mortgagor has the legal title to the goods, or is able to procure its transfer by a third party, the agreement, if supported by consideration so as not to require to be by deed, may be made orally<sup>6</sup>, but, if at the date of the agreement the mortgagor can only make or procure a transfer of an equitable interest in the goods, the agreement must be in writing<sup>7</sup>. Where the mortgagor has not himself any interest in the goods, either legal or equitable, at the date of the agreement, and is thus agreeing to mortgage after-acquired property, the effect of the agreement is usually<sup>8</sup> to create an equitable interest attaching to the goods when they are acquired<sup>9</sup>, and as the agreement does not, at the time of its formation, relate to a presently existing interest, it must be supported by consideration<sup>10</sup> even if made by deed<sup>11</sup>. If consideration is given, the agreement need not, however, be in writing<sup>12</sup>.

1 As to equitable mortgages see further MORTGAGE vol 77 (2010) PARA 118 et seq.

2 This is because the legal ownership of chattels is indivisible: see PARA 1622 note 6. However, if the first mortgage is equitable, there is no reason why the second mortgage should not take effect as a legal mortgage.

3 See Kekewich v Manning (1851) 1 De GM & G 176; and EQUITY vol 16(2) (Reissue) PARA 642.

4 See the Law of Property Act 1925 s 53(1)(c).

5 A past consideration will not normally suffice: see CONTRACT vol 9(1) (Reissue) PARAS 738-739.

6 It is outside the Law of Property Act 1925 s 53(1)(c) since it is an agreement for the transfer of a legal title, not an equitable interest.

7 As being a disposition of an equitable interest within the Law of Property Act 1925 s 53(1)(c). The fact that the equitable owner of the goods has expressed himself as merely agreeing to transfer in the future, and not as making a present transfer, does not appear to exclude s 53(1)(c), as the agreement takes effect as a disposition in equity: see eg Oughtred v IRC [1960] AC 206, [1959] 3 All ER 623, HL.

1679. Charge.

A charge on goods (that is, a bare charge unaccompanied by an agreement for a mortgage) involves no transfer of ownership, but is merely an incumbrance on the goods, the chargee having the right to look to the goods to satisfy the debt due to him. A charge is thus necessarily equitable<sup>1</sup>. Since it rests on agreement and requires the assistance of the court to perfect it, a charge not made by deed requires consideration<sup>2</sup> but no other formality<sup>3</sup>. An agreement to give a charge, which itself amounts to a charge<sup>4</sup>, likewise requires consideration to support it unless made by deed<sup>5</sup>. Similarly, a purported charge on goods in which the chargor has no interest at the time of the charge is merely an agreement for a charge requiring consideration to support it<sup>6</sup>; and since it relates to an interest not yet in existence the fact that it is made by deed does not dispense with the necessity for consideration<sup>7</sup>.

1 Except as otherwise provided by statute, as in the case of a charge on loan by way of legal mortgage: see the Law of Property Act 1925 ss 85-87; and MORTGAGE vol 77 (2010) PARAS 104, 187 et seq. The terms 'charge' and 'mortgage' are frequently used interchangeably, and the former does not in all contexts bear its narrow technical meaning; see PARA 1686 note 3.

2 An equitable chargee cannot sell or appoint a receiver except by order of the court (Tennant v Trenchard (1869) 4 Ch App 537) unless the charge is by deed: Law of Property Act 1925 ss 101(1), 205(1)(xvi).

3 Rolleston v Morton (1842) 1 Dr & War 171. An equitable charge is not within the Law of Property Act 1925 s 53(1)(c) (see PARA 1678), as it merely creates an equitable interest and does not transfer an equitable interest.

BILLS OF SALE/(3) SECURITY BILLS OF SALE/(i) Creation of Security over Goods/1680. Declaration of trust.

1680. Declaration of trust.

A declaration of trust by way of security leaves the legal title, if he has it, in the debtor as trustee, the creditor obtaining beneficial ownership in equity by way of security<sup>1</sup>. No consideration is necessary<sup>2</sup>, and a declaration of trust of goods to which the trustee has the legal title may be made by word of mouth<sup>3</sup> or may even be inferred from conduct<sup>4</sup>. However, if the trustee's interest in the goods is purely equitable, the declaration of trust must be in writing<sup>5</sup>.

A trust receipt<sup>6</sup> of the kind taken by a bank as a condition of releasing pledged documents of title to imported goods appears to be sui generis. It is an instrument which preserves the efficacy of the pledge after the pledgee has parted with possession, whilst at the same time establishing a 'trust', which in this context denotes not a trust in the normal equity sense but a trust agency by which the pledgor holds the legal title to the goods<sup>7</sup> as fiduciary agent for sale<sup>8</sup>.

1 See TRUSTS vol 48 (2007 Reissue) PARA 644 et seq.

2 The trust is completely constituted by the declaration: Milroy v Lord (1862) 4 De GF & J 264 at 274.

3 Benbow v Townsend (1833) 1 My & K 506.

4 O'Flaherty v Brown [1907] 2 IR 416.

5 This is because the declaration of trust will then constitute a disposition of an equitable interest within the Law of Property Act 1925 s 53(1)(c) (see PARA 1678): Grey v IRC [1960] AC 1, [1959] 3 All ER 603, HL.

6 See PARA 1660.

7 I.e. the goods acquired under the contract of sale. The delivery of the indorsed bill of lading to the bank, if by way of pledge, does not pass the full legal title but only a legal possessory interest (Sewell v Burdick (1884) 10 App Cas 74, HL), though the fact that the pledgor requires the authority of the pledgee to dispose of the goods suffices to make the pledgee the 'owner' for the purpose of the Factors Act 1889 s 2 (in relation to which see AGENCY vol 1 (2008) PARA 148), so enabling a bona fide purchaser or another pledgee to exercise a claim over the goods free from the pledge in favour of the bank: Lloyds Bank Ltd v Bank of America National Trust and Savings Association [1938] 2 KB 147, [1938] 2 All ER 63, CA.

8 Re David Allester Ltd [1922] 2 Ch 211. It is perhaps more realistic to regard the pledgor as selling on his own account, as the sale takes place because he has negotiated the contract for his own purposes rather than because the pledgee is enforcing a power of sale (although the pledgor requires the authority of the pledgee to sell, and thus owes a duty analogous to that of an agent). Once the goods have been sold, however, the trust attaches to the proceeds as a normal trust.

1681. Acts not a code.

The Bills of Sale Acts<sup>1</sup> do not constitute a code, but are engrafted on to the common law, leaving rules of law and equity relating to the transfer or mortgage of goods intact except to the extent to which these are displaced by the statutory provisions<sup>2</sup>.

Nature of statutory control.

1682. Nature of statutory control.

Where a bill of sale within the statutory definition<sup>1</sup> is given by way of security for the payment of money<sup>2</sup> and confers on the grantee a power of seizure<sup>3</sup> over personal chattels<sup>4</sup>, the Bills of Sale Act (1878) Amendment Act 1882 imposes various requirements and restrictions on the grantee. In particular, the bill must usually be limited to goods of which the grantor is the true owner<sup>5</sup>; it must truly state the consideration for which it is given<sup>6</sup>, which must not be less than £30<sup>7</sup>; it must be in accordance with the appropriate form<sup>8</sup>; and it must be attested and registered in accordance with the requirements of the Bills of Sale Acts<sup>9</sup>. The Bills of Sale Act (1878) Amendment Act 1882 prohibits the grantee from seizing the goods comprised in the bill except for one or more of certain specified causes<sup>10</sup>, although the Act has nothing to do with the reasonableness or unreasonableness of the bargain between the parties<sup>11</sup>.

The restriction imposed by the Bills of Sale Act 1878 on successive bills<sup>12</sup> applies to security as well as absolute bills; and, as with absolute bills, any defeasance, condition or declaration of trust subject to which the bill is given must either be contained in the body of the bill or be written on the same paper or parchment therewith before registration and be truly set forth in the copy required to be filed<sup>13</sup>.

The effect of non-compliance with the statutory requirements varies according to which requirement is infringed<sup>14</sup>.

1 See PARA 1638 et seq.

2 The Bills of Sale Act (1878) Amendment Act 1882 is confined to bills of sale given by way of security for the payment of money: see s 3; and PARA 1631.

3 The Bills of Sale Acts (ie the Bills of Sale Act 1878 and the Bills of Sale Act (1878) Amendment Act 1882: see PARA 1630) do not apply if the instrument does not give such a power: see the Bills of Sale Act 1878 s 3; and PARA 1633.

14 See PARA 1712 et seq.

1683. Effect of valid security bill.

A valid security bill of sale<sup>1</sup>, duly registered, operates to transfer the legal title to the goods comprised in the bill<sup>2</sup>, with an express or implied proviso for retransfer on redemption<sup>3</sup>. In general, the legal title acquired by the grantee is valid against the world<sup>4</sup>, but there are certain situations in which a third party may subsequently acquire an interest free from, or ranking in priority to, the interest of the grantee<sup>5</sup>.

Except in those matters for which the Bills of Sale Acts<sup>6</sup> make provision, the rights and duties of the parties to a security bill are governed by the terms of the bill itself, if within the limits permitted by the Acts<sup>7</sup>, and by principles of law and equity applicable to mortgages, and in particular to mortgages of chattels<sup>8</sup>.

1 As to the statutory definition of 'bill of sale' see PARA 1638 et seq. As to bills of sale at common law see PARA 1620 et seq.

2 The statutory form of bill of sale, coupled with the requirement that it must relate to goods of which the grantor is the true owner (see PARA 1697), almost invariably results in a transfer of the legal title. The only situation where this will not be true of a bill complying with the Bills of Sale Acts (ie the Bills of Sale Act 1878 and the Bills of Sale Act (1878) Amendment Act 1882: see PARA 1630) is where, in addition to personal chattels owned by the grantor, it extends to those classes of after-acquired property which are permitted by the Bills of Sale Act (1878) Amendment 1882 ss 5, 6 (see PARA 1701). As to these, the grantee acquires no interest in them at all until they are acquired, and in the absence of any new act of transfer after that date his title is purely equitable (Holroyd v Marshall (1862) 10 HL Cas 191) except as regards the produce of or natural increase in property already owned by the grantor and transferred to the grantee under the bill (see PARAS 1623-1624). As to the meaning of 'personal chattels' see PARA 1662 et seq.

3 The statutory form (see the Bills of Sale Act (1878) Amendment Act 1882 s 9; and PARA 1711) contains no express proviso for retransfer on redemption, but it envisages the inclusion of such a proviso when referring to the insertion of terms providing for the defeasance of the security. In any event, a proviso for reassignment on redemption is implied in any mortgage by assignment, whether created by bill of sale or otherwise: see Johnson v Diprose [1893] 1 QB 512, CA; and see also PARA 1796.

4 See PARA 1805.

5 See PARA 1805 et seq.

6 Ie the Bills of Sale Act 1878 and the Bills of Sale Act (1878) Amendment Act 1882: see PARA 1630.

7 The inclusion of stipulations not permitted by the Bills of Sale Acts will usually vitiate the bill entirely, and not merely in relation to the offending terms: see PARA 1737 et seq.

8 See PARA 1786. A mortgage of goods differs in various respects from a mortgage of land. The former may be governed by the Bills of Sale Acts and is effected at law by an assignment of the goods, with an express or implied term for reassignment on redemption. The latter is outside the Bills of Sale Acts and can only take effect at law if granted by demise for a term of years absolute or by a charge by deed expressed to be by way of legal mortgage: see the Law of Property Act 1925 s 85(1); and MORTGAGE vol 77 (2010) PARAS 104, 190. A legal mortgage of goods, unlike a legal mortgage of land, does not create a legal interest concurrent with that of the mortgagor but divests the mortgagor of his legal title, transferring it to the mortgagee. It follows that there can be only one legal mortgage of chattels at any one time, whereas in the case of land an indefinite number of legal mortgages can subsist concurrently.

BILLS OF SALE/(3) SECURITY BILLS OF SALE/(iii) Charges Exempted from the Bills of Sale Acts/1684. Debentures of incorporated companies.

(iii) Charges Exempted from the Bills of Sale Acts

1684. Debentures of incorporated companies.

The Bills of Sale Act (1878) Amendment Act 1882 provides that nothing contained in it is to apply to any debenture issued by any mortgage, loan, or other incorporated company or by any limited liability partnership, and secured upon the capital stock or goods, chattels and effects of such company or a limited liability partnership<sup>1</sup>. The words 'other incorporated company' in the statutory provision are not limited to companies ejusdem generis with mortgage and loan companies<sup>2</sup>, but, even if so construed, would cover any incorporated company authorised to raise money on loan or mortgage<sup>3</sup>, including a company incorporated abroad<sup>4</sup>. A society, incorporated under the legislation relating to industrial and provident societies, though having corporate status by virtue of that legislation<sup>5</sup>, is not an incorporated company within the exemption conferred by the Bills of Sale Act (1878) Amendment Act 1882<sup>6</sup>; however, there is now a separate statutory exemption for charges by registered industrial and provident societies<sup>7</sup>.

Any document which is a debenture in the common acceptance of the term, or has the same legal effect<sup>8</sup>, and which is secured on chattels of the company issuing it is within the statutory exemption<sup>9</sup>.

1 Bills of Sale Act (1878) Amendment Act 1882 s 17 (amended by SI 2001/1090). However, a transfer by the mortgagee of a mortgage of the chattels of a company appears to be within the Bills of Sale Acts (ie the Bills of Sale Act 1878 and the Bills of Sale Act (1878) Amendment Act 1882: see PARA 1630): see Jarvis v Jarvis (1893) 63 LJCh 10. A charge by a company created or evidenced by an instrument which would have been registrable as a bill of sale if executed by an individual must be registered under the Companies Act 1985 s 395 (prospectively repealed) (see COMPANIES vol 15 (2009) PARA 1279): see s 396(1)(c) (prospectively repealed) (as to replacement provisions for ss 395, 396 see the Companies Act 2006 ss 860, 861, 870, 874).

2 Re Standard Manufacturing Co [1891] 1 Ch 627, CA, disapproving Jenkinson v Brandley Mining Co (1887) 19 QBD 568, DC.

3 Re Standard Manufacturing Co [1891] 1 Ch 627, CA.

4 The reported cases refer only to companies incorporated in a part of what was formerly the British Empire (Clark v Balm, Hill & Co [1908] 1 KB 667) and, more recently, Bermuda (NV Slavenburg's Bank v Intercontinental Natural Resources Ltd [1980] 1 All ER 955 at 975-976, [1980] 1 WLR 1076 at 1099 per Lloyd J, citing Clark v Balm, Hill & Co above), but there seems no reason why the exemption should not apply to a company incorporated under any foreign law.

5 See the Industrial and Provident Societies Act 1965 s 3; and PARAS 2394, 2416.

6 Great Northern Rly Co v Coal Co-operative Society [1896] 1 Ch 187; Re North Wales Produce and Supply Society Ltd [1922] 2 Ch 340 (cases on the earlier industrial and provident societies legislation).

7 See PARA 1686.

8 The term 'debenture', though well understood in the business world, is not legally precise. It has been said to embody any document creating or acknowledging a debt (Levy v Abercorris Slate and Slab Co (1887) 37 ChD 260 at 264 per Chitty J) but this is probably too wide. It would seem that all instruments of charge on a company's property are debentures, but that an unsecured debenture connotes an indebtedness which is intended to be of a more than purely temporary character. The exemption in the Bills of Sale Act (1878) Amendment Act 1882 s 17 is, of course, concerned only with debentures secured on personal chattels. See also note 9. As to the meaning of 'personal chattels' see PARA 1662 et seq.

9 Thus an agreement to give a debenture has been held to constitute a debenture, even though not itself in the usual form of a debenture: Levy v Abercorris Slate and Slab Co (1887) 37 ChD 260. A debenture trust deed, referred to in the older cases as a 'covering deed', is also a debenture: Richards v Kidderminster Overseers, Richards v Kidderminster Corpn [1896] 2 Ch 212.

BILLS OF SALE/(3) SECURITY BILLS OF SALE/(iii) Charges Exempted from the Bills of Sale Acts/1685. Other charges and securities by companies.

1685. Other charges and securities by companies.

The defining of 'debenture' for the purposes of the exception in the Bills of Sale Act (1878) Amendment Act 1882<sup>1</sup> is not crucial, since the courts have held that quite independently of that express exception any instrument of charge or other security issued by a company is outside the mischief against which the Bills of Sale Acts are aimed<sup>2</sup>, whether or not the charge is of a kind which is registrable under the Companies Act 1985<sup>3</sup>.

In certain earlier cases (see Brocklehurst v Railway Printing and Publishing Co [1884] WN 70; Jenkinson v Brandley Mining Co (1887) 19 QBD 568), where mortgages executed by incorporated companies were held void for want of registration under the Bills of Sale Acts, no account was taken of the registration provisions in the Companies Acts (as to which see PARA 1684), but the decisions in these cases are no longer a correct statement of the law. BILLS OF SALE/(3) SECURITY BILLS OF SALE/(iii) Charges Exempted from the Bills of Sale Acts/1686. Charges by industrial and provident societies.

1686. Charges by industrial and provident societies.

An instrument executed after 14 September 1967<sup>1</sup> by a registered industrial and provident society<sup>2</sup> with registered offices in England or Wales and which creates or is evidence of a fixed or floating charge<sup>3</sup> on assets of the society is not a bill of sale for the purposes of the Bills of Sale Acts<sup>4</sup>, and is not invalidated by the Acts, if an application for the recording of the charge is made in accordance with the statutory requirements<sup>5</sup>.

Instruments of charge executed before 14 September 1967, or executed at any time by a society whose registered offices are not in England or Wales, are not registrable under the Industrial and Provident Societies Act 1967<sup>6</sup>, and, if regulated by the Bills of Sale Acts, must be executed, attested and registered as required by the Acts.

<sup>3</sup> Except where statute otherwise provides, a charge on goods is to be distinguished from a mortgage in that a mortgagee has a proprietary interest in the goods, whereas a chargee has merely a right, in preference to other creditors, to look to the goods to satisfy the debt due to him: see PARA 1679. However, as was pointed out in London County and Westminster Bank Ltd v Tompkins [1918] 1 KB 515, CA, the terms 'mortgage' and

'charge' are not always used in their technical sense; and statutes and statutory instruments tend to use these terms interchangeably, according to the expression normally adopted in practice for the instrument in question, and it is accordingly thought that the word 'charge' in the Industrial and Provident Societies Act 1965 is used loosely and is intended to cover both mortgages and charges in their strict sense.

An agricultural charge, whether fixed, floating or both, created by a farmer in favour of a bank on all or any of his farming stock and other agricultural assets, has effect notwithstanding anything in the Bills of Sale Acts<sup>1</sup> and is not deemed to be a bill of sale within those Acts<sup>2</sup>.

1688. Floating charges by agricultural societies and agricultural marketing boards.

Debentures issued by a registered industrial and provident society<sup>1</sup>, creating in favour of a bank<sup>2</sup> a floating charge<sup>3</sup> on farming stock<sup>4</sup>, may be registered in like manner as an agricultural charge<sup>5</sup>, and if so registered are valid as respects such property notwithstanding anything in the Bills of Sale Acts<sup>6</sup> and are not deemed to be bills of sale within those Acts<sup>7</sup>. Similar provisions apply to debentures issued by an agricultural marketing board in favour of a bank creating a floating charge on farming stock in England or Wales the property in which is vested in the board<sup>8</sup>.

1689. Mortgages of aircraft.

Any mortgage of an aircraft<sup>1</sup> registered in the United Kingdom nationality register maintained by the Civil Aviation Authority may be entered in the register of aircraft mortgages<sup>2</sup>. The Bills of Sale Acts<sup>3</sup>, in so far as they relate to bills of sale<sup>4</sup> and other documents given by way of security for the payment of money, do not apply to any mortgage of an aircraft registered in the United Kingdom nationality register which is made on or after 1 October 1972<sup>5</sup>. This exemption is not dependent on registration of the mortgage in the register of aircraft mortgages, but failure to register the mortgage may result in its being subordinated to a subsequent mortgage which is registered<sup>6</sup>.

1 For this purpose, 'mortgage of an aircraft' includes a mortgage which extends to any store of spare parts for that aircraft but does not otherwise include a mortgage created as a floating charge: see the Mortgaging of Aircraft Order 1972, SI 1972/1268, art 2(2). As to the distinction between a charge and a mortgage see PARA 667 note 3.

In deciding whether a bill of sale<sup>1</sup> is given by way of security for the payment of money so as to fall within the Bills of Sale Act (1878) Amendment Act 1882, the court looks at the real nature of the transaction<sup>2</sup> and if a document, though purporting to be an absolute transfer, is in fact given by way of security, the Bills of Sale Act (1878) Amendment Act 1882 will apply to it<sup>3</sup>, unless it is a document which is exempt from the Bills of Sale Acts<sup>4</sup> altogether<sup>5</sup>.

BILLS OF SALE/(3) SECURITY BILLS OF SALE/(iv) Sale and Supply Back/1692. Sales with hiring back or repurchase.

1692. Sales with hiring back or repurchase.

The most common method by which a party wishing to lend money on the security of another's goods seeks to avoid the Bills of Sale Acts<sup>1</sup> is to buy the goods and supply them back to the seller under a hire-purchase or conditional sale agreement containing a power to repossess the goods in the event of default in payment or breach of any other terms stipulated in the agreement. The effect of the two transactions is that the original owner of the goods receives a sum of money which he repays by instalments, repayment being secured by a right of seizure over the goods. In the result, the parties to such an accommodation transaction are in much the same position as if the original owner had mortgaged the goods to secure repayment of a loan, which is precisely the type of document against which the Bills of Sale Acts are aimed. Where the transaction is a sham, in that the documents do not truly record the agreement of the parties, it will be struck down as a disguised chattel mortgage<sup>2</sup>, with all the consequences thereby entailed<sup>3</sup>: indeed, even if the documents truly record the agreement between the parties for a sale and supply back the court may conclude that by reason of its terms and the other circumstances it is in substance a chattel mortgage<sup>4</sup>.

1693. Sham transactions.

The validity of a sale followed by a hire-purchase or conditional sale back to the original seller is usually attacked on the ground that the documents are a sham, the parties never intending that beneficial ownership should pass from the seller to the buyer under the purported contract of sale<sup>1</sup>. If the documents are genuine, the Bills of Sale Acts<sup>2</sup> will not normally apply even though the avowed intention of the parties, in selecting this procedure, was to avoid the Acts<sup>3</sup>. If on the other hand, the documents are a sham, and the court finds that the parties never intended that the purported seller should be divested of beneficial ownership of the goods, the alleged hire-purchase agreement will constitute a security bill of sale for the purpose of the Acts<sup>4</sup>, assuming that the Acts would have applied to the transaction if openly carried out as a mortgage<sup>5</sup>.

The same principle applies where the reverse supply is not to the original seller but to his nominee<sup>6</sup>, where the sale purports to be by a third party but is in truth a sale of goods belonging to the intended borrower which he has allowed a third party to represent as his own<sup>7</sup>, or where, instead of the buyer himself supplying the goods back on hire-purchase or conditional sale to the seller, the buyer resells to a finance house which then supplies them to the original seller under a hire-purchase or conditional sale agreement<sup>8</sup>.

The principle is not confined to situations in which the intended borrower already owns the goods, but extends to cases where the borrower, wishing to acquire goods with the aid of a loan to be secured on the goods, arranges with the intended lender that the lender will buy the goods and let them to the borrower on hire-purchase. Such a transaction is the normal method by which a finance house extends hire-purchase facilities, and where the documents are genuine they will not be within the Bills of Sale Acts. If, however, the court concludes that the supposed buyer was never intended to buy on his own account but purchased the goods as nominee or trustee of the supposed hirer, the purported hire-purchase agreement being a mere device to secure repayment, the agreement will be void as contravening the Bills of Sale Acts<sup>9</sup>.

5 It is conceivable that in some situations the Bills of Sale Acts would be held to apply even where they would not have done so had the true nature of the transaction been openly recorded. For example, a mortgage of goods, described as such, may be exempt as a transfer of goods made in the ordinary course of business (see PARA 1660) but the effect of disguising it as a sale and hiring back may be to convert it into a form of transaction that would not be considered a transfer in the ordinary course of business.

1694. Test of a sham transaction.

Whether the documents employed in a sale and hiring back are to be regarded as genuine or a sham may be a question of considerable difficulty, the determination of which ultimately depends entirely on the inferences drawn by the court from the facts and the documents. That the sale and letting back on hire-purchase were linked, and not two unconnected transactions, is a factor to be taken into account but is in no sense conclusive<sup>1</sup>.

Other features which the court will view with suspicion are:

159 (1) that a party who is in a position to give evidence as to the facts is not called as a witness<sup>2</sup>;

160 (2) that a receipt is produced showing the payment of a sum of money when in fact no cash passed<sup>3</sup>;

- 161 (3) that the purported sale price was fixed not by reference to the market price or value of the goods but by reference to the sum required to discharge the seller's liability on another transaction<sup>4</sup> or was otherwise tailored to his financial requirements<sup>5</sup>;
- 162 (4) that the sale did not take place until after the seller had signed the hire-purchase agreement<sup>6</sup>; and
- 163 (5) that the agreement contains oppressive powers unlikely to be found in a normal hire-purchase agreement<sup>7</sup>.

BILLS OF SALE/(3) SECURITY BILLS OF SALE/(iv) Sale and Supply Back/1696. Consequences of sale and supply back being held a bill of sale.

1696. Consequences of sale and supply back being held a bill of sale.

If, looking at the substance of the transaction, a sale with supply back is found to be in truth a security bill of sale<sup>1</sup>, it will inevitably be void, not merely as regards the chattels, for want of registration under the Bills of Sale Acts<sup>2</sup>, but also as to the personal covenants in the bill, since it will not be in accordance with the statutory form<sup>3</sup>. As the supposed sale preceding the agreement will ex hypothesi have been held a sham or otherwise ineffective as a sale<sup>4</sup> the result is that the property in the goods will never have passed to the 'buyer' under the original 'sale', and he will have neither title to the goods nor a valid security interest in them<sup>5</sup>. The terms as to payment and other obligations imposed by the hire-purchase or conditional sale agreement will be nugatory, and the 'owner' or 'seller' under that agreement (that is, the original 'buyer') will be treated as a lender/mortgagee and restricted to a restitutionary claim for the repayment of his advance, with reasonable interest, in an action for money had and received<sup>6</sup>. Even this relief will be denied him if the agreement constitutes a regulated consumer credit agreement within the Consumer Credit Act 1974, for almost certainly it will not comply with the formalities prescribed by the Act and regulations under it, and the agreement will therefore constitute an improperly executed agreement and be unenforceable except on an order of the court<sup>7</sup>.

BILLS OF SALE/(3) SECURITY BILLS OF SALE/(v) Who may Grant Security Bills/1697. Grantor must be true owner.

(v) Who may Grant Security Bills

1697. Grantor must be true owner.

Subject to certain exceptions<sup>1</sup>, a security bill of sale<sup>2</sup> is void, except as against the grantor, in respect of any personal chattels<sup>3</sup> specifically described in the schedule to the bill of which the grantor was not the true owner at the time of the execution of the bill<sup>4</sup>. This provision, with the marginal note including the words 'after acquired property'<sup>5</sup>, embraces not only bills of sale which by their terms deal with property to be acquired by the grantor in the future, which property may or may not be in existence, but existing property which the grantor is purporting to transfer as owner but to which he does not in fact have title. Indeed, it is to this latter category of bill that the provision is most likely to apply, since it is confined to bills of after-acquired chattels specifically described in the schedule to the bill, and a bill which is expressed to cover after-acquired property is unlikely to contain a description of that property sufficiently specific to attract the operation of the provision.

It would seem<sup>6</sup> that the Bills of Sale Acts<sup>7</sup> apply even to a document which is confined to after-acquired chattels<sup>8</sup>.

Meaning of 'true owner'.

1698. Meaning of 'true owner'.

The grantor is the true owner for the purpose of the provisions regulating the granting of security bills of sale<sup>1</sup>: (1) if he holds the legal title to the goods, even though beneficial ownership is in another<sup>2</sup>; (2) if he is beneficially entitled to the goods, even though the legal title is in another<sup>3</sup>; or (3) if the real owner, though not the grantor himself, has held out the grantor to be the true owner and is thus estopped from denying the validity of the bill<sup>4</sup>. If the grantor holds goods as joint tenant or tenant in common or as a partner, he is the true owner to the extent of his interest, and, even though the bill is not expressed to be limited to that interest, the provision requiring the grantor to be the true owner will be considered as complied with and the bill will be effective to transfer to the grantee that interest which the grantor in fact has<sup>5</sup>.

A bill of sale contravenes the provision, however, where it is made jointly by two grantors in relation to goods which are not jointly owned by them but of which some belong to one grantor and some to the other<sup>6</sup>, or where two persons as joint grantors purport to assign chattels which are the sole property of one of them<sup>7</sup>.

A grantor whose title to the goods is voidable, as where the disposition to him was in fraud of creditor<sup>8</sup> or was induced by his fraud or misrepresentation<sup>9</sup>, is nevertheless the true owner for the purpose of the provision if at the date of execution of the bill his title has not been avoided<sup>10</sup>.

A grantor who, prior to execution of the bill, has parted with the goods by an outright disposition, so that he no longer holds an interest in them at the date of the bill, is not the true owner<sup>11</sup>, but, if he has merely mortgaged the goods, for example under a prior security bill of sale, he remains the true owner by virtue of his equity of redemption<sup>12</sup>.

A person holding goods as hirer under a hire-purchase agreement is not the owner for the purpose of the provision<sup>13</sup>, and the same is true of a person holding as buyer under a conditional sale agreement<sup>14</sup>.

It would seem also that the Bills of Sale Act (1878) Amendment Act 1882 s 5 will not prevent the grant of an effective security bill by a non-owner under statutory provisions based on estoppel such as the Factors Act 1889 s 2(1) (see AGENCY vol 1 (2008) PARA 148). If registration of a security bill expires without renewal, the grantor again becomes the legal owner and as such can pass a full legal title under a fresh bill: Fenton v Blythe (1890) 25 QBD 417, DC. This is not the case where the unrenewed bill is an absolute bill, since the Bills of Sale Act (1878) Amendment Act 1882 does not apply to an absolute bill (see PARA 1631), and failure to renew registration of an absolute bill merely renders the bill void against the classes of person mentioned in the Bills of Sale Act 1878 s 8 (see PARA 1849), which do not include the grantor himself. Hence the grantee's failure to renew registration of an absolute bill does not enable the grantor to grant a subsequent security bill as owner, since ownership does not revert in him.

Exceptions to requirement of ownership.

1699. Exceptions to requirement of ownership.

The requirement of the Bills of Sale Act (1878) Amendment Act 1882 that the grantor must be the true owner at the time of execution of the bill of sale<sup>1</sup> does not apply in respect of (1) any growing crops separately assigned or charged<sup>2</sup> where such crops were actually growing at the time when the bill was executed<sup>3</sup>; or (2) any fixtures separately assigned or charged<sup>4</sup>, and any plant<sup>5</sup> or trade machinery<sup>6</sup>, where such fixtures, plant or trade machinery are used in, attached to or brought upon any land, farm, factory, workshop<sup>7</sup>, shop, house, warehouse, or other place in substitution for any of the like fixtures, plant, or trade machinery specifically described in the schedule to the bill of sale<sup>8</sup>. Hence a bill may validly embrace after-acquired fixtures, plant and trade machinery if these are in substitution for like articles specifically described in the bill<sup>9</sup>, but not if they are in addition to such articles<sup>10</sup>.

Quite independently of the express statutory exemption described above, a bill of sale may provide for the replacement of articles damaged or worn out, and for the assignment to the grantee of goods substituted for them, a provision to this effect being permitted as being for the maintenance of the security<sup>11</sup> and therefore being in accordance with the statutory form, which expressly requires the insertion of terms agreed for the maintenance of the security<sup>12</sup>.

1 See PARAS 1697-1698. As to the statutory definition of 'bill of sale' see PARA 1638 et seq. As to bills of sale at common law see PARA 1620 et seq.

2 I.e. assigned or charged separately from the land on which they are growing: Roberts v Roberts (1884) 13 QBD 794, CA. See further PARA 1670. If assigned or charged as part of the land, growing crops are not personal chattels within the meaning of the Bills of Sale Acts (see PARA 1662 et seq), so that the Acts do not apply to them at all: see PARA 1687. As to the Bills of Sale Acts (i.e. the Bills of Sale Act 1878 and the Bills of Sale Act (1878) Amendment Act 1882) see PARA 1630.

3 If the document relates to future crops to be grown on land owned by the grantor at the date of execution of the document, it will not be a bill of sale within the Bills of Sale Acts at all. The first two limbs of the statutory definition of 'bill of sale' will not apply, as the document is not an assurance of goods capable of complete transfer by delivery at the time of execution of the document (see Brantom v Griffiths (1877) 2 CPD 212, CA; and PARAS 1635, 1638); and the document is not within the third limb (relating to agreements conferring a right in equity over goods) since the future crops are potential property which on coming into existence vests at law and not in equity (see PARAS 1623, 1638).

4 See PARA 1666.

5 The classic definition of 'plant' is that given by Lindley LJ in Yarmouth v France (1887) 19 QBD 647 at 658, DC: 'It includes whatever apparatus is used by a business man for carrying on his business--not his stock-in-trade which he buys or makes for sale; but all goods and chattels, fixed or movable, live or dead, which he keeps for permanent employment in his business'. This definition has been frequently adopted in income tax cases: see McVeigh (Inspector of Taxes) v Arthur Sanderson & Sons Ltd [1969] 2 All ER 771, [1969] 1 WLR 1143; Rose & Co (Wallpaper and Paints) Ltd v Campbell [1968] 1 All ER 405, [1968] 1 WLR 346; Jarrold (Inspector of Taxes) v John Good & Sons Ltd [1963] 1 All ER 141, [1963] 1 WLR 214, CA; Attwood (Inspector of Taxes) v Anduff Car Wash Ltd [1996] STC 110 (affd [1997] STC 1167, CA); and INCOME TAXATION vol 23(1) (Reissue) PARA 296 et seq. 'Plant' thus includes tools, appliances, apparatus and even animals used in carrying on trade upon particular premises, eg a horse used for turning a mill: see London and Eastern Counties Loan and Discount Co v Creasey [1897] 1 QB 768 at 771, CA, per Chitty LJ. But see note 8.

6 As to the meaning of 'trade machinery' see PARA 1667.

7 As to the meaning of 'factory or workshop' see PARA 1667 note 2.

8 Bills of Sale Act (1878) Amendment Act 1882 s 6. The words 'or other place' must be construed ejusdem generis with the preceding words, so that the section is confined to plant, etc., in some specific locality and not, for example, cab-horses used in the street: London and Eastern Counties Loan and Discount Co v Creasey [1897] 1 QB 768, CA. It would seem that to be within the exemption in the Bills of Sale Act (1878) Amendment Act 1882 s 6 the substituted articles must be those brought on by the grantor, and a bill expressed to cover substituted articles brought on by the grantee would not be exempt: see Great West Liquor Co v Colquhoun (1914) 17 DLR 568 (Alta).

9 The bill of sale, when covering after-acquired property, must expressly limit this to substituted articles of the kind described in the Bills of Sale Act (1878) Amendment Act 1882 s 6 or such other articles as are necessary for the maintenance of the security (see the text and notes 10-12) as otherwise it will infringe s 5 (see PARA 1697).

1700. Accessions.

Accessions to chattels assigned by a bill of sale<sup>1</sup> vest automatically in the grantee by operation of law, whether they are accessions arising by physical attachment or by natural increase<sup>2</sup>. Where such accessions are left to vest in this way and are not mentioned in the bill, no question either of infringement of the 'true owner' requirement of the Bills of Sale Act (1878) Amendment Act 1882<sup>3</sup> or of non-compliance with the statutory form<sup>4</sup> arises. If, however, accessions are expressly referred to in the bill, then whilst the 'true owner' requirement has no impact on them, since it is only the bill that is affected and the accessions vest independently of the document, the bill becomes void as not being in conformity with the statutory form<sup>5</sup>. This would appear to be the case whether the reference to the accession is contained in the body of the bill or in the schedule<sup>6</sup>.

1 As to the statutory definition of 'bill of sale' see PARA 1638 et seq. As to bills of sale at common law see PARA 1620 et seq.

2 As to the acquisition of goods by accession see PERSONAL PROPERTY vol 35 (Reissue) PARA 1238. If the bill is void, however, the property in the goods comprised in it will not pass to the grantee, and the accession will thus not vest in him, in the absence of some subsequent effective transfer.

4 As to the statutory form see the Bills of Sale Act (1878) Amendment Act 1882 s 9, Schedule; and PARA 1711.

5 See PARA 1701. The result is that the grantee does not acquire an effective interest in the principal goods or in the accession: see note 2.

BILLS OF SALE/(3) SECURITY BILLS OF SALE/(v) Who may Grant Security Bills/1701. Effect of bill not being granted by true owner.

1701. Effect of bill not being granted by true owner.

By reason of the requirement that the grantor must be the true owner of the personal chattels<sup>1</sup>, a security bill of sale<sup>2</sup> covering after-acquired personal chattels specifically described in the schedule is void as to those chattels except as against the grantor; and, as regards after-acquired personal chattels not so described, the same effect is produced by the requirement that those chattels must be so described<sup>3</sup>. However, both these requirements, which are inapplicable to certain substituted goods that are exempted<sup>4</sup> or necessary for the maintenance of the security<sup>5</sup>, are controlled by the overriding effect of the provision<sup>6</sup> by which a bill not in accordance with the statutory form is wholly void<sup>7</sup>.

If a reference to after-acquired chattels is included in the bill, whether in the body or in the schedule, the bill is rendered void as not being in accordance with the statutory form, which requires that the bill be confined to personal chattels capable of specific description<sup>8</sup>. To this requirement there are two exceptions. First, after-acquired chattels within the exception to the 'true owner' requirement<sup>9</sup> may be included in the bill, though these may only be described in the schedule, not in the body of the bill<sup>10</sup>, unless falling also within the second exception. Inclusion of such substituted goods in the schedule is to be regarded as permitted by the exception for certain after-acquired chattels even though the body of the statutory form itself refers only to goods 'specifically described' in the schedule, since goods within that exception must be taken to be specifically described for this purpose<sup>11</sup>. Secondly, provision for the replacement of lost, damaged or worn out goods by similar goods is for the maintenance of the security<sup>12</sup>, and such a provision requires to feature in the body of the bill, in accordance with the statutory form<sup>13</sup>, though there is no objection to a reference to such replacement goods in the schedule also.

BILLS OF SALE/(3) SECURITY BILLS OF SALE/(vi) Consideration/1702. The consideration for a bill of sale.

(vi) Consideration

1702. The consideration for a bill of sale.

The Bills of Sale Acts<sup>1</sup> contain various provisions relating to the consideration for a bill of sale<sup>2</sup>. In particular, a minimum amount is prescribed for security bills<sup>3</sup> and every bill is required to contain a true statement of the consideration<sup>4</sup>. In construing the statutory provisions it is necessary to distinguish the consideration for which a bill is given from the sum which it secures. The consideration for the bill is that which the grantor receives or is to receive for it or, where it is given for past advances, the amount of the pre-existing indebtedness; the sum secured is that which the grantor has to pay in order to discharge the bill<sup>5</sup>. The grantee will usually expect interest on his advance, so that the sum secured by the bill will normally substantially exceed the consideration for which it is given. The consideration usually consists of an advance by the grantee to the grantor but it may also take the form of a payment by the grantee to a third party at the grantor's request<sup>6</sup> or of a retention by the grantee of part of the advance to satisfy a debt already due to him from the grantor<sup>7</sup> or simply the grantor's pre-existing indebtedness to the grantee which is left outstanding to be secured by the bill<sup>8</sup>. Further, there seems no reason why a bill should not be taken in consideration of advances which are genuinely intended to be made in the future<sup>9</sup> so long as these amount in total to not less than £30<sup>10</sup>.

The Bills of Sale Acts thus allow the parties almost unlimited freedom in regard to the consideration for a security bill. Only two factors control the consideration: (1) it must not be less than the prescribed minimum of £30<sup>11</sup>; and (2) it must be truly stated<sup>12</sup>.

7    See PARA 1710.

8    See PARA 1706.

9    See PARA 1707.

10   See PARA 1703. The need to specify the amount and time of repayment of future advances and the rate of interest payable (see PARAS 1728-1729) restricts the ability of the parties to use a bill of sale to secure future advances.

BILLS OF SALE/(3) SECURITY BILLS OF SALE/(vi) Consideration/1703. Nature and amount of consideration.

1703. Nature and amount of consideration.

Every bill of sale<sup>1</sup> by way of security made or given in consideration of any sum under £30 is void<sup>2</sup>. This provision would seem to preclude a consideration which is purely non-monetary, such as delivery of goods under a contract of sale, the seller taking a bill of sale to secure payment of the price<sup>3</sup>. There appears, however, to be no objection to the giving of a bill in consideration partly of money and partly of money's worth<sup>4</sup>, provided that the money consideration is not less than £30.

In order for the bill to be valid, there must be a real, not merely an illusory, consideration of not less than £30. Thus, whilst there is nothing to prevent a bill of sale from being given for past advances<sup>5</sup>, the amount outstanding in respect of these cannot be counted towards the required £30 except to the extent to which, under the terms of the agreement pursuant to which they were made or some other agreement prior to and independent of the bill, they have become repayable at the date the bill is given; hence the amount outstanding on a promissory note payable by instalments cannot, except as regards those instalments that have become payable, be added to a new advance to make up a consideration of £30<sup>6</sup>. Legal costs incurred by the grantee in connection with the transaction and deducted from the amount of the advance and paid by the grantee with the consent of the grantor can properly be counted as part of the consideration making up the required £30<sup>7</sup>.

If there is an advance of £30 with an agreement at the same time to repay part of it on demand, then provided that the advance is genuine and there was no understanding that the demand for partial repayment should be immediately made and complied with, the statutory requirements as to the amount of the consideration are satisfied<sup>8</sup>. This will not, however, assist the grantee, since the inclusion of a provision for repayment on demand renders the bill void as not in conformity with the statutory form<sup>9</sup>.

2 Bills of Sale Act (1878) Amendment Act 1882 s 12.

3 See exchanges between counsel and the court in London and Provinces Discount Co v Jones [1914] 1 KB 147 at 148, DC. However, the consideration must be distinguished from the obligations secured (see PARA 1702). If the obligations secured, whether undertaken for a money or for a non-money consideration, are exclusively non-money obligations the Bills of Sale Act (1878) Amendment Act 1882 does not apply at all: see s 3; and PARA 1638.

4 As, indeed, the statutory form itself seems to contemplate in requiring a statement of the sum 'now paid to AB by CD [ . . . or whatever else the consideration may be]': see the Bills of Sale Act (1878) Amendment Act 1882 Schedule; PARA 1711; and Heseltine v Simmons [1892] 2 QB 547 at 551-552, CA, per Kay LJ. In so far as the statement by Kay LJ implies that a wholly non-monetary consideration is permissible this would seem to be incorrect, for it would then be impossible to satisfy the requirement of a minimum consideration of £30. The case in question did not involve the Bills of Sale Act (1878) Amendment Act 1882 s 12. The words 'or whatever else the consideration may be' in the statutory form would also cover the case of a money sum that is not 'now paid' but has been paid previously or is to be advanced in the future.

5 Darlow v Bland [1897] 1 QB 125, CA. Since a bill of sale in statutory form is necessarily made by deed, the covenants are fully enforceable even though the consideration is a past consideration, which would not be sufficient in the case of an agreement not made by deed.

9 See PARA 1730. This point was not taken in Davis v Usher (1884) 12 QBD 490. If it had been, it is difficult to see how the court could have upheld the validity of the bill.

BILLS OF SALE/(3) SECURITY BILLS OF SALE/(vi) Consideration/1704. Necessity for correct statement of consideration.

1704. Necessity for correct statement of consideration.

The Bills of Sale Act 1878 provides that every bill of sale to which it applies<sup>1</sup> must set forth the consideration for which it was given<sup>2</sup>; and the Bills of Sale Act (1878) Amendment Act 1882, which is limited to security bills, requires that every bill truly set forth the consideration for which it was given<sup>3</sup>.

The addition of the word 'truly' in the Bills of Sale Act (1878) Amendment Act 1882 is purely verbal<sup>4</sup>, as in each case the true consideration must be set forth, but whereas an untrue statement of consideration in an absolute bill of sale renders it void only against the classes of third party mentioned in the Bills of Sale Act 1878<sup>5</sup>, leaving it valid as between the parties to the bill, mis-statement of the consideration in a security bill renders the bill void in respect of the personal chattels comprised therein<sup>6</sup>, so that the security is not enforceable even against the grantor. However, such a mis-statement does not result in the bill failing to accord with the statutory form<sup>7</sup>, so that it is not totally void, but remains valid as to the covenants contained in it<sup>8</sup>. Failure to insert any statement of consideration at all, however, would render the bill not in accordance with the statutory form, and would totally invalidate it<sup>9</sup>.

The facts respecting the consideration should be set forth with substantial accuracy, according to their legal or business effect<sup>10</sup>. A verbal inaccuracy, when not, intentionally or otherwise, misleading, does not amount to a mis-statement of the consideration<sup>11</sup>, and the court adopts a tolerant attitude towards honest mistakes and clerical errors which do not mislead and have not substantially impaired the accuracy of the document<sup>12</sup>. The statement of consideration must be looked at broadly and not in a narrow spirit<sup>13</sup>.

The bill of sale must state the whole consideration, so that this can be seen from the face of the document and not merely from a receipt forming no part of the bill<sup>14</sup>, and the consideration will not be truly stated if part of it is undisclosed in the bill and is provided in some collateral agreement<sup>15</sup>.

If the consideration consists of a present advance, an acknowledgment of receipt must be included<sup>16</sup>.

The decision in Sharp v McHenry, Sharp v Brown (1887) 38 ChD 427 (in which the bill secured simple interest but a contemporaneous agreement provided for compound interest) is sometimes cited in support of the proposition that mis-statement of the consideration renders the bill not in accordance with the statutory form, but this point, though argued in that case, was clearly misconceived, since the consideration is that which the grantor receives, not the sum he covenants to pay (see PARA 1702), so that no question of mis-statement of the consideration arose in that case, nor was it a ground stated in the judgment. BILLS OF SALE/(3) SECURITY BILLS OF SALE/(vi) Consideration/1705. Statement of consideration as money 'now paid'.

1705. Statement of consideration as money 'now paid'.

The statutory form<sup>1</sup> refers to consideration of a stated amount 'now paid' to the grantor. It does not appear to be necessary to state the time of payment of the consideration<sup>2</sup>, but if this is stated it must be substantially correct and must not be set forth so as to be misleading<sup>3</sup>.

The words 'now paid', if used, imply a payment made at the time the bill is executed or within a very short time thereafter. Payment a few hours<sup>4</sup> or one day<sup>5</sup> after execution of the bill has been held sufficiently early to justify a statement of consideration 'now paid', but if there is a delay of a few days before payment is made the sum in question cannot properly be stated as 'now paid' or as paid 'at or before the execution hereof'<sup>6</sup>.

However, the rule is less strictly applied in the case of payments made before the execution of the bill. Provided that the consideration stated is not a past but a present consideration, in that the bill was intended to be given for a contemporaneous advance, the fact that payment is made in advance of the bill does not render untrue a statement that the consideration was 'now paid'. Thus, payment made as consideration for a bill intended to be given in the immediate future has been held properly described as 'now paid' if given a few days<sup>7</sup>, and even some weeks<sup>8</sup>, before execution of the bill. Indeed, even the amount of what is prima facie a past indebtedness may properly be shown as 'now paid' if there is in effect a new lending, as by agreement for a fresh advance to be applied in discharge of the existing debt<sup>9</sup>. In such a case, it is not necessary to recite the fact that the advance has been so applied; it amounts to a present payment, and the particular form which that present payment takes is irrelevant to a statement of the consideration<sup>10</sup>.

It is unnecessary to state that payment is by cheque, and since, in the absence of objection to a cheque by the grantor, payment by cheque is a good payment unless and until the cheque is dishonoured, the amount of the cheque can be stated as 'now paid'<sup>11</sup>, if it is not a post-dated cheque. If the consideration is a cheque or bill of exchange which does not become payable until a later date, such a statement would not be a true statement of the consideration<sup>12</sup>.

BILLS OF SALE/(3) SECURITY BILLS OF SALE/(vi) Consideration/1706. Statement of consideration as money 'now owing'.

1706. Statement of consideration as money 'now owing'.

Where the consideration consists of the grantor's pre-existing indebtedness to the grantee which is not being paid out of the new advance, it should be expressed as money 'now owing' or 'due and owing' or words to similar effect, and not as money 'now paid', for there is no payment<sup>1</sup>. Unless otherwise indicated in the bill, the words 'now owing' or 'due and owing' or 'now due and owing', in reference to the consideration, imply that the whole amount of the consideration consists of a past advance or advances which have become repayable at the date of the bill<sup>2</sup>. Accordingly, the statement of consideration as money 'due and owing' is not a true statement of the consideration where part of the consideration consists of a present advance<sup>3</sup>, or where, though the whole consideration consists of past advances, part of the debt has not become due at the date of the bill<sup>4</sup>. Similarly, a sum which the grantor is contingently liable to reimburse to the grantee in respect of a bill of exchange accepted by the grantee for the grantor's accommodation cannot properly be stated as 'then owing' if the bill of exchange has not become due at the date of execution of the bill of sale<sup>5</sup>.

- 3 Davies v Jenkins [1900] 1 QB 133.
- 4 Darlow v Bland [1897] 1 QB 125, CA (consideration stated as money 'now owing', when sum in question was payable under promissory note by instalments, only one of which had become due). If the parties agree to treat as 'now owing' a sum equivalent to the present value of the future debt, a statement that the reduced sum is 'now owing' would seem to be in order provided that the agreement is stated in the bill: Cochrane v Moore (1890) 25 QBD 57 at 73, CA, per Fry LJ; Darlow v Bland above at 131 per Rigby LJ. However, the present value of a debt is obviously less than the future value, and the court will not infer an agreement to treat a future debt as immediately payable if there is no reduction in the debt: Darlow v Bland at 131. Such an agreement would in any event be legally inoperative in the absence of consideration, unless made by deed.

1707. Statement of consideration for future advances.

Nothing in the Bills of Sale Act (1878) Amendment Act 1882 appears to preclude the parties from agreeing to a bill of sale<sup>1</sup> being given in consideration of a future advance, so long as the consideration is not less than £30<sup>2</sup> and the bill makes it clear that it is to be furnished in the future and does not represent it as a sum 'now paid'<sup>3</sup>.

1708. Payment to person other than grantor.

If, at the request or with the consent of the grantor<sup>1</sup>, the consideration is paid by the grantee to a third party in satisfaction of a debt incurred by the grantor<sup>2</sup> to that party, this is equivalent to payment to the grantor himself and a statement of the consideration as now paid to him is correct<sup>3</sup>. This is so whether the payment is made by the grantee to the third party direct or through another person or through the grantor and another person jointly<sup>4</sup>.

- 1 But not otherwise: Bishop v Consolidated Credit Corpn (1889) 5 TLR 378.

2 The fact that the debt incurred by the grantor to the third party has not yet become payable is immaterial: Re Wiltshire, ex p Eynon [1900] 1 QB 96, DC. The position is otherwise where the grantee retains part of the advance to satisfy a debt incurred to him which has not yet become due: see PARA 1710.

BILLS OF SALE/(3) SECURITY BILLS OF SALE/(vi) Consideration/1709. Payment by person other than grantee.

1709. Payment by person other than grantee.

The statement of the consideration must show by whom the advance was truly made, and if part of the advance was contributed by a third party by payment direct to the debtor, this fact must also be stated<sup>1</sup>. Similarly, if the grantee, though physically transmitting the full sum himself, was advancing it on behalf of others than himself or others as well as himself, a statement in the bill that he alone paid the sum in question is untrue<sup>2</sup>.

Conversely, payment made to the grantor by a person other than the grantee can properly be described as made by the grantee if it was made on his behalf so that he is the true lender<sup>3</sup>.

2 Rimmer v Brereton (1897) 41 Sol Jo 510, DC. The decision in Re Smith, ex p Tarbuck (1894) 72 LT 59, DC, is of doubtful authority and must be treated as confined to the special facts of that case. See Kinnersley v Payne (1909) 100 LT 229 at 230. As to the requirement that a statement of consideration be true see PARA 1704.

BILLS OF SALE/(3) SECURITY BILLS OF SALE/(vi) Consideration/1710. Money retained by or repaid to the grantee.

1710. Money retained by or repaid to the grantee.

A statement of the consideration as 'now paid' to the grantor<sup>1</sup> will be sufficient, although the consideration or part of it is repaid to, or at the grantor's request retained by, the grantee to satisfy a debt then due<sup>2</sup> to him, provided that the debt arose independently of the bill of sale<sup>3</sup> and of any new loan to be secured by the bill<sup>4</sup>. However, a sum cannot be correctly described as 'now paid' to the grantor if it includes money deducted or paid away without his consent<sup>5</sup>, or includes a sum stated to be owing which in fact was more than was due from the grantor to the grantee<sup>6</sup>.

The consideration is not truly stated as 'now paid' if part of the sum said to have been paid is retained by the grantee for the purpose of discharging a debt incurred by the grantor to the grantee which is not due until a future date<sup>7</sup>, or for paying an indebtedness which arises under or in relation to the bill of sale itself<sup>8</sup>. In such cases, the grantee is not regarded as having effectively made a payment to the grantor, but on the contrary is simply receiving a benefit, in the form of an acceleration of payment, which is not apparent from the statement of the consideration. The liability of the grantor for expenses relating to the bill, or for interest or commission on the transaction, does not arise independently of the transaction, and there is no debt in respect of them due or payable by the grantor until after the execution of the bill. Therefore, if such expenses, interest or commission are retained by the grantee or deducted on his behalf they cannot be stated as part of the consideration paid to the grantor<sup>9</sup>.

A statement that the consideration has been 'now paid' is not rendered untrue by reason of the fact that after execution of the bill of sale and receipt of the consideration the grantor voluntarily pays the expenses<sup>10</sup>, or that a solicitor acting for both the grantor and the grantee, having received the advance from the grantee for transmission to the grantor, agrees with the grantor that costs or expenses shall be deducted<sup>11</sup>. If, however, before execution of the bill of sale, it is stipulated that the grantor shall pay the expenses out of the advance, the whole cannot be stated as paid to him<sup>12</sup>.

A sham payment, by which money is handed to the grantor and then immediately taken back from him so as never to have been genuinely at his disposal, cannot be recorded as a payment made to him, nor can a sum retained by the grantee without the grantor's consent<sup>13</sup>. However, if the grantor, without any stipulation by the grantee that he should do so, immediately pays back part of the advance to the grantee in discharge of an existing debt, this does not vitiate a statement in the bill recording payment of the full advance<sup>14</sup>.

1 As to statements of consideration as money 'now paid' see PARA 1705.

2 See the text and note 14. The full amount retained in respect of a part indebtedness must have become repayable. If part only has become due, this precludes a statement of the whole as 'now paid' even if, as a result of default in payment of the part that had become due, the grantee had acquired a right to realise the security: Parsons v Equitable Investment Co Ltd [1916] 2 Ch 527, CA. It is otherwise if the default in payment of the part made the full balance of the earlier debt become immediately payable.

4 Thomas v Searles [1891] 2 QB 408, CA; Re Davies, ex p Equitable Investment Co Ltd (1897) 77 LT 567. In both these cases part of the advance was utilised by the grantor to repay an advance outstanding under a prior bill of sale given to the grantee, and it was held that a statement of this fact was unnecessary and that the consideration for the new bill was truly stated as paid to the grantor.

There is, however, nothing in the Bills of Sale Acts (ie the Bills of Sale Act 1878 and the Bills of Sale Act (1878) Amendment Act 1882: see PARA 1630) which renders such an agreement improper; the breach is not the futurity of the consideration but the statement of it as a present consideration. Hence if the consideration is expressed as money 'to be paid' this would seem unobjectionable. See also PARAS 1702, 1707.

See also London and Provinces Discount Co v Jones [1914] 1 KB 147, where the above principle was referred to (although the case turned on a different point). These decisions qualify earlier cases in which the principle here set forth was not fully recognised: see Re Haynes, ex p National Mercantile Bank (1880) 15 ChD 42, CA, and Re Rogers, ex p Challinor (1880) 16 ChD 260, CA. The infringement lies not in the deduction of expenses, which can quite lawfully be done, and can be included in the computation of the minimum permitted £30 consideration (see PARA 1703), but in the failure to state the facts in the bill.

10 Voluntarily in the sense that the payment is not pursuant to a stipulation made by the grantee: see note 11.

11 Re Cann, ex p Hunt & Co (1884) 13 QBD 36. The point of this case (distinguishing Re Cowburn, ex p Firth (1882) 19 ChD 419) was that the payment of the solicitor's costs was not a term of the bill or a stipulation by the grantee. The grantee simply sent the advance to the solicitor for dispatch to the grantor, and was in no way concerned with the application of the advance or with any agreement between the solicitor and the grantor as to the deduction of costs.

A. STATUTORY REQUIREMENTS GENERALLY

1711. The statutory form.

A bill of sale<sup>1</sup> made or given by way of security for the payment of money by the grantor thereof<sup>2</sup> is void unless made in accordance with the form contained in the Schedule to the Bills of Sale Act (1878) Amendment Act 1882<sup>3</sup>. This provision extends to all the instruments which come within the definition of 'bill of sale', if given by way of security, but it does not embrace those instruments giving powers of distress which by the Bills of Sale Act 1878 are merely deemed to be bills of sale<sup>4</sup>, and such instruments, although given by way of security, are not required to be in accordance with the statutory form<sup>5</sup>.

The bill of sale is not required to be 'in' the statutory form but merely 'in accordance with' the form<sup>6</sup>, so that deviations are permitted so long as they do not mislead the grantor and do not add to or detract from the legal effect of or permitted by the statutory form<sup>7</sup>.

If an instrument which comes within the definition of a 'bill of sale' in the Bills of Sale Act 1878 cannot be reduced to the statutory form, it cannot be given by way of security at all<sup>8</sup>, nor will possession taken and retained under an instrument avoided by not being in accordance with the statutory form improve the grantee's position<sup>9</sup>. Such instruments include inventories, receipts, powers of attorney and agreements conferring a right in equity over goods, such as charges or agreements for a charge<sup>10</sup>. The impossibility of making them conform to the statutory form does not on that account exempt them from the provisions of the Bills of Sale Act (1878) Amendment Act 1882<sup>11</sup>, and the consequence is that they cannot be used<sup>12</sup> except where the disposition of the property is absolute<sup>13</sup> or the document is of a category excluded from the definition of 'bill of sale'<sup>14</sup> or relates to chattels excluded from the definition of personal chattels<sup>15</sup>.

2 The Bills of Sale Act (1878) Amendment Act 1882 s 9 does not apply if the bill is given to secure payment by a third party.

3 Bills of Sale Act (1878) Amendment Act 1882 s 9; and see Thomas v Kelly (1888) 13 App Cas 506, HL. The form set out in the Bills of Sale Act (1878) Amendment Act 1882, Schedule possesses 14 distinct characteristics, which are considered in PARA 1716 et seq, and reads:

'This Indenture made the -- day of -- between AB of -- of the one part, and CD of -- of the other part, witnesseth that in consideration of the sum of £ -- now paid to AB by CD, the receipt of which the said AB hereby acknowledges [or whatever else the consideration may be], he the said AB doth hereby assign unto CD, his executors, administrators, and assigns, all and singular the several chattels and things specifically described in the schedule hereto annexed by way of security for the payment of the sum of £ -- and interest thereon at the rate of -- per cent per annum [or whatever else may be the rate]. And the said AB doth further agree and declare that he will duly pay to the said CD the principal sum aforesaid, together with the interest then due, by equal payments of £ -- on the -- day of -- [or whatever else may be the stipulated times or time of payment]. And the said AB doth also agree with the said CD that he will [here insert terms as to insurance, payment of rent, or otherwise, which the parties may agree to for the maintenance or defeasance of the security].

Provided always, that the chattels hereby assigned shall not be liable to seizure or to be taken possession of by the said CD for any cause other than those specified in section seven of the Bills of Sale Act (1878) Amendment Act 1882.

1712. Effect of bill not in statutory form.

A bill of sale<sup>1</sup> which is void as not being made in accordance with the statutory form<sup>2</sup> cannot be treated as a licence to take possession<sup>3</sup>, and agreements for payment of principal and interest contained in such a bill are also void<sup>4</sup>. However, a bill of sale, like other contracts, may be divisible and good in part, though otherwise void<sup>5</sup>, and thus a bill of sale so avoided may be effectual in so far as it is an assurance of machinery or effects which are excluded from the definition of personal chattels<sup>6</sup>, or in so far as it is an assurance of leaseholds<sup>7</sup> or of any property other than personal chattels<sup>8</sup>.

BILLS OF SALE/(3) SECURITY BILLS OF SALE/(vii) Form and Contents/A. STATUTORY REQUIREMENTS GENERALLY/1713. Other provisions affecting form and contents of bill.

1713. Other provisions affecting form and contents of bill.

The Bills of Sale Acts<sup>1</sup> contain other provisions which, though not concerned with the statutory form<sup>2</sup>, affect the permitted or required content of a bill of sale<sup>3</sup>. Thus, the consideration for the bill must be truly stated<sup>4</sup>; the bill must be confined to goods of which the grantor is the true owner at the date of execution of the bill<sup>5</sup>; the goods must be specifically described in a schedule to the bill<sup>6</sup>; and any defeasance, condition or declaration of trust subject to which the bill is given and not contained in the body of it must be written on the same paper or parchment therewith before registration<sup>7</sup>. The effect of non-compliance with these provisions is less severe than in the case of non-conformity with the statutory form, the bill being at worst rendered void as to the security, whilst remaining valid as to the personal covenants comprised in it<sup>8</sup>, although in certain cases breach of such a provision will also produce non-conformity with the statutory form<sup>9</sup>, and in that event the bill will be rendered totally void<sup>10</sup>. Apart from the above matters and requirements as to the form of the bill the Bills of Sale Acts have nothing to do with the reasonableness or unreasonableness of the bargain between the parties<sup>11</sup>.

1714. Bill of sale securing regulated agreement.

Where a bill of sale<sup>1</sup> secures an agreement which is a regulated agreement under the Consumer Credit Act 1974<sup>2</sup> the agreement must conform to the requirements of that Act and of regulations under it, otherwise the agreement will be improperly executed and unenforceable except on a court order<sup>3</sup>. For this purpose enforcement of the agreement would include the exercise of remedies under the bill. A regulated agreement is required to 'embody' any security<sup>4</sup>. However, incorporation of a bill of sale into the regulated agreement itself would almost inevitably render the bill not in accordance with the statutory form<sup>5</sup>, so that in practice the bill must be embodied in the regulated agreement by being referred to in it, and the debtor is then entitled to receive a copy of the bill under the statutory provisions<sup>6</sup>.

Amendment Act 1882: see PARA 1630) that despite the elaborate provisions regulating the form and content of a security bill for the protection of the debtor there is no requirement to supply him with a copy of it.

B. STATUTORY FORM CONSIDERED

1715. Limits of permitted variation.

To be in accordance with the statutory form<sup>1</sup> a bill of sale<sup>2</sup> must fulfil two distinct requirements. First, it must produce the same legal effect. If the legal effect of the instrument is greater or less than would result from use of the statutory form, this represents a material divergence which renders the bill void<sup>3</sup>. For this reason a grantor cannot purport to assign the goods as beneficial owner, for these words would introduce the covenants implied by virtue of the Law of Property Act (Miscellaneous Provisions) Act 1994<sup>4</sup>, and a legal effect different from that of the statutory form would thereby be produced<sup>5</sup>. Secondly, the bill of sale must not depart from any characteristic of the statutory form, even where the same legal effect is produced<sup>6</sup>. Thus the address and description of the attesting witness<sup>7</sup> and the description of the grantee<sup>8</sup> are material parts of the form, and a bill of sale omitting them will be void.

1716. Characteristics of the statutory form.

The statutory form<sup>1</sup> possesses the following 14 characteristics, all of which must feature in a bill of sale<sup>2</sup> if it is to accord with the statutory form:

- 164 (1) the date of the bill<sup>3</sup>;
- 165 (2) the names and addresses of the parties<sup>4</sup>;
- 166 (3) a statement of the consideration<sup>5</sup>;
- 167 (4) an acknowledgment of receipt, if the advance is a present advance<sup>6</sup>;
- 168 (5) an assignment by way of security of personal chattels capable of specific description<sup>7</sup>;
- 169 (6) exclusion of any description of the chattels from the body of the bill and relegation of such description to the schedule<sup>8</sup>;
- 170 (7) the securing of a monetary obligation, as opposed to some other form of obligation<sup>9</sup>;
- 171 (8) a statement of the sum secured, the rate of interest and the instalments by which repayment is to be made<sup>10</sup>;
- 172 (9) any agreed terms for the maintenance or defeasance of the security<sup>11</sup>;
- 173 (10) a proviso limiting the grounds of seizure<sup>12</sup>;
- 174 (11) execution by the grantor<sup>13</sup>;
- 175 (12) an attestation clause<sup>14</sup>;
- 176 (13) the name, address and description of the attesting witness<sup>15</sup>; and
- 177 (14) a schedule in which a reference is made to chattels comprised in the bill<sup>16</sup>.

BILLS OF SALE/(3) SECURITY BILLS OF SALE/(vii) Form and Contents/B. STATUTORY FORM CONSIDERED/1717. Misleading variations.

1717. Misleading variations.

If, by reason of a variation in form, a bill of sale<sup>1</sup> is misleading<sup>2</sup>, or if its wording produces what has been termed 'a puzzle', as, for instance, by the use of inconsistent clauses<sup>3</sup>, it is not in accordance with the statutory form<sup>4</sup>. A bill of sale must, however, be construed like any other legal document<sup>5</sup>, and the fact that different courts have not been agreed upon its construction does not necessarily make it misleading<sup>6</sup>. Moreover, the bill will not be avoided by a verbal omission where the meaning is clear, as by the omission of the word 'pounds' after the sum named in the agreement to repay<sup>7</sup>, and when it is clear from the bill itself that only a security is given, the omission of the words 'by way of security' is a minor deviation which will not render the bill void<sup>8</sup>.

BILLS OF SALE/(3) SECURITY BILLS OF SALE/(vii) Form and Contents/B. STATUTORY FORM CONSIDERED/1718. Bill need not be a complete record.

1718. Bill need not be a complete record.

Despite certain dicta suggesting the contrary<sup>1</sup>, it would seem that there is no requirement that a bill of sale<sup>2</sup> must contain a complete and accurate statement of the consideration or record the whole bargain between the parties in order to be in accordance with the statutory form<sup>3</sup>. The Bills of Sale Act 1878 does, it is true, require any defeasance, condition or declaration of trust subject to which the bill is given to be written on the same paper or parchment therewith<sup>4</sup>, but, except in the case of a term for maintenance or defeasance of the security<sup>5</sup>, failure to comply with this provision is not in itself a deviation from the statutory form<sup>6</sup>. The form requires the insertion of all terms agreed between the parties for the maintenance or defeasance of the security<sup>7</sup>, and if any such term is omitted the bill will not be in accordance with the statutory form<sup>8</sup>, but the omission of a term which is neither a defeasance nor a provision for maintenance of the security is not a defect in form<sup>9</sup>, though it may offend against the Bills of Sale Acts in some other way<sup>10</sup>. It follows that there is nothing to prevent the parties from having the terms of the loan agreement set out in one document and the provision for the security in a separate bill of sale<sup>11</sup>, so long as the agreement does not provide for the maintenance or defeasance of the security<sup>12</sup>, any other condition which if included in the bill would have rendered it not in accordance with the statutory form<sup>13</sup>, a declaration of trust<sup>14</sup>, or a term which falsifies the statement of consideration in the bill<sup>15</sup>.

1 Sharp v McHenry, Sharp v Brown (1887) 38 ChD 427 at 454-455 per Kay J; Simpson v Charing Cross Bank (1886) 34 WR 568 at 568-569, DC, per Denman J. The former case, in which a written agreement to give a bill of sale provided for the payment of compound interest but the bill was restricted to simple interest as required by the statutory form, is not free from difficulty, since the judgment does not make it clear what statutory provision was considered to be infringed. The bill was attacked not only for non-conformity with the statutory form but also as not truly stating the consideration, but this latter point seems ill-founded: see PARA 1704 note 8. The true ground of the decision would seem to be that the bill was in fact securing not the simple interest stated on the face of it but the compound interest the subject of the written agreement. In effect, the bill and the agreement to give it had to be considered as one document, and the provision for compound interest rendered the bill not in accordance with the statutory form.

Later cases, such as Edwards v Marcus [1894] 1 QB 587, CA, have laid down the principle that the Bills of Sale Act (1878) Amendment Act 1882 s 9 (see PARA 1711) does not require either that the consideration should be stated accurately or that the whole bargain should be set out in the body of the bill, these matters being specifically regulated by s 8 (see PARA 1704) and by the Bills of Sale Act 1878 s 10(3) (see PARA 1748), which would otherwise be deprived of effect. Hence on this point Sharp v McHenry above should now be regarded as decided on its own particular facts. However, it remains authority for the proposition that, if the omitted condition is one which would have been void if included in the bill, so that the bill is in effect securing an obligation not permitted by the statutory form, the bill is void under the Bills of Sale Act (1878) Amendment Act 1882 s 9. In this respect Edwards v Marcus above must itself be read in the light of later cases such as Smith v Whiteman [1909] 2 KB 437, CA; see PARAS 1749, 1750. As to the statutory form and the requirement that security bills of sale are to be in accordance with it see the Bills of Sale Act (1878) Amendment Act 1882 s 9, Schedule; and PARA 1711. As to the characteristics of the form see PARA 1716.

However, if the bill does not contain a true statement of the consideration it will infringe the Bills of Sale Act (1878) Amendment Act 1882 s 8: see PARA 1704.

4 See the Bills of Sale Act 1878 s 10(3); and PARA 1748 et seq.

5 The omission of a term for maintenance or defeasance of the security renders the bill not in accordance with the statutory form: see PARAS 1737-1740, 1748.

6 Edward v Marcus [1894] 1 QB 587, CA; Heseltine v Simmons [1892] 2 QB 547, CA.

The decision in Counsell v London and Westminster Loan and Discount Co (1887) 19 QBD 512, CA, in which a promissory note given in connection with a bill of sale and stated by the court to be a defeasance of the bill was held merely to avoid registration of the bill under the Bills of Sale Act 1878 s 10(3), and not to make the bill defective in form under the Bills of Sale Act (1878) Amendment Act 1882 s 9, is to be explained on the basis that the provision embodied in the note was a condition, not a defeasance: see Edwards v Marcus [1894] 1 QB 587 at 595, CA, per Kay LJ. See also PARA 1787.

9 Edwards v Marcus [1894] 1 QB 587, CA, where, however, the court concentrated on the effect of omission of an agreed term for payment of compound interest but did not consider the point taken in later cases that such a term goes beyond what is permitted by the statutory form and, being in effect part of the bill by virtue of the Bills of Sale Act 1878 s 10(3), renders the bill void as not in accordance with the statutory form. See also note 1; and PARA 1748.

A bill is not in accordance with the statutory form if it contains a covenant to perform stipulations contained in some other document not forming part of the bill where the stipulations are not apparent on the face of the bill and can only be ascertained by reference to the other document: Lee v Barnes (1886) 17 QBD 77.

10 Eg when it constitutes a condition or declaration of trust within the Bills of Sale Act 1878 s 10(3) or renders untrue the statement of the consideration in the bill, contrary to the Bills of Sale Act (1878) Amendment Act 1882 s 8. For the position where the agreed term omitted from the bill goes beyond what is permitted by the statutory form see PARA 1750.

11 Indeed, this would be necessary in the case of a bill securing a regulated agreement within the Consumer Credit Act 1974. As to the meaning of 'regulated agreement' see PARA 1714; and CONSUMER CREDIT vol 9(1) (Reissue) PARA 79.

The statutory form of a security bill of sale opens with the words 'This Indenture'<sup>1</sup>, but the term 'indenture' is no longer used, and the words 'This Deed' or 'This Bill of Sale' or any other words accurately conveying the nature of the instrument will suffice<sup>2</sup>.

1720. Date of bill.

Omission of the date of execution of a bill of sale<sup>1</sup> would appear to be a material departure from the statutory form<sup>2</sup>.

Omission of the date of the bill may make it difficult to detect whether or not the bill is void as not being registered in time, or, if the bill is not registered, make it difficult to detect whether a bill subsequently given infringes the Bills of Sale Act 1878 s 9 (see PARA 1755) by being executed within seven days of a previous unregistered bill.

BILLS OF SALE/(3) SECURITY BILLS OF SALE/(vii) Form and Contents/B. STATUTORY FORM CONSIDERED/1721. Parties.

1721. Parties.

The statutory form of a security bill of sale requires insertion of the names and addresses of the grantor and the grantee<sup>1</sup>, but it is not necessary to insert the occupation or description of the parties, this being a matter to be stated in the affidavit of the attesting witness<sup>2</sup>. There is, however, nothing improper in including a description of the parties in the bill.

There is no provision in the Bills of Sale Acts<sup>3</sup>, other than by the statutory form, for stating the names of the parties<sup>4</sup>, so a party need not be given his forename or his surname but may be described in any way which enables him to be identified<sup>5</sup>, as by a business name under which he trades<sup>6</sup>. If the name, or description, though ambiguous, is such as would be held sufficient in any mercantile document without the aid of extrinsic evidence the requirement of the statutory form is satisfied<sup>7</sup>.

Although the address given will normally be that where the party resides or carries on business, this is not essential, and the address of a club where the grantor did not reside but at which he was certain to receive letters sent to him has been held sufficient<sup>8</sup>.

A bill can be made jointly by two grantors in respect of chattels jointly owned by them, but not in respect of chattels of which some belong to one grantor and some to another or all belong to one joint grantor only<sup>9</sup>, and a bill given to several grantees to secure different debts is not in accordance with the statutory form<sup>10</sup>.

There appears to be no reason why a partnership firm cannot grant or be granted a security bill in the name of the firm without stating the names of the individual partners<sup>11</sup>, and one partner can be authorised to execute the bill on behalf of the firm<sup>12</sup>.

1723. Consideration.

Some consideration must be inserted in the bill of sale<sup>1</sup>, but an untrue statement of consideration does not itself vitiate the form<sup>2</sup>, though under a separate provision of the Bills of Sale Act (1878) Amendment Act 1882 it renders the bill void in respect of the personal chattels comprised in it<sup>3</sup>.

If the consideration includes a present advance, the grantor must acknowledge receipt of the money in the bill of sale<sup>1</sup>, as in the statutory form<sup>2</sup>, and such a receipt is obligatory in the case of a present advance even though the money is paid not to the grantor himself but to a third party at the grantor's request<sup>3</sup>.

BILLS OF SALE/(3) SECURITY BILLS OF SALE/(vii) Form and Contents/B. STATUTORY FORM CONSIDERED/1725. Assignment of personal chattels by way of security.

1725. Assignment of personal chattels by way of security.

The statutory form of a security bill of sale<sup>1</sup> involves an assignment of personal chattels<sup>2</sup> by way of security. A mere agreement to assign is thus not in accordance with the statutory form, and nor is any other document not in the nature of an assignment, such as a charge, a declaration of trust or a power of attorney, even though such documents are included in the statutory definition of 'bill of sale'<sup>3</sup>. Omission of the words 'by way of security' does not vitiate the bill if it otherwise appears on the face of the bill that it is given by way of security, as where there is a recital to this effect<sup>4</sup>.

Only personal chattels capable of specific description may be included in a security bill if it is to accord with the statutory form<sup>5</sup>. Thus it is not as a rule permissible to include after-acquired chattels<sup>6</sup>; nor may property other than personal chattels, such as chattels real, land or choses in action, be comprised in the bill<sup>7</sup>.

1726. Exclusion of description of chattels from body of bill.

The statutory form of a security bill of sale<sup>1</sup> requires the description of the chattels comprised in the bill to be relegated to the schedule, and if a description is provided in the body of the bill, whether in addition to or in lieu of a description in the schedule, the bill will not accord with the statutory form<sup>2</sup>. This does not, however, preclude a provision in the body of the bill for replacement of lost, damaged or worn out goods by similar chattels, since such a provision is for the maintenance of the security<sup>3</sup> and as such must feature in the body of the bill in order to comply with the statutory form<sup>4</sup>.

1 As to the statutory form and the requirement that security bills of sale are to be in accordance with it see the Bills of Sale Act (1878) Amendment Act 1882 s 9, Schedule; and PARA 1711. This is so even as regards substituted goods falling within the Bills of Sale Act (1878) Amendment Act 1882 s 6(2) (see PARA 1699 head (2)), for, whilst these are exempt from the requirements of ss 4, 5 (see PARAS 1697 et seq, 1746 et seq), s 6(2) does not override the requirement that the bill be in accordance with the statutory form: see Thomas v Kelly.

1727. Securing of monetary obligation.

The statutory form of a security bill of sale<sup>1</sup> involves an assignment of personal chattels<sup>2</sup> as security for payment of a sum of money. If no money is secured, the bill is not within the Bills of Sale Act (1878) Amendment Act 1882 at all<sup>3</sup>, and the parties are then free to use any form they choose. If, however, the bill is given to secure a money payment so as to come within the Act, it would not appear permissible to make the bill secure in addition a non-monetary obligation, other than an obligation validly created by the bill itself<sup>4</sup>.

BILLS OF SALE/(3) SECURITY BILLS OF SALE/(vii) Form and Contents/B. STATUTORY FORM CONSIDERED/1728. Amount secured.

1728. Amount secured.

The statutory form of a security bill of sale<sup>1</sup> requires that a fixed sum be secured, and a bill cannot be given by way of guarantee or indemnity, the amount ultimately payable being uncertain<sup>2</sup>, nor can the bill validly secure further advances where the amount to be advanced is uncertain or is not stated in the bill or the rate of interest on such advances cannot be stated<sup>3</sup>. This principle does not, however, apply to stipulations for the recovery of outgoings where those stipulations are for the maintenance of the security<sup>4</sup>, for the statutory form expressly provides for the insertion of terms for the maintenance of the security<sup>5</sup>.

1 As to the statutory form and the requirement that security bills of sale are to be in accordance with it see the Bills of Sale Act (1878) Amendment Act 1882 s 9, Schedule; and PARA 1711. 3 Cook v Taylor (1887) 3 TLR 800. If these amounts can be stated there appears to be no objection to a bill to secure future advances. It has been held that the fact that a bill is taken to secure future advances does not on that account remove it from the scope of the Bills of Sale Acts (ie the Bills of Sale Act 1878 and the Bills of Sale Act (1878) Amendment Act 1882: see PARA 1630): Stevens v Marston (1890) 60 LQB 192.

BILLS OF SALE/(3) SECURITY BILLS OF SALE/(vii) Form and Contents/B. STATUTORY FORM CONSIDERED/1729. Interest.

1729. Interest.

Interest is an essential part of the statutory form of a security bill of sale<sup>1</sup>, and it must be stated as a rate<sup>2</sup>. The rate need not be expressed as a percentage<sup>3</sup>, but may be stated, for example, as a given amount in the pound per period, and the period need not be annual but may be a month, a quarter or any other period the parties may agree<sup>4</sup>. However, the amount of interest payable, and its time of payment, must be certain at the date of the bill<sup>5</sup>, so that a statement of a rate of interest geared to some shifting or variable base rate would not be in accordance with the statutory form. Interest cannot be expressed merely as a lump sum, without reference to a rate<sup>6</sup>, nor can a provision be inserted accelerating the liability for payment of interest in the event of default, since the essence of interest is that it is only payable on a sum that has actually become due<sup>7</sup>, and whilst there is no objection to a provision calling up the full outstanding balance of the principal upon default in payment of an instalment and directing interest to run on such outstanding balance as from the date it is called up<sup>8</sup>, the bill cannot provide for payment on that date of interest not then accrued due<sup>9</sup>.

Interest cannot be made chargeable on interest<sup>10</sup> or capitalised so as to produce compound interest<sup>11</sup>.

The principal sum advanced and interest on it at the stated rate are the only sums which the form allows to be secured, other than sums laid out for the maintenance of the security<sup>12</sup>, and the insertion of a provision for payment of a bonus will render the bill void<sup>13</sup>.

8 See Goldstrom v Tallerman (1886) 18 QBD 1, CA, where a bill providing for payment of interest on overdue instalments was held valid. The same reasoning applies where the outstanding instalments of principal have become repayable as a result of default, and interest is then made payable thereon.

9 Re Johnstone, ex p Abrams (1884) 50 LT 184; Davis v Burton (1883) 11 QBD 537, CA. It follows that, if the instalments by which the debt is repayable combine principal and interest, a provision calling up the whole balance on default without deduction of the interest component accelerates the liability for interest and renders the bill void: Roe v Mutual Loan Fund (1887) 56 LT 631; revsd on other grounds (1887) 19 QBD 347, CA.

10 Dresser v Townsend (1886) 81 LT Jo 23. There is, however, no objection to charging interest on overdue instalments of principal. This does not duplicate interest charges, as the stipulated contract interest is payable only for the period up to the date when the instalments become due, and does not cover interest on overdue instalments: Goldstrom v Tallerman (1886) 18 QBD 1 at 4, CA. In the absence of an express provision for interest on overdue instalments, interest would have to be assessed as damages under the Supreme Court Act 1981 s 35A or the County Courts Act 1984 s 69 (see DAMAGES vol 12(1) (Reissue) PARA 848).

1730. Time of repayment.

To accord with the statutory form of a security bill of sale<sup>1</sup>, a bill must contain an agreement to repay the principal sum at a certain stipulated time or times<sup>2</sup>. The time of payment is probably considered certain for this purpose if it is fixed by reference to a known event which is bound to occur<sup>3</sup>, but not if payment is made to depend on the mere choice or volition of the grantee, as in the case of a provision for payment on demand<sup>4</sup> or within a stated time after demand<sup>5</sup>, or depends on some contingency, such as the event of the grantee being called upon to discharge his liability under a guarantee given for the grantor, as a result of the latter's default<sup>6</sup>. This is the case even if the contingency is not expressed on the face of the bill, so that the sum secured appears to be payable at a certain time<sup>7</sup>.

BILLS OF SALE/(3) SECURITY BILLS OF SALE/(vii) Form and Contents/B. STATUTORY FORM CONSIDERED/1731. Prepayment and acceleration.

1731. Prepayment and acceleration.

Though the time of payment cannot be left in the discretion of the grantee of a bill of sale<sup>1</sup>, there is no objection to a provision permitting prepayment by the grantor, whether expressly or by a stipulation for payment on or before a stated date or after giving a specified period of notice<sup>2</sup>. This constitutes an obligation to make the payment by the date stated, with a defeasance in favour of the grantor if he chooses to make payment earlier<sup>3</sup>. Moreover, the bill can provide for alternative times of payment, for example by stipulating payment at a specified date with a proviso that the grantee would accept payment by instalments if the grantee did not commit any breaches of covenant or become bankrupt<sup>4</sup>.

There is no objection to a provision making the whole outstanding balance immediately repayable on default in payment of any one instalment<sup>5</sup>, but this acceleration of payment must be limited to the principal sum<sup>6</sup>, though it is legitimate to provide for interest to be paid on that sum thereafter in lieu of the interest that would have been payable if the acceleration clause had not come into operation.

1 As to the statutory definition of 'bill of sale' see PARA 1638 et seq. As to bills of sale at common law see PARA 1620 et seq.

2 It would seem that, since the grantor has no right of prepayment (see PARA 1796), except where the bill secures an agreement which is a regulated agreement under the Consumer Credit Act 1974 (see s 95; the Consumer Credit (Rebate on Early Settlement) Regulations 1983, SI 1983/1562 (prospectively revoked); the Consumer Credit (Early Settlement) Regulations 2004, SI 2004/1483; and CONSUMER CREDIT vol 9(1) (Reissue) PARA 253), the bill can properly provide for payment of interest in lieu of notice. Such a provision does not oblige the grantor to pay interest in excess of what is permitted by the Bills of Sale Act (1878) Amendment Act 1882; it merely makes such payment a condition of the grantee's waiving the notice stipulated in the bill. However, the position is unclear, as also is the question whether the bill must provide for a rebate of interest where the grantor exercises a right of prepayment. As to regulated agreements under the Consumer Credit Act 1974 see CONSUMER CREDIT vol 9(1) (Reissue) PARAS 79, 157 et seq.

1732. Manner of repayment.

The general principle is that, so long as the times fixed for payment are certain, the manner of payment may be such as the parties agree<sup>1</sup>, provided that the agreement is not misleading or contrary to the provisions of the Bills of Sale Acts<sup>2</sup>.

BILLS OF SALE/(3) SECURITY BILLS OF SALE/(vii) Form and Contents/B. STATUTORY FORM CONSIDERED/1733. Instalments or lump sum.

1733. Instalments or lump sum.

Payment by instalments is not obligatory, and the bill of sale<sup>1</sup> may validly provide for payment in one sum with interest on it until payment<sup>2</sup>. Where payment is by instalments, these need not be equal, despite the fact that the statutory form refers to equal payments<sup>3</sup>.

1734. Separate payments of principal and interest.

Though permissible, it is not necessary that principal and interest should be repayable together. Thus it is quite legitimate to provide that the principal is to be paid before the interest<sup>1</sup>, or the interest before the principal<sup>2</sup>, or that payment is to be made by instalments which combine principal and interest<sup>3</sup>. In the last case, the bill of sale<sup>4</sup> may go on to say how payments amounting to less than the sums due are to be appropriated as between principal and interest<sup>5</sup>.

1735. Computation of equal payments.

The part of the statutory form of a security bill of sale<sup>1</sup> referring to equal payments is ambiguous in that it is not clear whether the sum required to be inserted is an aliquot part of the principal alone or of the total of the principal and interest. It has accordingly been held that both methods of completing the form are in order, so that the form is considered to be complied with whether the sum inserted is for principal only, leaving the amount of the interest to be calculated<sup>2</sup>, or includes interest also<sup>3</sup>. Prima facie the form contemplates that the sum inserted covers an aliquot portion of both principal and interest<sup>4</sup>, but this is in all cases a question of construction, so that if, for example, the instalments payable amount in total only to the principal sum it is evident that these do not include interest.

BILLS OF SALE/(3) SECURITY BILLS OF SALE/(vii) Form and Contents/B. STATUTORY FORM CONSIDERED/1736. Tax deductible from interest.

1736. Tax deductible from interest.

Where income tax is deductible from payments of interest, it is not necessary to state this in the bill of sale<sup>1</sup>, the right and obligation to make the deduction being conferred by the taxing statutes<sup>2</sup>, but there seems no objection to an express statement in the bill that interest is to be paid less income tax at the basic rate for the time being in force, since this does no more than set out the legal effect of the instrument. However, a provision for payment of such an amount of interest as will, after deduction of tax at the basic rate for the time being in force, amount to a specified figure would, it is thought, contravene the statutory form<sup>3</sup>, since it leaves the contractual amount of interest uncertain at the date of the bill of sale<sup>4</sup>.

1 As to the statutory definition of 'bill of sale' see PARA 1638 et seq. As to bills of sale at common law see PARA 1620 et seq.

2 As to when income tax is deductible from interest see INCOME TAXATION vol 23(1) (Reissue) PARA 520 et seq.

4 This objection does not apply where the gross amount of interest is stipulated in the bill, since this is the contractual interest, and the obligation to deduct tax at a rate which may vary is imposed ab extra by the taxing statutes.

BILLS OF SALE/(3) SECURITY BILLS OF SALE/(vii) Form and Contents/B. STATUTORY FORM CONSIDERED/1737. Maintenance or defeasance of security.

1737. Maintenance or defeasance of security.

The statutory form of a security bill of sale<sup>1</sup> permits, and indeed requires, the parties to insert such terms as they may agree for the maintenance or defeasance of the security, though as regards maintenance provisions the power of seizure must be limited to provisions necessary to maintain the security and must not be extended to provisions which, though for the maintenance of the security, are not necessary for that purpose<sup>2</sup>. However, the inclusion of terms for maintenance which may be superfluous or unnecessary does not vitiate the bill so long as the grantee is not given power to seize for breach of those terms<sup>3</sup>.

The statutory form does not permit the inclusion of any covenants or stipulations of any kind beyond covenants for payment of principal and interest<sup>4</sup> and terms for the maintenance or defeasance of the security. The inclusion of any other terms will render the bill void as not in accordance with the statutory form<sup>5</sup>.

'Maintenance of the security' means the preservation of the whole security given by the bill of sale, as regards both the chattels assigned and the grantee's title to them, in as good a condition as when the security was created<sup>6</sup>. The grantee is accordingly entitled to include provisions to this end even if the security would be fully adequate without such provisions, as the phrase 'maintenance of the security' refers to the subject matter of the bill, not to what is necessary for securing repayment of the debt<sup>7</sup>.

1738. Covenants upheld as being for maintenance of security.

The following covenants by the grantor are among those which have been held valid as being for the maintenance of the security<sup>1</sup>:

- 178 (1) to pay all rent, rates and taxes payable in respect of the premises and insure the goods and pay the insurance premiums, producing the receipts to the grantee when so required<sup>2</sup>;
- 179 (2) to allow the grantee, on the grantor's default, to make payments for the insurance of the goods and for the outgoings of the premises in which the goods are situated<sup>3</sup>, together with interest thereon<sup>4</sup>, the sums paid to be a charge on the goods<sup>5</sup>;
- 180 (3) not to assign or underlet the goods without consent<sup>6</sup>;
- 181 (4) to keep the goods in good and substantial repair and perfect working order and to replace worn out articles with like articles of comparable value<sup>7</sup>;
- 182 (5) to allow the grantee to seize the goods<sup>8</sup> and for that purpose to enter the premises where the goods are situated<sup>9</sup>;
- 183 (6) to allow entry to inspect the goods<sup>10</sup>;
- 184 (7) not to remove the goods, except for necessary repairs, from the premises in which they are situated at the date of the bill, without the previous consent of the grantee<sup>11</sup>;
- 185 (8) to execute such further assurances as may be necessary to perfect the title to the personal chattels<sup>12</sup>.

Other covenants which can, it is thought, be legitimately included as being for the maintenance of the security are covenants to encumber the goods in favour of another creditor (commonly termed a negative pledge), and covenants to notify the grantee of any new address to which the goods may be moved.

Provisions which have been held not to be for the maintenance of the security<sup>1</sup>, and therefore to render the bill of sale void for non-compliance with the statutory form of a security bill<sup>2</sup>, include covenants by the grantor not to obtain credit to the extent of £10 without the consent of the grantee<sup>3</sup>, covenants to allow the grantee to affix to premises in the occupation of the grantor placards referring to the goods<sup>4</sup>, and provisions that upon exercise of a power of sale by the grantee the purchaser should not be bound to inquire whether default had been made by the grantor<sup>5</sup>.

As was pointed out in the latter case, such a provision cannot be said to be for the maintenance of the security since it does not operate until after the power of sale has been exercised, and nor is it a defeasance, for it fulfils instead of defeating the operation of the deed, and its effect is to prejudice the grantor by depriving him of a possible remedy against a purchaser taking with notice of the bill of sale.

BILLS OF SALE/(3) SECURITY BILLS OF SALE/(vii) Form and Contents/B. STATUTORY FORM CONSIDERED/1740. Defeasance.

1740. Defeasance.

A defeasance, for the purposes of the statutory form of a security bill of sale<sup>1</sup>, is a provision which limits or defeats the operation of the bill<sup>2</sup>.

1 The term 'defeasance' ordinarily denotes a provision which defeats the operation of a deed but is contained in some other deed or document, as opposed to being a term of the deed itself: Re Storey, ex p Popplewell (1882) 21 ChD 73 at 81, CA, per Jessel MR. However, this strict construction is obviously not applicable in the context of the Bills of Sale Acts (ie the Bills of Sale Act 1878 and the Bills of Sale Act (1878) Amendment Act 1882: see PARA 1630), which require terms for defeasance to be inserted in the bill itself; and for the purpose of the Bills of Sale Acts a defeasance must accordingly be taken to denote a condition in the nature of a defeasance: Blaiberg v Beckett (1886) 18 QBD 96 at 101, CA, per Lord Esher MR.

As to the statutory form and the requirement that security bills of sale are to be in accordance with it see the Bills of Sale Act (1878) Amendment Act 1882 s 9, Schedule; and PARA 1711. BILLS OF SALE/(3) SECURITY BILLS OF SALE/(vii) Form and Contents/B. STATUTORY FORM CONSIDERED/1741. Power of seizure.

1741. Power of seizure.

The statutory form of a security bill of sale<sup>1</sup> contains a proviso limiting the grounds of seizure<sup>2</sup>. This proviso, the omission of which apparently renders the bill void as not in accordance with the form<sup>3</sup>, makes it clear that a bill will not conform to the form if it stipulates, directly or indirectly<sup>4</sup>, for a power to seize in events other than those specified<sup>5</sup>. Thus if the grantee is given the right to seize for breach of a covenant which, though for the maintenance of the security, is not necessary for that purpose, the bill will be void<sup>6</sup>. It is for the court to decide whether the covenant is necessary for the maintenance of the security<sup>7</sup>, and the court is not bound by a statement in the bill itself that the covenant is necessary for such maintenance<sup>8</sup>.

If power is given in the bill to seize on grounds other than those permitted by statute<sup>9</sup>, the defect in form thus produced is not cured by inclusion of the proviso in the statutory form limiting the grounds of seizure to those set out in the statute<sup>10</sup>, for the inclusion of the wider power is misleading and inconsistent with the proviso.

1 As to the statutory form and the requirement that security bills of sale are to be in accordance with it see the Bills of Sale Act (1878) Amendment Act 1882 s 9, Schedule; and PARA 1711. As to the characteristics of the form see PARA 1716. As to the statutory definition of 'bill of sale' see PARA 1638 et seq. As to bills of sale at common law see PARA 1620 et seq.

2 The grounds of seizure are limited to those set out in the Bills of Sale Act (1878) Amendment Act 1882 s 7: see PARA 1789.

3 Thomas v Kelly (1888) 13 App Cas 506 at 519, HL, per Lord Macnaghten.

4 Barr v Kingsford (1887) 56 LT 861, where a provision for payment on default in performance of agreements not necessary for maintaining the security was held to avoid the bill.

5 Davis v Burton (1883) 11 QBD 537, CA. The reference in the text to events other than those specified is a reference to events other than those specified in the Bills of Sale Act (1878) Amendment Act 1882 s 7: see PARA 1789. Thus a bill is avoided by a power to seize if the grantor should enter into liquidation, or compound with his creditors (Barr v Kingsford (1887) 56 LT 861), or take the benefit of any bankruptcy legislation (Gilroy v Bowey (1888) 59 LT 223), or do any act whereby he renders himself liable to become bankrupt (Re Williams, ex p Pearce (1883) 25 ChD 656). However, a power to seize if the grantor should do or suffer anything whereby he becomes bankrupt is in substance the same as the Bills of Sale Act (1878) Amendment Act 1882 s 7(2) (see PARA 1789), and valid: Re Munday, ex p Allam (1884) 14 QBD 43, DC.

BILLS OF SALE/(3) SECURITY BILLS OF SALE/(vii) Form and Contents/B. STATUTORY FORM CONSIDERED/1742. Power of sale.

1742. Power of sale.

An express power of sale may be inserted in a bill of sale<sup>1</sup>, but this is not obligatory, since the Bills of Sale Act (1878) Amendment Act 1882 provides for a power to seize in certain events<sup>2</sup>, and after the expiration of five clear days from the seizure, within which period the grantor may apply for relief<sup>3</sup>, the grantee can proceed with removal and sale<sup>4</sup>.

The statutory powers of sale conferred upon mortgagees by deed<sup>5</sup> do not apply to bills of sale in the statutory form<sup>6</sup>. A power may be given to sell on or off the premises by public auction or private contract<sup>7</sup> but not to affix placards to the premises<sup>8</sup>. A power may not be given to the grantee to purchase the chattels at a valuation<sup>9</sup>, or, if he is an auctioneer, to retain commission as if selling for the grantor<sup>10</sup>.

Provisions that the purchaser upon a sale shall not be bound to inquire whether default has been made<sup>11</sup>, or that the receipt of the grantee shall be a sufficient discharge, the buyer not being required to see to the application of the purchase money<sup>12</sup>, go beyond the legal effect of the statutory form and are not for the maintenance of the security<sup>13</sup>.

BILLS OF SALE/(3) SECURITY BILLS OF SALE/(vii) Form and Contents/B. STATUTORY FORM CONSIDERED/1743. Proceeds of sale.

1743. Proceeds of sale.

A bill of sale<sup>1</sup> may provide that the grantee shall be at liberty to retain out of the proceeds of sale<sup>2</sup> his principal and interest, with all costs incurred in maintaining his security<sup>3</sup>, but a wider clause for retention of all expenses of attending the sale or incurred in relation to the security<sup>4</sup>, or to which the grantee may be put<sup>5</sup>, is not in accordance with the statutory form<sup>6</sup>, being capable of embracing expenses improperly incurred and also expenses incurred prior to execution of the bill<sup>7</sup>. A prior or contemporaneous collateral agreement for payment of commission to the grantee on sale of the goods is permissible, for it does not touch the security or affect the rights of the parties under the statutory form, but if such an agreement goes further and entitles the grantee to take the commission out of the proceeds of sale the effect is to enlarge the security conferred by the bill beyond what the statutory form permits, thus constituting a condition (and possibly also a declaration of trust) which is deemed to be part of the bill so that it is not in accordance with the statutory form<sup>8</sup>. These provisions do not, however, extend to a separate agreement made subsequent to and independent of the bill of sale<sup>9</sup>.

1744. Execution by grantor.

The statutory form of a security bill of sale<sup>1</sup> requires the bill to be signed, sealed and delivered by the grantor. It is not, however, essential that execution should be at the foot of the body of the bill: execution at the foot of an annexed schedule suffices<sup>2</sup>. Moreover, sealing is no longer required for the valid execution of a deed by an individual<sup>3</sup>.

STATUTORY FORM CONSIDERED/1745. Attestation.

1745. Attestation.

The attestation clause is an essential part of the statutory form of a security bill of sale<sup>1</sup> and must be meticulously completed. The name, address<sup>2</sup> and description<sup>3</sup> of the attesting witness or witnesses<sup>4</sup> are required by the statutory form to be stated, and the name alone without address and description is insufficient<sup>5</sup>. A slight error in the description will not invalidate the bill if the description is substantially correct and does not mislead<sup>6</sup>, but a material defect is fatal and cannot be cured by a correction in the supporting affidavit filed on registration<sup>7</sup> or by extraneous evidence. Where a witness attests more than one attestation clause, adding his description to only one, it is sufficient if it appears on the face of the bill, as by comparison of handwriting, that the witness in each case is the same, but if extraneous evidence is necessary to prove this fact, the bill of sale will be void as not in accordance with the statutory form<sup>8</sup>.

1 As to the statutory form and the requirement that security bills of sale are to be in accordance with it see the Bills of Sale Act (1878) Amendment Act 1882 s 9, Schedule; and PARA 1711. As to the characteristics of the form see PARA 1716. As to the statutory definition of 'bill of sale' see PARA 1638 et seq. As to bills of sale at common law see PARA 1620 et seq.

2 This may be the business address of the witness, not necessarily his private residence: Simmons v Woodward [1892] AC 100, HL; and see PARA 1753.

3 By 'description' is meant the profession, trade or calling of the witness (Coulson v Dickson (1890) 25 QBD 110, CA), or if he has none, his style or addition (see Sims v Trollope & Sons [1897] 1 QB 24, CA, where the witness had no occupation). The description of a person of no occupation as a 'gentleman' has been held sufficient, it not being necessary to add that the person described has no occupation: Gray v Jones (1863) 14

CBNS 743; Morewood v South Yorkshire Rly and River Dun Co (1858) 3 H & N 798; Smith v Cheese (1875) 1 CPD 60. A peer may be described by his title: Re Earl of Limerick (1862) 7 Ir Jur NS 65. Hence the word 'description', though including occupation, is wider than this and, since almost everybody must have some style or addition, even if they have no occupation, the fact that the attesting witness has no occupation will not normally justify the absence of any description whatsoever: Sims v Trollope & Sons above at 26 per Lord Esher MR. Similarly, the words 'of no occupation' will not normally suffice as a description. A witness who is a married woman must state her occupation if she has one (Kemble v Addison [1900] 1 QB 430, DC), otherwise she is sufficiently described as 'married woman' (Usher v Martin (1889) 61 LT 778, DC), or as 'the wife of . . . ' (although if a married woman so describes herself when she also engages in business to a limited extent, the description may not be sufficient if the failure to refer to her occupation tends to mislead as to identification: see Neverson v Seymour (1907) 97 LT 788, DC, a decision on the sufficiency of a description of the grantor's occupation in the affidavit of due execution).

4 Apart from the requirements of the statutory form, a bill of sale by way of security is void as regards the chattels comprised in it unless attested by one or more credible witnesses, not being parties: see PARA 1753.

6 See Re Wood, ex p McHattie (1878) 10 ChD 398, CA, a decision on the sufficiency of a description of the grantor's name and address.

7 Parsons v Brand, Coulson v Dickson (1890) 25 QBD 110, CA. A fortiori omission of the description altogether cannot be cured by the affidavit: Blankenstein v Robertson (1890) 24 QBD 543, DC.

BILLS OF SALE/(3) SECURITY BILLS OF SALE/(vii) Form and Contents/B. STATUTORY FORM CONSIDERED/1746. Schedule.

1746. Schedule.

Every bill of sale<sup>1</sup> by way of security must have annexed to it, or written on it, a schedule containing an inventory of the personal chattels<sup>2</sup> comprised in it<sup>3</sup>. The Bills of Sale Act (1878) Amendment Act 1882 provides that a bill has effect only in respect of the personal chattels specifically described in the schedule and, save as that Act otherwise provides<sup>4</sup>, is void, except as against the grantor, in respect of any personal chattels not so specifically described<sup>5</sup>. However, where the bill entirely omits a schedule, this provision, which leaves the bill valid as against the grantor, gives way to the provision which renders a bill totally void if it is not in accordance with the statutory form<sup>6</sup>, and since the statutory form refers to a schedule, the omission of a schedule precludes the bill from according with the form<sup>7</sup>.

The schedule must be confined to personal chattels capable of specific description<sup>8</sup>. It cannot therefore include after-acquired chattels other than substituted articles falling within the statutory exception<sup>9</sup>, nor can it embrace property other than personal chattels, such as land or chattels real<sup>10</sup>.

1 As to the statutory definition of 'bill of sale' see PARA 1638 et seq. As to bills of sale at common law see PARA 1620 et seq.

2 As to the meaning of 'personal chattels' see PARA 1662 et seq.

3 Bills of Sale Act (1878) Amendment Act 1882 s 4. The Bills of Sale Act 1878 requires that a copy of every schedule or inventory annexed to or referred to in a bill of sale be registered: see s 10(2); and PARA 1760.

4 This requirement of the Bills of Sale Act (1878) Amendment Act 1882 s 4 does not apply to any growing crops, fixtures, plant or machinery within s 6, which also exempts such things from the requirement of true ownership (see PARA 1699). Moreover, quite apart from s 6 the bill may legitimately provide for the replacement of worn out, damaged or destroyed chattels, this being a term for the maintenance of the security (see PARA 1737), and the chattels to be substituted are obviously incapable of specific description at the time the bill is given.

5 Bills of Sale Act (1878) Amendment Act 1882 s 4.

6 In the Bills of Sale Act (1878) Amendment Act 1882 s 9: see PARA 1711. As to the statutory form and the requirement that security bills of sale are to be in accordance with it see s 9, Schedule; and PARA 1711. As to the characteristics of the form see PARA 1716 et seq.

7 Griffin v Union Deposit Bank (1887) 3 TLR 608; Brocklehurst v Railway Printing and Publishing Co [1884] WN 70. The schedule must be attached at or before the time the bill of sale is executed: Griffin v Union Deposit Bank above.

8 Thomas v Kelly (1888) 13 App Cas 506, HL. However if chattels capable of specific description are included in the schedule without a sufficient description, this is not a defect in form within the Bills of Sale Act (1878) Amendment Act 1882 s 9 (see PARA 1711), but merely offends against s 4 so as to render the bill void, except as against the grantor, in respect of such chattels: Thomas v Kelly. As to what constitutes a specific description for these purposes see PARA 1747.

BILLS OF SALE/(3) SECURITY BILLS OF SALE/(vii) Form and Contents/C. DESCRIPTION OF CHATTELS/1747. What description suffices.

C. DESCRIPTION OF CHATTELS

1747. What description suffices.

The Bills of Sale Act (1878) Amendment Act 1882 requires any bill of sale<sup>1</sup> by way of security for the payment of money to have annexed to it or written on it a schedule containing an inventory of the personal chattels<sup>2</sup> comprised in it, and makes such a bill void, except as against the grantor, in respect of any personal chattels not so specifically described<sup>3</sup>. This provision embodies two distinct requirements: (1) an inventory; and (2) a specific description. The effect of this is that the bill must contain or have annexed to it that which in the ordinary business sense would be considered an inventory<sup>4</sup>, and that the bill will be effective against third parties only as regards such chattels in the inventory as are specifically described.

The description must be sufficient to distinguish the class of chattels assigned<sup>5</sup>, but where the bill comprises all chattels on the premises a less detailed description is sufficient and it may not be necessary to describe each article, or to state the number of articles in each class, especially in the case of chattels in a particular room of a private house<sup>6</sup>.

In the case of chattels of a kind requiring to be replaced from time to time, such as livestock on a farm or stock-in-trade in a shop or showroom, a more specific description is required than for articles that are not normally changed with frequency, such as furniture in a private house<sup>7</sup>. A mere description by number will not in general suffice in the case of stock<sup>8</sup> unless it is clear from the bill that the stated number is intended to represent all the stock on the premises<sup>9</sup>.

1 As to the statutory definition of 'bill of sale' see PARA 1638 et seq. As to bills of sale at common law see PARA 1620 et seq.

2 As to the meaning of 'personal chattels' see PARA 1662 et seq.

5 See Roberts v Roberts (1884) 13 QBD 794, CA, where the description 'household furniture and effects' was held insufficient. A description of a bathchair as a four-wheeled carriage and set of cloth cushions has been held sufficient: Edwards v Marston [1891] 1 QB 225, CA. So also has the description of a Premier 'plating' machine by clerical error for 'platen': Simmonds v Hughes (1890) 6 TLR 443, CA. To support an objection to a description of chattels, on the ground that it is not sufficiently specific, it must be shown either that, from the nature of the description, the articles cannot be identified, or that, in the particular case, the chattels themselves are incapable of identification: Hickley v Greenwood (1890) 25 QBD 277, DC. It is not necessary to describe the premises where the goods are situated: Re Lane, ex p Hill (1886) 17 QBD 74, DC.

6 Davidson v Carlton Bank [1893] 1 QB 82, CA ('Study: 1,800 vols of books as per catalogue. Miscellaneous: silver-plated goods, china tea service, coffee service, knives, forks . . .'); Jones v Roberts (1890) 34 Sol Jo 254 ('all my farming stock, comprising four horses, five cows'); Cooper v Huggins (1889) 34 Sol Jo 96 ('twelve oil paintings in gilt frames').

7 Davies v Jenkins [1900] 1 QB 133, DC (where a description as 'stock: two horses, four cows' was held insufficient); followed in Herbert's Trustee v Higgins [1926] Ch 794.

8 Witt v Banner (1887) 20 QBD 114, CA (where a description by number of a stock of oil paintings and water-colours in gilt frames, and unframed, was held insufficient); Carpenter v Deen (1889) 23 QBD 566, CA (where a description of farm stock as 'twenty-one milch cows' was held insufficient). In Herbert's Trustee v Higgins [1926] Ch 794, the description 'nineteen short-horns and Jersey cow' was held sufficient, having regard to the identification by breed, whereas 'store-cattle: two steers, five heifers' was held insufficient.

9 Jones v Roberts (1890) 34 Sol Jo 254; Hickley v Greenwood (1890) 25 QBD 277, DC. In the latter case, the decisions in Witt v Banner (1887) 20 QBD 114, CA, and Carpenter v Deen (1889) 23 QBD 566, CA (see note 8), were distinguished on the ground that the bills of sale in those cases were construed by the court as intended to cover stock of the stated number from time to time on the premises and not the specific items of stock on the premises when the bills were given.

BILLS OF SALE/(3) SECURITY BILLS OF SALE/(vii) Form and Contents/D. DEFEASANCES, CONDITIONS AND DECLARATIONS OF TRUST/1748. Defeasances, etc, deemed part of bill.

D. DEFEASANCES, CONDITIONS AND DECLARATIONS OF TRUST

1748. Defeasances, etc, deemed part of bill.

The Bills of Sale Act 1878 provides that, if a bill of sale<sup>1</sup> is made or given subject to any defeasance or condition, or declaration of trust not contained in the body of the bill, the defeasance, condition or declaration of trust is deemed to be part of the bill, and must be written on the same paper or parchment therewith before the registration, and be truly set forth in the copy required<sup>2</sup> to be filed with it, and as part of it, otherwise the registration is to be void<sup>3</sup>. However, if terms agreed to for the defeasance of the security are not inserted in a security bill, then under the Bills of Sale Act (1878) Amendment Act 1882 the bill will be void for failure to comply with the statutory form<sup>4</sup>.

The Bills of Sale Act 1878 avoids registration of a bill of sale not complying with the prescribed formalities, whether the defeasance, condition or declaration of trust is in favour of the grantor or the grantee, and the avoidance is not, as was at one time supposed<sup>5</sup>, confined to a defeasance, condition or declaration of trust limiting the rights of the grantee or affecting them prejudicially in favour of the grantor<sup>6</sup>.

3 Bills of Sale Act 1878 s 10(3). The object of this provision is to ensure that the true bargain is registered: see Pettit v Lodge and Harper [1908] 1 KB 744 at 749, CA, per Fletcher Moulton LJ; Kinnersley v Payne (1909) 100 LT 229; Smith v Whiteman [1909] 2 KB 437, CA; Hall v Whiteman [1912] 1 KB 683, CA; Cornell v May (1915) 112 LT 1085, DC. The difficulty of registration arising from the fact that only a defeasance anterior to or contemporaneous with a bill of sale can be registered would apparently require subsequent variations to be embodied in a new bill of sale: Cornell v May (1915) 112 LT 1085 at 1087, DC. BILLS OF SALE/(3) SECURITY BILLS OF SALE/(vii) Form and Contents/D. DEFEASANCES, CONDITIONS AND DECLARATIONS OF TRUST/1749. Meaning of 'defeasance'.

1749. Meaning of 'defeasance'.

A provision for defeasance of the security<sup>1</sup> is one which defeats or limits the operation of a bill of sale<sup>2</sup> or stipulates for its discharge in stated events. A stipulation is not a defeasance for the purpose of the Bills of Sale Acts<sup>3</sup> unless it is a term which is part and parcel of the agreement under which the bill is given<sup>4</sup>. A subsequent agreement varying or determining a bill is not a defeasance within the Acts<sup>5</sup>, though it may itself be registrable as a bill of sale<sup>6</sup>. Similarly, a mortgage granted prior to the bill is not a defeasance of the bill<sup>7</sup>.

Whilst the mere provision of collateral security is not a defeasance<sup>8</sup>, a collateral agreement which enables the grantee to call for payment earlier than he could call for it under the bill is a defeasance, since if payment were demanded and made under the collateral agreement this would discharge the bill sooner than would appear from the bill itself<sup>9</sup>. For the same reason, a promissory note or bill of exchange given at the same time as a bill of sale, for the same loan and as part of the same transaction, forms part of a single contract between the parties and is a defeasance if calling up payment earlier than it could have been called up under the bill<sup>10</sup>, although it is valid as a promissory note<sup>11</sup>. Indeed, any prior or contemporaneous bargain different from that expressed in the bill and suspending its operation<sup>12</sup> or limiting its effect as a security, as for example by altering the events on which a seizure may be made, is a defeasance which must be incorporated in the bill of sale and registered. Thus where a bill of sale provides for payment of principal by weekly instalments, together with the interest then due, an arrangement to substitute weekly instalments of a higher amount covering both principal and interest, so as to avoid the difficulty of calculating amounts of interest week by week, is a defeasance, even though the aggregate amount or principal and interest is not altered<sup>13</sup>.

The essence of a defeasance is that it in some way defeats or limits the operation of the bill. A condition which does not defeat but fulfils the operation of the deed, such as a condition for sale on default, is not a defeasance<sup>14</sup>, and neither is a condition which does not come into operation until after enforcement of the bill, such as a condition that upon sale by the grantee the purchaser shall not be bound to inquire whether default has been made<sup>15</sup>.

BILLS OF SALE/(3) SECURITY BILLS OF SALE/(vii) Form and Contents/D. DEFEASANCES, CONDITIONS AND DECLARATIONS OF TRUST/1750. Condition other than defeasance.

1750. Condition other than defeasance.

The word 'condition'<sup>1</sup> denotes a covenant or agreement which affects the right to redeem the goods on the one side, or the right to seize them on the other, but does not defeat or limit the operation of the bill of sale<sup>2</sup>. The distinction between a defeasance and a condition is important for two reasons. First, whilst the statutory form<sup>3</sup> requires all terms agreed for the defeasance of the security to be inserted in the bill<sup>4</sup>, a condition is not an integral part of the statutory form and its omission from the bill does not by itself prevent the bill from being in accordance with the statutory form but merely avoids the registration of the bill<sup>5</sup>. Secondly, whereas the parties are free to reach any agreement they choose as to maintenance or defeasance of the security<sup>6</sup>, other covenants in the bill must be limited to those contemplated by the statutory form<sup>7</sup>, and, since a condition not expressed in the bill but subject to which it is given is deemed to form part of the bill<sup>8</sup>, a condition that is not for the maintenance or defeasance of the security and that goes beyond what is permitted by the statutory form renders the bill void as not in conformity with the statutory form, even though the condition is not stated in the body of the bill<sup>9</sup>. Thus if there is a prior agreement to pay compound interest, the bill itself being restricted to simple interest as permitted by the statutory form, the prior agreement renders the bill void as not in accordance with the statutory form<sup>10</sup>. Hence, in the case of security bills, the provision in the Bills of Sale Act 1878 avoiding registration for failure to set out a condition subject to which the bill is given only has independent force where the unrecorded condition is one which would have been valid if inserted in the body of the bill<sup>11</sup>. If the condition could not have been validly stipulated in the bill, the provision in the Bills of Sale Act 1878 gives way to the stronger provision in the Bills of Sale Act (1878) Amendment Act 1882 rendering a bill totally void if it is not in accordance with the statutory form<sup>12</sup>.

1751. Declaration of trust.

It had been held under the Bills of Sale Act 1854 that the provision in that Act requiring registration of declarations of trust as part of a bill of sale<sup>1</sup> was aimed at sham bills by which the grantor, though ostensibly parting with his interest in the goods so as to place them outside the reach of creditors, took them back under a secret declaration of trust by the grantee, and the provision was considered not to apply where the grantee's declaration of trust was made not in favour of the grantor but in favour of a third party who had in fact advanced the money which ostensibly came from the grantee<sup>2</sup>. However, it seems that, under the provision of the Bills of Sale Act 1878<sup>3</sup>, any prior or contemporaneous declaration of trust affecting the rights of one of the parties to a bill of sale is to be deemed part of the bill, and registrable as such, whether or not it favours the grantor<sup>4</sup> and even where the declaration of trust is made by the grantee for the benefit of a third party<sup>5</sup>. However, a declaration of trust made subsequently to the bill is not affected by these provisions. An agreement by which the money advanced under a bill of sale is to be applied to discharge an existing indebtedness of the grantor to the grantee does not constitute a trust over the advanced sum in favour of the lender, who is merely a creditor, and does not constitute a declaration of trust<sup>6</sup>.

4 See Edwards v Marcus [1894] 1 QB 587, CA, in which it was held that despite dicta to the contrary by James LJ in Re Lees, ex p Collins (1875) 10 Ch App 367, a condition need not be one which prejudicially affects the grantee in order for the statutory provisions to apply.

5 Kinnersley v Payne (1909) 100 LT 229. Moreover, if the declaration of trust in favour of the third party is given because he advanced the consideration, though this is stated in the bill to have been furnished by the grantee, the bill is open to objection on the additional ground that the consideration is not truly stated: see Kinnersley v Payne; and PARAS 1704, 1709.

6 Thomas v Searles [1891] 2 QB 408, leaving open the question whether an effective trust of money advanced by the lender would fall within the statutory provisions.

BILLS OF SALE/(3) SECURITY BILLS OF SALE/(vii) Form and Contents/D. DEFEASANCES, CONDITIONS AND DECLARATIONS OF TRUST/1752. Stipulations not affected.

1752. Stipulations not affected.

It is not every collateral stipulation between the parties that is a defeasance, condition or declaration of trust for the purposes of the Bills of Sale Act 1878<sup>1</sup>. Only stipulations that affect the security, either directly or indirectly through personal covenants linked to the enforcement or redemption of the security, are brought within the statutory provisions<sup>2</sup>. Collateral agreements which do not in any way detract from the force of the bill of sale<sup>3</sup> or render it liable to discharge earlier than is apparent from the face of the bill are unaffected and do not require registration as part of the bill<sup>4</sup>. Thus an understanding that out of the advance the grantor should repay a debt owing by him to the grantee, in part secured by an existing bill of sale, is not a condition or declaration of trust<sup>5</sup>. Similarly a mere deposit by the grantor of a policy of insurance as collateral security for the debt secured by the bill of sale is not a defeasance or a condition<sup>6</sup>, nor is the guarantee of a third party to pay on demand any unpaid balance of loan and interest in the event of the bill of sale becoming inoperative or proving an insufficient security<sup>7</sup>.

Terms made subsequently to the bill and constituting a separate transaction are not within the statutory provisions<sup>8</sup>, and a prior mortgage is not a defeasance of a bill of sale given to secure the same loan<sup>9</sup>.

BILLS OF SALE/(3) SECURITY BILLS OF SALE/(viii) Attestation/1753. The requirement of attestation.

(viii) Attestation

1753. The requirement of attestation.

The Bills of Sale Act (1878) Amendment Act 1882 requires that the execution by the grantor of a bill of sale<sup>1</sup> given by way of security must be attested by one or more credible witness or witnesses, not being a party or parties to it<sup>2</sup>. If a named party to a bill is in truth a trustee for another, under some prior declaration of trust, then since that declaration of trust is deemed part of the bill<sup>3</sup>, the beneficiary is himself a party to the bill and cannot attest it<sup>4</sup>.

The provisions relating to attestation merely provide that failure to have the bill duly attested renders the bill void as regards the personal chattels<sup>5</sup> comprised in it<sup>6</sup>, but the statutory form<sup>7</sup> of a security bill requires the bill to be witnessed and the name, address and description of the witness to be inserted, and failure to comply with these requirements will render the bill wholly void for want of form<sup>8</sup>.

2    Bills of Sale Act (1878) Amendment Act 1882 s 10 (amended by the Statute Law Revision Act 1898). Normally one witness is sufficient, but if, instead of the grantor signing the bill himself, it is signed at his direction and in his presence then two attesting witnesses are required: see the Law of Property (Miscellaneous Provisions) Act 1989 s 1(3); and DEEDS AND OTHER INSTRUMENTS vol 13 (2007 Reissue) PARA 33. #### 1754. Necessity for registration.

The Bills of Sale Act (1878) Amendment Act 1882 requires every security bill of sale<sup>1</sup> to be registered under the Bills of Sale Act 1878<sup>2</sup>. If this is not done within the prescribed time and manner<sup>3</sup> the bill is rendered void in respect of the personal chattels<sup>4</sup> comprised in it<sup>5</sup>.

IN GENERAL/1755. Registration of successive bills.

1755. Registration of successive bills.

Before the Bills of Sale Act 1878 came into operation<sup>1</sup>, it had become a practice to grant a series of bills of sale<sup>2</sup>, each being granted before the time for registration of the preceding bill had expired and each cancelling the preceding bill, so that the grantee was able to obtain a continuous security interest whilst deferring registration until this became necessary, in which event he would register the last in the series<sup>3</sup>. Avoidance of the registration requirements in this way is prevented by the Bills of Sale Act 1878, which provides that a bill of sale executed within, or on the expiration of seven days after, the execution of a prior unregistered bill is void so far as it is a security for the same debt and so far as respects any personal chattels<sup>4</sup> which were comprised in the prior bill, unless the later bill is proved to have been given bona fide for the purpose of correcting some material error in the prior bill<sup>5</sup>. A second bill executed more than seven days after execution of a prior unregistered bill of sale of the same chattels is valid<sup>6</sup>.

BILLS OF SALE/(3) SECURITY BILLS OF SALE/(ix) Registration/A. IN GENERAL/1756. Effect of valid registration.

1756. Effect of valid registration.

Registration of a bill of sale<sup>1</sup>, although necessary to maintain the validity of the security, does not of itself constitute notice to third parties, since for these purposes the doctrine of constructive notice does not apply to chattels<sup>2</sup>. As a rule this will not prejudicially affect the grantee, because having registered he will usually be able to assert against the world the legal title acquired by him under the bill. It is thought that, following the abolition of the doctrine of market overt<sup>3</sup>, there are no exceptions to the rule nemo dat quod non habet<sup>4</sup> applicable to security bills of sale which pass the legal title<sup>5</sup>.

3 The doctrine of market overt was abolished by the Sale of Goods (Amendment) Act 1994 s 1: see MARKETS, FAIRS AND STREET TRADING vol 29(2) (Reissue) PARA 1026.

4 I.e. no one can give what he does not have.

5 As to security bills in which the grantee's title is purely equitable, leaving it liable to be overridden on a transfer of the legal title to a bona fide purchaser without notice, see PARA 1817. As to absolute bills see PARAS 1801, 1840.

1757. Remedies for wrongful registration.

A person prejudicially affected by an improper registration of a bill of sale<sup>1</sup>, or by registration of a document which does not constitute a bill of sale at all, can apply for an order expunging the registration<sup>2</sup>. The power to make such an order derives not from the Bills of Sale Acts<sup>3</sup> but from the inherent jurisdiction of the court to direct removal from its files and registers of any matter improperly placed on them<sup>4</sup>. No claim for damages will lie for improper registration unless the claimant proves malice on the part of the defendant<sup>5</sup>.

1 As to the statutory definition of 'bill of sale' see PARA 1638 et seq. As to bills of sale at common law see PARA 1620 et seq. As to the necessity for registration see PARA 1754.

2 Application is made by witness statement or affidavit or claim form (see CPR Sch 1 RSC Ord 95 r 1; Practice Direction--Bills of Sale PD 95). As to applications see further CIVIL PROCEDURE vol 12 (2009) PARA 1699. As to expunging the registration see also PARAS 1784-1785.

1758. Mode of registration.

The mode of registration of a security bill of sale<sup>1</sup> is regulated by the Bills of Sale Act 1878. The bill, with every schedule or inventory annexed to it or referred to in it<sup>2</sup>, and a true copy<sup>3</sup> of the bill and of every schedule or inventory and of every attestation of the execution of such bill, together with an affidavit containing the required particulars<sup>4</sup>, must be presented to the registrar<sup>5</sup>, and the copy of the bill of sale and the original affidavit must be filed with him<sup>6</sup>.

1 As to the statutory definition of 'bill of sale' see PARA 1638 et seq. As to bills of sale at common law see PARA 1620 et seq. As to the necessity for registration see PARA 1754.

2 A catalogue of chattels referred to in the schedule to a bill of sale, when the chattels can be identified without referring to the catalogue, is not a schedule or inventory within the meaning of the Bills of Sale Act 1878: Davidson v Carlton Bank [1893] 1 QB 82, CA.

3 See PARA 1761 et seq.

4 As to the affidavit see PARA 1764 et seq.

5 The office of the registrar is executed by the masters of the Supreme Court, Queen's Bench Division, any one of whom may perform all or any of the duties of the registrar: see the Bills of Sale Act 1878 s 13. As from a day to be appointed, the reference to the Supreme Court is replaced by a reference to the Senior Courts: s 13 (prospectively amended by the Constitutional Reform Act 2005 Sch 11 Pt 2 para 4(1), (3)). At the date at which this volume states the law no such day had been appointed.

1758 Mode of registration

NOTE 5--Appointed day is 1 October 2009: SI 2009/1604.

Halsbury's Laws of England/FINANCIAL SERVICES AND INSTITUTIONS (VOLUME 48 (2008) 5TH EDITION, PARAS 1-589; VOLUME 49 (2008) 5TH EDITION, PARAS 590-1619; VOLUME 50 (2008) 5TH EDITION, PARAS 1620-2586)/7. BILLS OF SALE/(3) SECURITY BILLS OF SALE/(ix) Registration/A. IN GENERAL/1759. Time limit for registration.

1759. Time limit for registration.

A security bill of sale<sup>1</sup> must be registered<sup>2</sup> within seven clear days<sup>3</sup> after its execution or, if executed in any place out of England, within seven clear days after the time at which it would, in the ordinary course of post, arrive in England, if posted immediately after its execution<sup>4</sup>. During the time allowed for registration, a bill, if otherwise valid, is effectual though unregistered<sup>5</sup>, and this is so even if within that time there purports to have been registration which turns out to be insufficient<sup>6</sup>. If an execution creditor has the goods seized within the time allowed for registration of the bill and before it has been registered, the unregistered bill is at that time effective against the execution creditor<sup>7</sup>, who will be liable to the grantee for damages for conversion<sup>8</sup>. This would appear to be the case even if the bill is not subsequently registered in due time, and indeed even if it is never registered at all<sup>9</sup>, but whilst non-registration will not validate the original wrongful seizure by the execution creditor, yet, once the period allowed for registration has expired without registration taking place, the bill becomes void as to the chattels comprised in it<sup>10</sup>, so that from that moment the grantee's security comes to an end and the rights of the execution creditor prevail<sup>11</sup>.

During the period allowed for registration the bill remains effective even if before registration the grantor becomes bankrupt, and such bankruptcy does not affect the grantee's right to perfect his title by registration during the remainder of the period<sup>12</sup>. However, once the period has expired, the bill, if not registered in due time, becomes void as to the security and thus ceases to have any effect on the grantor's trustee in bankruptcy or creditors.

3 As to the computation of such periods see TIME vol 97 (2010) PARA 329 et seq. When the time for registration expires on a Sunday or other day on which the registrar's office is closed, the registration is valid if made on the next following day on which the office is open: Bills of Sale Act 1878 s 22. Hence a bill made on a Saturday may be registered at any time up to and including the second Monday afterwards. Weekends and public holidays are not, however, otherwise excluded from the computation of the seven days. Power is given to extend the time for registration in certain cases: see s 14; and PARA 1779 et seq. As to the registrar see PARA 1758 note 5.

The affidavit presented to and filed with the registrar<sup>1</sup> must prove:

- 186 (1) the due execution and attestation of the bill of sale<sup>2</sup>;
- 187 (2) the residence<sup>3</sup> and occupation<sup>4</sup> of the grantor and of every attesting witness<sup>5</sup>; and
- 188 (3) the true date and time of execution of the bill of sale<sup>6</sup>.

It is sufficient to state that the bill of sale was executed on the day of which it bears the date. An obvious mistake in the date, as 1806 for 1876, is not a fatal defect: Lamb v Bruce, Duggan v Bruce, Cooper v Bruce (1876) 45 LJQB 538, DC.

Affidavits<sup>1</sup> may be sworn before a master of any division of the High Court of Justice or a commissioner for oaths<sup>2</sup>, and every officer so empowered by the Civil Procedure Rules has authority to take oaths and affidavits for the purpose of proceedings in the Supreme Court<sup>3</sup>.

The Civil Procedure Rules relating to affidavits<sup>4</sup> apply to an affidavit on registration of a bill of sale<sup>5</sup>, and such an affidavit must be sworn before a person who is independent of the parties and their representatives<sup>6</sup>. If an affidavit on registration is sworn in contravention of the Civil Procedure Rules, registration of the bill is rendered void<sup>7</sup>.

Where the commissioner does not sign his name to the jurat, this is an omission of substance rendering the affidavit incomplete and registration of the bill void<sup>8</sup>.

5TH EDITION, PARAS 1620-2586)/7. BILLS OF SALE/(3) SECURITY BILLS OF SALE/(ix) Registration/D. AFFIDAVIT OF DUE EXECUTION/1767. Description of parties and witnesses.

1767. Description of parties and witnesses.

The affidavit filed on registration<sup>1</sup> must contain a description of the residence and occupation of the grantor<sup>2</sup> and of every attesting witness to the bill of sale<sup>3</sup>, in order that creditors and others concerned may make inquiries before dealing with the grantor<sup>4</sup>.

Although the Bills of Sale Acts<sup>5</sup> make no provision for stating the names of the parties, a wrong forename or surname, when coupled with a misdescription of occupation or residence, may make the latter so inaccurate and misleading as to avoid registration<sup>6</sup>.

The statutory form of a bill of sale by way of security requires the address and description of the grantor and every attesting witness to be stated on the face of the bill<sup>7</sup>, but this information must be given also in the affidavit filed on registration<sup>8</sup>.

If the affidavit contains no description<sup>9</sup> or an untrue or mis-stated description<sup>10</sup>, registration will be avoided, and a bill of sale containing a correct description cannot be used to cure a wrong description<sup>11</sup> or absence of description<sup>12</sup> in the affidavit. Reference may, however, be made to the bill of sale in order to supplement an insufficient or ambiguous description in the affidavit<sup>13</sup>, and mere surplusage in the affidavit may be rejected if the meaning is clear<sup>14</sup>.

The affidavit need not itself verify the address and occupation directly: it suffices if the affidavit refers to the description of address and occupation given in the bill<sup>15</sup>.

The burden of proof is on the person alleging that the description is misleading<sup>16</sup> or should have been otherwise stated<sup>17</sup>, or that, where no occupation is described, the person in fact has one<sup>18</sup>, and, when the facts are ascertained, the question of sufficiency of description is for the judge<sup>19</sup>.

Where the omission or mis-statement of the grantor's name, residence or occupation was due to inadvertence, the court may cure this by ordering rectification of the register<sup>20</sup>.

<sup>3</sup> Bills of Sale Act 1878 s 10(2). Every witness must be described (Pickard v Marriage (1876) 1 ExD 364) and every grantor (Hooper v Parmenter (1862) 10 WR 648). As to the statutory definition of 'bill of sale' see PARA 1638 et seq. As to bills of sale at common law see PARA 1620 et seq.

<sup>7</sup> See PARA 1745. As to the statutory form and the requirement that security bills of sale are to be in accordance with it see the Bills of Sale Act (1878) Amendment Act 1882 s 9, Schedule; and PARA 1711.

Cf Brandon Hill Ltd v Lane [1915] 1 KB 250, DC, where the wife was a party to the bill of sale given to secure a joint debt, but, as she was not the grantor of the bill, the affidavit was not defective by reason that it did not set out her address or description.

- 14 Blount v Harris (1878) 4 QBD 603, CA, where the addition of 'in the City of London' to the description 'Acton' was disregarded.
- 15 Wilcoxon v Searby, Foulger v Taylor (1860) 5 H & N 202. The decision in Sladden v Sergeant (1858) 1 F & F 322, upholding an affidavit in which the attesting witness described himself merely as 'deponent', would not, it is thought, be followed.

BILLS OF SALE/(3) SECURITY BILLS OF SALE/(ix) Registration/D. AFFIDAVIT OF DUE EXECUTION/1768. Residence.

1768. Residence.

The residence of the grantor and attesting witnesses must be described in the affidavit<sup>1</sup> with such reasonable certainty and sufficiency as to identify them, the degree of particularity required depending on the circumstances of the case<sup>2</sup>. In some instances, the description may need to be more detailed than in others, so that whilst a small town may be a sufficient address without giving a street<sup>3</sup>, in a more populated locality it may be necessary to state not only the street but the number of the residence, and a misleading mistake in number may avoid registration<sup>4</sup>.

The residence required is not necessarily the place where the party lives<sup>5</sup>. An address where he is likely to be found, as, for instance, his place of business or his employer's place of business, is sufficient<sup>6</sup>. However, it is not necessary to set out every residence or place of business, and if the person described has two or more addresses it suffices to describe him as being of the principal one<sup>7</sup>.

1     le under the Bills of Sale Act 1878 s 10(2): see PARA 1758. Under certain circumstances, local registration may be necessary: see PARA 1776 et seq.

2     See Briggs v Boss (1868) LR 3 QB 268 (where the description of the witness as 'of Hanley', without further address, was held sufficient, letters so addressed reaching him). Subsequent decisions, however, indicate that this was an extreme case which will not be extended: Larchin v North Western Deposit Bank (1875) LR 10 Exch 64; Murray v Mackenzie (1875) LR 10 CP 625.

3 Hickley v Greenwood (1890) 63 LT 288, DC; Gardner v Smart (1883) Cab & El 14; Briggs v Boss (1868) LR 3 QB 268. The likelihood of such an address being sufficient is greater where the name of grantor or witness in question is unusual: Gardner v Smart above.

4 Murray v Mackenzie (1875) LR 10 CP 625; Marks v Derrick (1899) 80 LT 60, DC.

5 Blackwell v England (1857) 8 E & B 541; Attenborough v Thompson (1857) 2 H & N 559; Hewer v Cox (1860) 3 E & E 428.

6 Thus a clerk may be sufficiently described as of his employer's address, where he can be found during business hours: Simmons v Woodward [1892] AC 100, HL; Blackwell v England (1857) 8 E & B 541.

7 Greenham v Child (1889) 24 QBD 29, DC; Re Moulson, ex p Knightly (1882) 51 LJCh 823.

Halsbury's Laws of England/FINANCIAL SERVICES AND INSTITUTIONS (VOLUME 48 (2008) 5TH EDITION, PARAS 1-589; VOLUME 49 (2008) 5TH EDITION, PARAS 590-1619; VOLUME 50 (2008) 5TH EDITION, PARAS 1620-2586)/7. BILLS OF SALE/(3) SECURITY BILLS OF SALE/(ix) Registration/D. AFFIDAVIT OF DUE EXECUTION/1769. Occupation.

1769. Occupation.

Occupation, for the purpose of the affidavit<sup>1</sup>, is the trade, business or calling which a person pursues to get a living<sup>2</sup>, or the business in which a man is usually engaged<sup>3</sup>. If a person has an occupation, it must be described<sup>4</sup>, and, where he has a second occupation which is not a mere subsidiary occupation<sup>5</sup>, this must be described if its omission would mislead<sup>6</sup>, but not otherwise<sup>7</sup>. If a person has no occupation, it is unnecessary to state this in the affidavit<sup>8</sup>; nor is it necessary to set out details of business undertakings in which he may be interested or engaged<sup>9</sup>.

If the true description of the occupation is omitted, it is immaterial whether creditors are in fact misled or likely to be misled<sup>10</sup>.

1 See under the Bills of Sale Act 1878 s 10(2): see PARA 1758.

2 Tuton v Sanoner (1858) 3 H & N 280. See also Barron v Potter [1915] 3 KB 593, CA, adopting the definition of Kelly CB in Luckin v Hamlyn (1869) 21 LT 366 ('the trade or calling by which the maker of the bill ordinarily seeks to get his livelihood').

3 Luckin v Hamlyn (1869) 21 LT 366; Neversson v Seymour (1907) 97 LT 788, DC.

4 The following descriptions have been held sufficient: a description of a merchant shipbroker as broker (Gugen v Sampson (1866) 4 F & F 974); a description as a government clerk, without stating his department (Grant v Shaw (1872) LR 7 QB 700); a description as an insurance clerk (Grant v Shaw); a description of a clerk to an accountant as an accountant (Briggs v Boss (1868) LR 3 QB 268); a description as a clerk, not stating his employer's occupation (Lamb v Bruce, Duggan v Bruce, Cooper v Bruce (1876) 45 LJQB 538, DC).

The following descriptions have been held to be insufficient: 'married woman' if she has an occupation (Kemble v Addison [1900] 1 QB 430, DC); 'gentleman' where the person described has any office or employment (Allen v Thompson (1856) 1 H & N 15), or is a solicitor's clerk (Brodrick v Scalé (1871) LR 6 CP 98; Beales v Tennant (1860) 29 LJQB 188), or a silk buyer (Adams v Graham (1864) 33 LJQB 71). It is not a correct description to describe a person as a Baptist minister where the person described, though a qualified Baptist minister, has had no pastorate for five years and is a director of several companies (Barron v Potter [1915] 3 KB 593, CA); to describe a manager of a theatre (Re Vining, ex p Hooman (1870) LR 10 Eq 63) or a commercial traveller (Matthews v Buchanan (1889) 5 TLR 373, CA) as 'esquire' or as 'gentleman of no occupation'; to describe a schoolmaster as a tutor and by a wrong name (Lee v Turner (1888) 20 QBD 773, DC); to describe a clerk in the accountant's department of a railway company as an accountant (Larchin v North Western Deposit Bank (1875) LR 10 Exch 64); or to describe a partner in a soap business as of no occupation (Re Boddington, ex p Salaman (1915) 84 LJB 2119).

5 See Re Haynes, ex p National Mercantile Bank (1880) 15 ChD 42, CA, where it was considered doubtful whether the activity asserted should have been described as an occupation, and it was also held unnecessary to state an occupation which the grantor had ceased to carry on at the date of execution of the bill.

6 Barron v Potter [1915] 3 KB 593 at 608, CA, per Pickford LJ, and at 599 per Atkin LJ; Re Fitzpatrick (1886) 19 LR 206.

8 Smith v Cheese (1875) 1 CPD 60; Re Symonds, ex p Young (1880) 42 LT 744.

9 Luckin v Hamlyn (1869) 21 LT 366 (where a widow, so described, was managing a farm as executrix); Davies v Jenkins [1900] 1 QB 133 (where a married woman, so described, was running a farm in her husband's absence); Usher v Martin (1889) 61 LT 778, DC (where a married woman was the leaseholder of a public house conducted by her husband). The question whether a description of the occupation of a named woman carrying on a business who lives with and keeps house for her husband is sufficient is one of degree: Neverson v Seymour (1907) 97 LT 788. Cf Re Boddington, ex p Salaman (1915) 84 LJB 2119, in which the court declined to follow Feast v Robinson (1894) 63 LJCh 321 (where the sleeping partner in a business was held correctly described as of no occupation).

F. THE REGISTER

1772. Form and contents of register.

The register of bills of sale<sup>1</sup> in the form prescribed by the Bills of Sale Act 1878<sup>2</sup> is maintained in the Central Office of the High Court<sup>3</sup>. There is a single register for each year, divided alphabetically and subdivided by vowel. Entry is effected against the surname of the grantor. Each volume has an index at the beginning which is itself alphabetical, in accordance with the requirements of the Bills of Sale Act 1878<sup>4</sup>. In the volumes of the register are entered in separate columns, in conformity with the statutory form, the date of entry of satisfaction, the serial number allotted to the bill, the name, residence and occupation of the grantor (or person against whom process issued<sup>5</sup>), the name of the grantee, the nature of the instrument, its date, the date of registration and the date of registration of any affidavit of renewal<sup>6</sup>. Absolute and security bills are entered in the same register without being segregated, but the former are identified by an 'A' in the 'Instrument' column<sup>7</sup>. When registration is renewed a fresh entry is made.

1 As to the statutory definition of 'bill of sale' see PARA 1638 et seq. As to bills of sale at common law see PARA 1620 et seq.

2 As to the prescribed form see the Bills of Sale Act 1878 s 12, Sch B.

3 As to the enrolment of deeds and other documents see CIVIL PROCEDURE vol 11 (2009) PARA 86.

4 Bills of Sale Act 1878 s 12.

5 This does not normally arise in the case of a security bill. When a sheriff's officer or bailiff sells goods under an execution and the sale is embodied in a document to which the Bills of Sale Acts (ie the Bills of Sale Act 1878 and the Bills of Sale Act (1878) Amendment Act 1882: see PARA 1630) apply as the result of the officer or bailiff retaining possession for a period, he is the grantor for the purpose of those Acts but the residence and occupation to be registered is that of the debtor: Bills of Sale Act 1878 s 12.

1773. Proof of registration.

It is not necessary to produce the registered bill of sale<sup>1</sup> itself in order to prove the bill or its registration, for the Bills of Sale Act 1878 provides that any copy of a registered bill and affidavit purporting to be an office copy of it must in all courts, and before all arbitrators or other persons, be admitted as prima facie evidence of it and of the fact and date of registration as shown on it<sup>2</sup>. Production of an office copy of the bill alone, however, is not of itself evidence that the proper affidavit was also filed<sup>3</sup>, but the proper course, if objection is taken on this ground, is to adjourn the hearing for the production of the affidavit or an office copy or other suitable evidence<sup>4</sup>.

1774. Searches.

Any person is entitled at all reasonable times and on payment of a fee of 5p to search the register and also to inspect, examine and make extracts from any and every registered bill of sale<sup>1</sup>, without being required to make a written application, or to specify any particulars in reference thereto<sup>2</sup>.

Searches may be made personally or by requisitioning an official search. A personal search is effected by completing a general search form<sup>3</sup>, lodging this in the Central Office of the High Court<sup>4</sup> and inspecting the register there, making such extract as may be required upon payment of a further 5p for each bill of sale inspected<sup>5</sup>. An official search is requisitioned by completing a form of requisition for official search<sup>6</sup>, stamping this with the prescribed fee<sup>7</sup> and lodging it with the Central Office, when the applicant will be told when the official certificate of the result of the search will be ready for collection<sup>8</sup>. Since registration of a bill of sale has to be renewed every five years<sup>9</sup>, it is not necessary to search back for longer than this period.

1 As to the statutory definition of 'bill of sale' see PARA 1638 et seq. As to bills of sale at common law see PARA 1620 et seq.

2 Bills of Sale Act (1878) Amendment Act 1882 s 16 (amended by the Statute Law Revision Act 1898; and the Decimal Currency Act 1969 s 10(1)). Extracts are limited to: (1) the dates of execution, registration, renewal of registration and satisfaction; (2) the names, addresses and occupations of the parties; (3) the amount of the consideration; and (4) any further particulars which may be prescribed by rules made under the Bills of Sale Act (1878) Amendment Act 1882: s 16 (as so amended). For these purposes, 'prescribed' means prescribed by rules made under the provisions of the Bills of Sale Act 1878, and power to make or alter such rules is conferred on such persons, and is exercisable in the same manner, as in the case of rules of court: see ss 4, 21; and the Bills of Sale Act (1878) Amendment Act 1882 s 3. At the date at which this volume states the law no such rules had been made. As to searches in local registers see PARA 1778.

8 Any master of the Queen's Bench Division must, on a request in writing giving sufficient particulars, and on payment of a fee, cause a search to be made in the register of bills of sale and issue a certificate of the result of the search: see CPR Sch 1 RSC Ord 95 r 4.

G. LOCAL REGISTRATION

1776. When local registration necessary.

Where the affidavit of due execution<sup>1</sup> describes the residence of the person making or giving the same, or of the person against whom the process is issued<sup>2</sup>, as being in some place outside the London insolvency district<sup>3</sup>, or if the bill of sale<sup>4</sup> describes the chattels enumerated in it as being in some place outside the London insolvency district, the registrar<sup>5</sup> must forthwith, and within three clear days<sup>6</sup> after registration in the principal registry, and in accordance with prescribed directions<sup>7</sup>, transmit a copy of the bill of sale<sup>8</sup> to the district judge<sup>9</sup> in whose district such places are situated, and, if such places are in the districts of different district judges, to each such district judge<sup>10</sup>. To enable this to be done there must be presented to the registrar, in addition to the true copy of the bill required to be presented for registration with the bill of sale, such number of copies of the bill and every schedule and inventory annexed to it as the registrar may deem necessary for the purpose of local registration<sup>11</sup>.

Every copy of a bill of sale which is so transmitted to a district judge must bear a certificate by the registrar showing the date on which the registration or, as the case may be, the renewal of registration<sup>12</sup>, of the bill was effected and the date on which the copy of the bill of sale is transmitted to the district judge<sup>13</sup>.

5 As to the registrar see PARA 1758 note 5.

6 As to the computation of such periods see TIME vol 97 (2010) PARA 329 et seq.

7 For these purposes, 'prescribed' means prescribed by rules made under the provisions of the Bills of Sale Act 1878 (see s 4); and power to make or alter such rules is conferred on such persons, and is exercisable in the same manner, as in the case of rules of court (see s 21). The rules currently in force are the Bills of Sale (Local Registration) Rules 1960, SI 1960/2326 (amended by virtue of the Courts and Legal Services Act 1990 s 74(1)(a), (3)).

8 The Bills of Sale Act (1878) Amendment Act 1882 s 11 originally provided for the transmission of an abstract of the contents of the bill, but the effect of the Administration of Justice Act 1925 s 23(1) is to provide for the transmission of a copy of the bill: see the text to note 10.

9 The Bills of Sale Act (1878) Amendment Act 1882 refers to the 'county court registrar' but that office was restyled 'district judge' by the Courts and Legal Services Act 1990 s 74(1): see the text to note 10.

10 Bills of Sale Act (1878) Amendment Act 1882 s 11 (amended by the Insolvency Act 1985 Sch 8 para 1; and by virtue of the Courts and Legal Services Act 1990 s 74(1)(a), (3)); Administration of Justice Act 1925 s 23(1). These provisions are directory only and the registrar's default in transmitting the copy of the bill to a district judge does not avoid registration: Trinder v Raynor (1887) 56 LQB 422.

11 Bills of Sale Act 1878 s 10(2); Administration of Justice Act 1925 s 23(2). The usual requirement is one additional copy of the bill for every county court in which local registration is to be effected.

13 Bills of Sale (Local Registration) Rules 1960, SI 1960/2326, r 3 (amended by virtue of the Courts and Legal Services Act 1990 s 74(1)(a), (3)). Though this provision actually refers to transmission of a copy of an affidavit of renewal under the Bills of Sale Act (1878) Amendment Act 1882 s 11, that latter provision, read with the Administration of Justice Act 1925, does not in fact provide for the transmission of any document other than a copy of the bill of sale: see note 8.

In addition, the Bills of Sale (Local Registration) Rules 1960, SI 1960/2326, r 6 (as so amended) requires the district judge to keep an alphabetical index of the copies of bills of sale (and of affidavits of renewal: see PARA 1776 note 13) transmitted to him under the Bills of Sale Act (1878) Amendment Act 1882 s 11 (see PARA 1776), and to enter in the index under the first letter of the surname of the grantor of every bill the grantor's full name, address and description and the number of the copy of the bill of sale (or affidavit).

BILLS OF SALE/(3) SECURITY BILLS OF SALE/(ix) Registration/H. RECTIFICATION AND EXTENSION OF TIME/1779. Extent of relief given.

H. RECTIFICATION AND EXTENSION OF TIME

1779. Extent of relief given.

A judge of the High Court or a master of the Supreme Court, on being satisfied that the omission to register a bill of sale<sup>1</sup> or an affidavit of renewal thereof within the time prescribed<sup>2</sup>, or the omission or mis-statement of the name, residence or occupation of any person, was accidental or due to inadvertence, has power in his discretion to order such omission or mis-statement to be rectified by the insertion in the register of the true name, residence or occupation, or by extending the time for such registration on such terms and conditions, if any, as to security, notice by advertisement or otherwise, or as to any other matter, as he thinks fit to direct<sup>3</sup>. The Court of Appeal apparently has no original jurisdiction to make an order under these provisions<sup>4</sup>.

Application for rectification is made without notice to a master of the Queen's Bench Division<sup>5</sup> and must be supported by an affidavit or witness statement setting out particulars of the bill of sale and of the omission or mis-statement in question and stating the grounds on which the application is made<sup>6</sup>.

Although the Bills of Sale Act 1878 refers to the omission or mis-statement of the name, residence or occupation of 'any person'<sup>7</sup>, relief is limited to rectification of the register, and, since it is only the name, residence and occupation of the grantor (or person against whom process is issued) that features in the register, it follows that there is no jurisdiction to rectify omissions or mis-statements relating to other persons, such as an attesting witness; nor has the court power to surmount this difficulty by giving leave to file an affidavit correcting a mistake in the affidavit filed on registration<sup>8</sup>.

1 As to the statutory definition of 'bill of sale' see PARA 1638 et seq. As to bills of sale at common law see PARA 1620 et seq.

2 This is a reference to the time for registration prescribed by the Bills of Sale Act 1878 s 22 (see PARA 1759) and not to anything prescribed by rules under s 21 (see PARA 1774).

3 Bills of Sale Act 1878 s 14; CPR Sch 1 RSC Ord 95 r 1. The authority to confer jurisdiction on a master by rules of court derives from the Supreme Court Act 1981 ss 68, 84 (both as amended). As from a day to be appointed, the Supreme Court Act 1981 is to be renamed as the Senior Courts Act 1981: see the Constitutional Reform Act 2005 s 59(5), Sch 11 Pt 1 para 1. At the date at which this volume states the law no such day had been appointed.

BILLS OF SALE/(3) SECURITY BILLS OF SALE/(ix) Registration/H. RECTIFICATION AND EXTENSION OF TIME/1780. Rights of third parties.

1780. Rights of third parties.

An order for rectification of the register, or for extension of the time for registration, will only be granted subject to rights which have already accrued to third persons<sup>1</sup>. It will not be granted to the prejudice of an execution creditor who has seized, or of a trustee in the grantor's bankruptcy<sup>2</sup>, or of any person whose rights would be affected by registration, even though there has been no change of property in the chattels sought to be protected<sup>3</sup>.

An order made in accordance with the form now in use is expressed to be without prejudice to the rights of parties acquired prior to the time when the bill of sale<sup>4</sup> is actually registered or re-registered<sup>5</sup>. It would appear that such protection is limited to secured creditors and creditors in the grantor's bankruptcy and does not extend to unsecured creditors of the grantor where no bankruptcy has supervened<sup>6</sup>.

BILLS OF SALE/(3) SECURITY BILLS OF SALE/(ix) Registration/I. RENEWAL OF REGISTRATION/1781. When renewal required.

I. RENEWAL OF REGISTRATION

1781. When renewal required.

The registration of a bill of sale<sup>1</sup> must be renewed once at least every five years, and, if a period of five years elapses from the registration, or renewed registration, of a bill of sale without renewal or further renewal, as the case may be, the registration becomes void<sup>2</sup>. However, a renewal of registration does not become necessary by reason only of a transfer or assignment of a bill of sale<sup>3</sup>.

1 As to the statutory definition of 'bill of sale' see PARA 1638 et seq. As to bills of sale at common law see PARA 1620 et seq.

2 Bills of Sale Act 1878 s 11. The date of expiry is not an item of information recorded in the register. Expiry of the bill will not affect the grantee's rights if he has perfected his title by taking possession of the chattels under the bill before expiry of the registration: Re Tooth, Trustee v Tooth [1934] Ch 616. However, if the registration expires before possession has been taken, the consequential avoidance of the security extinguishes the efficacy of the bill as a licence to seize, and the grantee will not be able to perfect his title by seizure except pursuant to some subsequent valid agreement.

Halsbury's Laws of England/FINANCIAL SERVICES AND INSTITUTIONS (VOLUME 48 (2008) 5TH EDITION, PARAS 1-589; VOLUME 49 (2008) 5TH EDITION, PARAS 590-1619; VOLUME 50 (2008) 5TH EDITION, PARAS 1620-2586)/7. BILLS OF SALE/(3) SECURITY BILLS OF SALE/(ix) Registration/I. RENEWAL OF REGISTRATION/1782. Mode of renewal.

1782. Mode of renewal.

The renewal of a registration of a bill of sale<sup>1</sup> is effected by filing with the registrar<sup>2</sup> an affidavit<sup>3</sup> stating the date of the bill and of its last registration, and the names, residences<sup>4</sup> and occupations<sup>5</sup> of the parties to it as stated in it, and that the bill of sale is still a subsisting security<sup>6</sup>. The particulars relating to the parties must be those stated in the bill, even though they are there stated incorrectly, although the correct particulars may be added<sup>7</sup>. Failure to comply with these requirements renders the renewal of registration void<sup>8</sup>.

Where local registration of a bill of sale was effected upon first registration of the bill<sup>9</sup>, the registrar is required<sup>10</sup> to transmit to the district judge<sup>11</sup> concerned a copy of the affidavit of renewal<sup>12</sup> bearing a certificate by the registrar, showing the date on which the renewal of registration was effected and the date on which the copy of the renewal affidavit is transmitted to the district judge<sup>13</sup>. There is no provision for local registration of a bill of sale, or of renewal of a bill of sale, where the grantor or the chattels comprised in the bill have moved to a place outside the London insolvency district subsequently to the date of original registration.

1 As to the statutory definition of 'bill of sale' see PARA 1638 et seq. As to bills of sale at common law see PARA 1620 et seq.

2 As to the registrar see PARA 1758 note 5.

3 A form of affidavit is set out in the Bills of Sale Act 1878 s 11, Sch A (see s 11), but for the modern form see Form PF181QB; and Practice Direction--Forms PD 4 PARA 4. A fee of £10 is payable for renewal of the bill (Civil Proceedings Fees Order 2004, SI 2004/3121, art 2, Sch 1 Fee 9.1 (Sch 1 substituted by SI 2005/3445)) and is stamped on the affidavit. No separate fee is payable for filing of the affidavit.

4 The statutory form (see note 3) does not in fact require statement of the residence of the parties but only of an address at which communications may be expected to reach them (see PARA 1768), and it is clear that repetition of this in the affidavit of renewal is to be considered a statement of the 'residence' set out in the bill.

5 The statutory form (see note 3) does not require the bill to state the occupation of the parties (see PARA 1769), and if none is stated in the bill then none need be set out in the renewal affidavit. The form gives an optional form of renewal affidavit (see the Bills of Sale Act 1878 s 11; and PARA 1781) and this refers to the 'descriptions' of the parties. This term usually has a wider meaning than 'occupation' (see PARA 1769), but, in view of s 11, this must be interpreted in the form as a reference to the description of the grantor's occupation, if given in the bill.

1783. Extension of time.

The time for renewal of registration of a bill of sale<sup>1</sup> may be extended by order of a judge of the High Court or a master of the Supreme Court<sup>2</sup> where the omission to renew is accidental or due to inadvertence<sup>3</sup>. The order will be made without prejudice to the rights of third parties acquired before re-registration<sup>4</sup>.

As from a day to be appointed, the Supreme Court Act 1981 is to be renamed as the Senior Courts Act 1981: see the Constitutional Reform Act 2005 s 59(5), Sch 11 Pt 1 para 1. At the date at which this volume states the law no such day had been appointed.

(x) Rights of Grantee against Grantor

1786. Summary of grantee's rights.

The grantee of a valid security bill of sale<sup>1</sup> has all the rights and remedies of any other mortgagee of goods<sup>2</sup>, subject to certain restrictions imposed by the Bills of Sale Acts<sup>3</sup> where they apply. In particular, the grantee has the right:

- 189 (1) to enforce the covenant for payment and other personal covenants contained in the bill of sale<sup>4</sup>;
- 190 (2) to apply to the court to restrain acts of waste and other injurious acts likely to impair his security<sup>5</sup>;
- 191 (3) to seize and take possession of the goods for one or more of the causes specified in the Bills of Sale Act (1878) Amendment Act 1882<sup>6</sup>;
- 192 (4) to remove and sell the seized goods after expiration of the time prescribed by the Bills of Sale Act (1878) Amendment Act 1882<sup>7</sup>;
- 193 (5) to apply the proceeds of sale of the seized goods in the manner provided by the bill of sale<sup>8</sup>.

As an alternative to sale, the grantee may apply to the court for an order of foreclosure<sup>9</sup>, or for the appointment of a receiver<sup>10</sup>, and where an action or matter is pending in relation to the security the court can, in the exercise of its usual powers, make orders for the detention, custody, preservation or inspection of the security<sup>11</sup> and for the sale of the security where it is perishable<sup>12</sup>.

3 Ie the Bills of Sale Act 1878 and the Bills of Sale Act (1878) Amendment Act 1882: see PARA 1630.

4 The right of enforcement will depend on whether or not the covenants are permitted by the Bills of Sale Acts and accord with the statutory form (see PARA 1711 et seq).

10 See eg Taylor v Eckersley (1876) 2 ChD 302, CA. As to the appointment of receivers see generally RECEIVERS. The grantee has no implied or statutory power to appoint a receiver himself. The power of appointment conferred on a mortgagee by the Law of Property Act 1925 s 101 is not exercisable until he has become entitled to exercise the power of sale conferred by s 103 (see s 109(1); and MORTGAGE vol 77 (2010) PARAS 476, 483), and that power of sale does not apply in the case of a mortgage by bill of sale within the Bills of Sale Acts (Re Morritt, ex p Official Receiver (1886) 18 QBD 222, CA; Calvert v Thomas (1887) 19 QBD 204, CA).

Whether it is compatible with the statutory form (see PARA 1711 et seq) to include an express power to appoint a receiver appears never to have been decided. Such a provision could be upheld as being for the maintenance of the security (see PARA 1737 et seq), but only, it is thought, if it excludes the usual inference that the receiver is to be deemed the agent of the mortgagor.

Effect of grantee taking promissory note or other security.

1787. Effect of grantee taking promissory note or other security.

The grantee may properly take from the grantor a collateral security, such as a promissory note or mortgage, for payment of the sum stipulated in the bill of sale<sup>1</sup>, provided that the amount, time and manner of payment specified in the security instrument match the payment provisions in the bill<sup>2</sup>. However, if the promissory note or mortgage provides for payment of a sum greater than that payable under the bill, as by stipulating for compound interest when the bill, in accordance with the requirements of the statutory form, is restricted to simple interest<sup>3</sup>, the bill will not represent a true record of the agreed terms of payment and the collateral security will amount to a defeasance<sup>4</sup> rendering the bill void as not in accordance with the form<sup>5</sup>. Similarly, if the terms of the promissory note are such that the sums payable under it may become payable sooner than they would under the bill, as where the note calls up the full outstanding balance on default in payment of an instalment when no such provision is contained in the bill, the promissory note will be a defeasance of the bill, since its provisions may result in the bill being discharged earlier than is apparent from the face of the bill itself<sup>6</sup>. Although the bill of sale is thus avoided, the grantee's right to sue on the note is unaffected<sup>7</sup>.

A promissory note taken not as collateral security but by way of conditional payment is a defeasance of the bill, since the rights of the grantee under the bill are suspended until default is made in payment of the note<sup>8</sup>.

The case cited in note 4, which merely held the registration to be void under the Bills of Sale Act 1878 s 10(3) (see PARA 1748), must now be read in the light of Smith v Whiteman [1909] 2 KB 437, CA, in which attention was for the first time focused on the fact that the inclusion of terms as to defeasance was not merely prescribed by the Bills of Sale Act 1878 s 10(3) but was a requirement of the statutory form. Moreover, where the court takes the view that the bill of sale was in truth securing a covenant, such as for payment of compound interest, not permitted by the statutory form, the bill will be void as not in conformity with the statutory form, even though it does not refer to that covenant on its face: Sharp v McHenry, Sharp v Brown above.

BILLS OF SALE/(3) SECURITY BILLS OF SALE/(x) Rights of Grantee against Grantor/1788. Restrictions on right of seizure.

1788. Restrictions on right of seizure.

The grantee under a security bill of sale within the Bills of Sale Acts<sup>1</sup> cannot seize and take possession of the goods except for the causes specified in the Bills of Sale Act (1878) Amendment Act 1882<sup>2</sup>, and the insertion in the bill of sale<sup>3</sup> of a covenant or provision purporting to extend the grounds of seizure beyond those causes renders the bill void as not in accordance with the statutory form<sup>4</sup>. In order for a seizure to be lawful, the conditions of the Bills of Sale Act (1878) Amendment Act 1882 must be strictly observed<sup>5</sup>. If they are not, the grantee is liable to the grantor for damages for trespass and conversion<sup>6</sup>.

Possession may be taken for any one or more of the statutory causes even though no express power of seizure is conferred by the bill, for the provisions of the Bills of Sale Act (1878) Amendment Act 1882, together with the statutory form, give an implied power of seizure<sup>7</sup>. However, the fact that the power has become exercisable against the grantor does not necessarily mean that the grantee is entitled to take the goods from the possession or custody of a third party, such as the grantor's landlord<sup>8</sup> or a receiver<sup>9</sup>.

4 As to the statutory form see the Bills of Sale Act (1878) Amendment Act 1882 s 9, Schedule; and PARA 1711 et seq.

5 Thus a written demand for the last receipt for rent to be sent to the grantee by post goes beyond a mere demand for production of the receipt, and non-compliance with it is justifiable and is not a ground for seizure: Ex p Wickens [1898] 1 QB 543, CA.

BILLS OF SALE/(3) SECURITY BILLS OF SALE/(x) Rights of Grantee against Grantor/1789. Statutory grounds for seizure.

1789. Statutory grounds for seizure.

The causes giving rise to liability for seizure laid down in the Bills of Sale Act (1878) Amendment Act 1882<sup>1</sup>, at least one of which must exist if the grantee is to be able to take possession of the security without the consent of the grantor, are:

- 194 (1) If the grantor makes default in the payment of the sum or sums secured by the bill of sale at the time provided for payment in it<sup>2</sup>. The grantee is, however, entitled to seize the goods on default in payment of any instalment due under a bill of sale even though the bill does not provide that the whole debt shall become due on non-payment of one instalment<sup>3</sup>. Where payment is demanded not by the grantee himself but by a third party on his behalf, the grantor does not default in payment merely because he defers payment for the period necessary to enable him to ascertain that the third party is in fact acting with the grantee's authority<sup>4</sup>.
- 195 (2) If the grantor makes default in the performance of any covenant or agreement contained in the bill of sale and necessary for maintaining the security<sup>5</sup>.
- 196 (3) If the grantor becomes bankrupt<sup>6</sup>. A grantor becomes bankrupt when a bankruptcy order is made against him<sup>7</sup>. Bankruptcy is not constituted by a composition made by a grantor with his creditors<sup>8</sup>, or by a voluntary arrangement<sup>9</sup>.
- 197 (4) If the grantor suffers the goods assigned by the bill of sale, or any of them, to be distrained for rent, rates or taxes<sup>10</sup>.
- 198 (5) If the grantor fraudulently either removes or suffers the goods or any of them comprised in the bill of sale to be removed from the premises<sup>11</sup>.
- 199 (6) If the grantor does not, without reasonable excuse, upon demand in writing by the grantee, produce to him his last receipts for rent, rates and taxes<sup>12</sup>. A written demand that the last receipt for rent be sent to the grantee by post is not a demand for production of the receipt, and in failing to comply with the demand the grantor is not guilty of failure to produce the receipt without reasonable excuse, for the grantor is not obliged to part with written evidence of the payment of rent<sup>13</sup>. If rent has recently accrued due, it is a reasonable excuse for not producing the receipt that the landlord has not required payment<sup>14</sup>, and this would presumably be the case where, though the grantor had paid the rent, the landlord had failed to furnish a receipt.
- 200 (7) If execution is levied against the goods of the grantor under any judgment at law<sup>15</sup>.

Where in relation to a bill of sale securing a regulated agreement under the Consumer Credit Act 1974 the grantee institutes proceedings for recovery of the goods instead of exercising a right of seizure the court may make a time order allowing the grantor time to pay the arrears<sup>16</sup> and may suspend the operation of any order for delivery of the goods until such time as the court directs or until the occurrence of a specified act or omission<sup>17</sup>.

1 Bills of Sale Act (1878) Amendment Act 1882 s 7.

2 Bills of Sale Act (1878) Amendment Act 1882 s 7(1). Section 7(1) does not apply to a default relating to a bill of sale given by way of security for the payment of money under a regulated agreement to which the Consumer Credit Act 1974 s 87(1) (need for default notice: see CONSUMER CREDIT vol 9(1) (Reissue) PARA 263) applies, unless the restriction imposed by s 88(2) (restricting the exercise of repossession and other remedies during the currency of a default notice, which must be at least 14 days: see CONSUMER CREDIT vol 9(1) (Reissue) PARA 264) has ceased to apply to the bill, or if, by virtue of s 89 (due compliance with default notice: see CONSUMER CREDIT vol 9(1) (Reissue) PARA 264), the default is to be treated as not having occurred: Bills of Sale Act (1878) Amendment Act 1882 s 7A(1) (added by the Consumer Credit Act 1974 Sch 4 para 1). BILLS OF SALE/(3) SECURITY BILLS OF SALE/(x) Rights of Grantee against Grantor/1790. Entry on premises.

1790. Entry on premises.

A bill of sale<sup>1</sup> may validly empower the grantee to enter upon premises where the goods are situated for the purpose of exercising a right of seizure<sup>2</sup>, and a power of entry will be considered to accord with the statutory form<sup>3</sup> even if it authorises the grantee to break open windows and doors of the grantor's premises<sup>4</sup> for the purpose of effecting entry<sup>5</sup>. For the purpose of civil proceedings, the grantee will incur no liability to the grantor for breaking into the premises if he is authorised to do so by the bill in order to exercise a right of seizure<sup>6</sup>, and forcible entry no longer constitutes a criminal offence unless accompanied by violence or the threat of violence<sup>7</sup>.

In the absence of a power of entry contained in the bill, the grantee has no right to enter upon the premises without the grantor's consent<sup>8</sup>. Even where there is an express power of entry, this is available only against the grantor and does not entitle the grantee to enter upon premises in which the grantor has no interest or in which his interest has come to an end<sup>9</sup>.

BILLS OF SALE/(3) SECURITY BILLS OF SALE/(x) Rights of Grantee against Grantor/1791. Removal and sale.

1791. Removal and sale.

Personal chattels<sup>1</sup> seized or of which possession is taken under a security bill of sale<sup>2</sup> must, before removal or sale, remain on the premises where seized or taken possession of until after the expiration of five clear days<sup>3</sup> from the day they were so seized or taken possession of<sup>4</sup>. During this time, the grantor may apply to the court for relief<sup>5</sup>. Removal may take place, however, before expiration of the period of five days if the grantor consents<sup>6</sup>. After the five-day period has expired, the grantee may remove the goods and proceed to sell them, although the bill contains no express power of sale<sup>7</sup>. Power may be conferred by the bill to sell the goods either by private treaty or by public auction, and either on or off the premises<sup>8</sup>.

Seizure and removal by the grantee do not affect the grantor's right to redeem before sale upon tender of the amount outstanding and expenses<sup>9</sup>, but in the absence of such tender the court will not restrain the grantee from exercising his legal remedies<sup>10</sup>.

In exercising his power of sale the grantee is not a trustee for the grantor and is entitled to give preference to his own interests over those of the grantor<sup>11</sup>, but he must take reasonable care to obtain whatever is the true market value of the goods at the time he chooses to sell them, it not being sufficient that he acted honestly and without reckless disregard of the grantor's interests<sup>12</sup>.

4 Bills of Sale Act (1878) Amendment Act 1882 s 13 (amended by the Statute Law Revision Act 1898). Cf O'Neil v City and County Finance Co (1886) 17 QBD 234, where chattels comprising a horse and cab were seized under a bill of sale in a public street and removed to the grantee's yard, where they were kept for five clear days, and it was held that the seizure was lawful and that no action would lie for the removal in the absence of special damage. If the grantee, having seized the goods, does remove them in breach of the statutory provisions, it would seem that the grantor cannot sue in trespass, since he lacks either possession or the right to possession at the time of removal, but can sue for damages for breach of statutory duty. Cf Carr v James Broderick & Co Ltd [1942] 2 KB 275, [1942] 2 All ER 441, which decided a similar point on the effect of seizure in breach of the Courts (Emergency Powers) Acts 1939 to 1941 (repealed).

1792. Application of proceeds of sale.

A bill of sale<sup>1</sup> may contain express provisions dealing with application of the proceeds of sale provided that they are in accordance with the statutory form<sup>2</sup>. Provision may be made that the grantee may, out of the proceeds of sale, retain: (1) his unpaid principal with interest to the date of sale; (2) the expenses of sale<sup>3</sup>; (3) costs properly incurred in defending and maintaining his rights under the security<sup>4</sup>; and (4) any rent, rates, taxes or other valid incumbrances on the chattels discharged by him<sup>5</sup>. In the absence of express provisions, terms to the above effect will be implied<sup>6</sup>.

BILLS OF SALE/(3) SECURITY BILLS OF SALE/(x) Rights of Grantee against Grantor/1793. No right of consolidation.

1793. No right of consolidation.

Even under the Bills of Sale Act 1878 it was held that the doctrine of consolidation<sup>1</sup> did not apply to bills of sale<sup>2</sup> so as to enable the grantee to consolidate with his bill of sale a security over other property of the grantor and thus claim against an execution creditor the right to have the surplus proceeds of sale, after discharge of the sum due under the bill, applied towards satisfaction of the prior mortgage<sup>3</sup>. The Bills of Sale Act (1878) Amendment Act 1882 would appear to preclude consolidation even against the grantor himself, no third party being involved, for the right to consolidate does not arise unless the instrument expresses an intention to confer it<sup>4</sup>, and a provision for consolidation would be incompatible with the statutory form<sup>5</sup>.

(xi) Rights of Grantor against Grantee

1794. Effect of seizure.

A bill of sale by way of security in the statutory form<sup>1</sup> vests the chattels assigned in the grantee, leaving the right to their possession in the grantor until any of the events mentioned as causes of seizure<sup>2</sup> in the Bills of Sale Act (1878) Amendment Act 1882 occur<sup>3</sup>.

When, for any of such causes, the grantee seizes the chattels, the grantor's legal interest in them ceases, and upon expiry of the statutory five-day period during which the goods cannot be removed<sup>4</sup> the grantee is entitled to take them away and cannot be sued in trespass for so doing, even if he removes them after tender of principal, interest and costs<sup>5</sup>. The remedy of the grantor, if he has not applied for statutory relief within the five-day period<sup>6</sup>, is to take proceedings for redemption, in which case he will be put on the usual terms<sup>7</sup>.

1 As to the statutory definition of 'bill of sale' see PARA 1638 et seq. As to bills of sale at common law see PARA 1620 et seq. As to the statutory form see the Bills of Sale Act (1878) Amendment Act 1882 s 9, Schedule; and PARA 1711 et seq.

5 This is because the grantor does not have the right to possession necessary to maintain the action, and the grantee has the right to possession, subject to any redemption order that may be made: Johnson v Diprose [1893] 1 QB 512, CA. As to the grantor's remedy for damage caused to the goods in the course of removal see PARA 1799.

BILLS OF SALE/(3) SECURITY BILLS OF SALE/(xi) Rights of Grantor against Grantee/1795. Terms on which statutory relief granted.

1795. Terms on which statutory relief granted.

On the grantor's application within five days from seizure, the court or judge, if satisfied that, by payment of money or otherwise, the cause of seizure no longer exists<sup>1</sup>, may restrain the grantee from removing or selling the chattels or may make such other order as may seem just<sup>2</sup>. Thus a sale may be restrained on condition that instalments overdue are paid, with interest and costs<sup>3</sup>. If the grantor is otherwise in default, as for non-payment of rent, relief may be refused if that default is not made good<sup>4</sup>.

The form of relief contemplated by the statute is the restoration of possession to the grantor on making good his default, so that the bill of sale will continue in force as a security for the future instalments payable under it<sup>5</sup>. The statutory provisions do not empower the court to order the grantee to submit to redemption of the bill of sale ahead of time where such relief would not have been given in equity<sup>6</sup>.

- 1 Where goods are seized for default in payment, the cause of seizure ceases to exist when the grantor tenders the arrears and costs, even if the grantee refuses to accept the tender: Ex p Cotton (1883) 11 QBD 301, DC.
- 2 Bills of Sale Act (1878) Amendment Act 1882 s 7 proviso. Until expiration of the five-day period the grantee cannot remove the goods from the premises or sell them: see s 13; and PARA 1791.

BILLS OF SALE/(3) SECURITY BILLS OF SALE/(xi) Rights of Grantor against Grantee/1796. Redemption.

1796. Redemption.

Quite independently of the statutory relief, the grantor has an equitable right to redeem at any time before sale or foreclosure<sup>1</sup>. He cannot ordinarily redeem before the time agreed for payment, for the grantee has the right to keep his money outstanding for the stipulated period in order that he can earn the full agreed interest<sup>2</sup>.

The grantee is entitled, on default in payment of an instalment, to take possession to protect his security and to hold possession until the amount overdue is paid<sup>3</sup>. If he takes possession for this purpose and not for the purpose of realisation, the grantor's right to redeem is not accelerated, and the grantee cannot be compelled to give up his bill of sale<sup>4</sup> on tender of principal not yet due, with interest to date, but may merely be ordered to withdraw from possession on payment of the instalments in arrear with interest and costs of seizure, leaving the bill of sale in force as security for future instalments<sup>5</sup>.

Where, however, the grantee takes possession in order to realise his security, he is bound to accept the grantor's tender of principal, though not yet due, with interest to date and expenses, and, though he is not liable for trespass if he proceeds with removal of the goods despite such tender<sup>6</sup>, he may be ordered to withdraw and give up the bill of sale on payment being made<sup>7</sup>.

If chattels comprised in a bill of sale are seized in execution and in interpleader proceedings a third party lays claim to them<sup>8</sup>, the court may order a sale and direct application of the proceeds of sale without being fettered by ordinary rules of equity<sup>9</sup>, and such an order may provide for the compulsory redemption of the bill of sale before the time for payment has arrived, with interest to the date of redemption<sup>10</sup>.

The grantee will not, as a general rule, be restrained from exercising his legal rights unless the grantor offers or pays into court the full sum claimed to be due<sup>11</sup>, but the court may grant an injunction on terms of payment of a lower figure where it is clear that the grantee is claiming too much<sup>12</sup>.

1797. Delivery up of bill.

When the debt secured by a bill of sale<sup>1</sup> has been satisfied, the grantor is entitled to have the bill delivered up to him, and the grantee may be ordered to surrender the bill where he refuses to do this voluntarily<sup>2</sup>. A provision in the bill purporting to entitle the grantee to retain it after payment is a deviation from the statutory form and renders the bill void<sup>3</sup>.

1798. Wrongful seizure.

If the grantor, on the day appointed for payment<sup>1</sup>, pays or tenders the principal and interest due, the grantee will be liable in damages for trespass if he seizes the goods<sup>2</sup>. He is similarly liable if he seizes before default<sup>3</sup> or before any of the statutory causes for seizure have arisen<sup>4</sup>.

The measure of damages for wrongful seizure by the grantee under a valid bill of sale<sup>5</sup> is usually limited by the value of the grantor's interest in the goods, not their full value<sup>6</sup>, although the circumstances in which the wrongful seizure was made may justify an award of aggravated damages<sup>7</sup> or even, in exceptional circumstances, exemplary damages<sup>8</sup>.

1 The grantor usually has no right to accelerate payment: see PARA 1796.

2 Johnson v Diprose [1893] 1 QB 512, CA; Monson v Milner (1892) 8 TLR 447. A promise without consideration to extend the time for payment does not of itself prevent the grantee taking possession (Williams v Stern (1879) 5 QBD 409, CA), in the absence of any equitable estoppel created by the promise (see CONTRACT vol 9(1) (Reissue) PARA 1030; ESTOPPEL vol 16(2) (Reissue) PARA 1082). ### 1799. Damage to goods during or after removal.

Where possession of the goods is lawfully taken by the grantee of a bill of sale<sup>1</sup>, then the grantor's legal interest in the goods ceases<sup>2</sup>, and an action for trespass does not lie either in respect of the removal of the goods or in respect of damage caused during or after removal<sup>3</sup>.

The grantor is, however, entitled to be credited with the loss caused by such damage on redeeming, or, if he is sued for the balance of the debt, may claim that it be deducted<sup>4</sup>, and if the goods are damaged or destroyed as a result of the grantee's negligence, the grantor is entitled to damages not exceeding the value of his interest<sup>5</sup>.

5 In Johnson v Diprose [1893] 1 QB 512, CA, the plaintiff asserted negligence, but his cause of action was framed in trespass, and it failed because he did not have the right to possession which is essential for that tort. Negligence was not then fully recognised as an independent tort; but it seems clear that a claim for negligence would now lie. As to damages generally see DAMAGES. BILLS OF SALE/(3) SECURITY BILLS OF SALE/(xii) Priority of Successive Bills/1800. Statutory provisions.

(xii) Priority of Successive Bills

1800. Statutory provisions.

If two or more bills of sale<sup>1</sup> are given comprising, in whole or in part, any of the same chattels, they have priority in the order of the date of their registration respectively as regards such chattels<sup>2</sup>. This rule applies to regulate priorities between absolute bills of sale as well as between bills of sale given by way of security for the payment of money<sup>3</sup>. Moreover, it not only governs precedence as between two registered bills but also gives a registered bill priority over an unregistered bill<sup>4</sup>. However, the rule is subject to the provision in the Bills of Sale Act (1878) Amendment Act 1882<sup>5</sup> that a bill is void, except as against the grantor, in respect of any personal chattels<sup>6</sup> specifically described in the schedule of which the grantor is not the true owner at the time of execution of the bill. Accordingly, if a security bill is executed after an unregistered absolute bill, it is void even if registered, and the priority rule contained in the Bills of Sale Act 1878<sup>7</sup> will not avail the grantee<sup>8</sup>.

1 As to the statutory definition of 'bill of sale' see PARA 1638 et seq. As to bills of sale at common law see PARA 1620 et seq.

2 Bills of Sale Act 1878 s 10. Bills of sale formerly took priority according to date of execution: Re Middleton, ex p Allen, ex p Page (1870) LR 11 Eq 209. The provisions of the Bills of Sale Act 1878 s 9 (rendering successive bills void in certain circumstances: see PARA 1755) have no application to this situation, since s 9 deals with successive bills of sale securing the same debt, whereas the case here discussed involves different debts to different creditors. See further PARAS 1801-1804.

The Bills of Sale Acts (ie the Bills of Sale Act 1878 and the Bills of Sale Act (1878) Amendment Act 1882: see PARA 1630) do not apply to mortgages of aircraft or ships, for which there are separate statutory registration regimes with distinct priority rules (see PARAS 1689-1690).

BILLS OF SALE/(3) SECURITY BILLS OF SALE/(xii) Priority of Successive Bills/1801. Priority where both bills absolute.

1801. Priority where both bills absolute.

If the two bills of sale are both absolute and both are registered<sup>1</sup>, priority is given<sup>2</sup> to the first to register<sup>3</sup>. The second bill is valid despite the previous disposition, because the requirement that the grantor of a security bill of sale must be the true owner appears only in the Bills of Sale Act (1878) Amendment Act 1882, which is limited to security bills<sup>4</sup>. The effect of this<sup>5</sup> is thus to create an exception to the rule nemo dat quod non habet<sup>6</sup>, as, if the grantee of the second bill is the first to register, he acquires a good title despite the fact that his grantor, having granted the first bill, had no title to convey<sup>7</sup>. It would seem that the grantee of the second bill obtains priority in this case even if he took with notice of the first bill<sup>8</sup>.

If neither bill is registered, priority is determined by general equitable principles. The grantee under the first bill obtains priority<sup>9</sup> unless his interest under that bill is purely equitable and the grantee under the second bill acquires the legal title for value and without notice of the prior bill, in which case he has priority<sup>10</sup>. However, the priority established by application of these principles is provisional only, since it may be displaced later as a result of registration by one of the grantees within the permitted time as extended by the court<sup>11</sup>.

1 As to absolute bills of sale see PARA 1838 et seq. As to registration see PARA 1844 et seq. As to the statutory definition of 'bill of sale' see PARA 1638 et seq. As to bills of sale at common law see PARA 1620 et seq.

2 le under the Bills of Sale Act 1878 s 10: see PARA 1800.

4 See the Bills of Sale Act (1878) Amendment Act 1882 s 3.

5 le the Bills of Sale Act 1878 s 10.

6 le no one can give what he does not have.

7 Lyons v Tucker (1881) 7 QBD 523, CA. In addition, the Bills of Sale Act 1878 s 10 expands the operation of s 8 (see PARA 1849), since failure to register would not, under that provision, avoid the bill against the grantee of a subsequent bill.

8 Cf Edwards v Edwards (1876) 2 ChD 291, CA (execution creditor is entitled to set up non-registration against the grantor of the bill even though the execution creditor was aware of the bill at the time the debt was contracted to him). It would seem that, if the grantee of the second bill is the first to register, he obtains priority even if the time for registration of the first bill has not yet expired, and it is thought that, as between two persons claiming title under bills of sale, the priority rule established by the Bills of Sale Act 1878 s 10 (see PARA 1800) takes precedence over the provisions of the Factors Act 1889 s 8 and of the Sale of Goods Act 1979 s 24, which enable a seller remaining in possession to pass title to a bona fide purchaser or other transferee by transfer or delivery of the goods (see SALE OF GOODS AND SUPPLY OF SERVICES vol 41 (2005 Reissue) PARA 157); see the Sale of Goods Act 1979 s 62(3) (which provides that nothing in that Act is to affect enactments relating to bills of sale); and SALE OF GOODS AND SUPPLY OF SERVICES vol 41 (2005 Reissue) PARA 10.

9 Although the Bills of Sale Act 1878 s 8 renders an unregistered bill void against stated categories of third party (see PARA 1849), these do not include subsequent transferees.

10 This is in accordance with the maxim that where equities are equal the law prevails: see EQUITY vol 16(2) (Reissue) PARA 570; MORTGAGE vol 77 (2010) PARA 274.

11 In this event the grantee effecting registration gains priority under the Bills of Sale Act 1878 s 10: see PARA 1800.

Priority where both bills security.

1802. Priority where both bills security.

If the two bills of sale<sup>1</sup> are both security bills, priority is determined according to the order of registration<sup>2</sup>. The second bill is valid because the previous disposition, being by way of mortgage only, leaves the grantor with an equity of redemption, so that he continues to be the true owner for the purpose of the provision avoiding bills as respects after-acquired property<sup>3</sup>, and is therefore competent to grant the second bill<sup>4</sup>. If neither bill is registered, no question of priority arises, as both are void as to the security<sup>5</sup>.

Where the first bill of sale<sup>1</sup> is absolute, the grantor wholly divests himself of title, with the result that, even if the absolute bill is unregistered, a subsequent security bill given by the grantor will be void<sup>2</sup> unless one of the exceptions to the requirement of true ownership applies<sup>3</sup>. #### (xiii) Impact of Other Subsequent Dealings and Events

1805. Grantee's title usually prevails.

Where, as is usually the case, a security bill of sale<sup>1</sup> operates to transfer a legal title to the grantee, this will usually prevail over all claimants whose interests arise subsequently, including a purchaser, even if buying in good faith and without notice<sup>2</sup>, and a pledgee<sup>3</sup>. The statutory provisions by which a seller of goods who remains in possession can, in certain circumstances, pass a good title to an innocent transferee for value<sup>4</sup> will not apply to a disposition by one who remains in possession after granting a security bill, since he is not a seller for this purpose<sup>5</sup>. Hence such a disposition will not override a legal title previously acquired by the grantee under the bill of sale. If, however, the title acquired by the grantee is purely equitable<sup>6</sup>, a person subsequently acquiring a legal title or interest for value and without notice<sup>7</sup> will, unless himself holding under a registrable bill of sale<sup>8</sup>, prevail over the grantee of the bill.

3 Joseph v Webb (1884) Cab & El 262. Such parties, if taking or delivering possession of the goods, are liable to the grantee in conversion, even if acting in good faith. Similarly an auctioneer selling on the instructions of the grantor is liable (Consolidated Co v Curtis & Son [1892] 1 QB 495; Cochrane v Rymill (1879) 40 LT 744, CA), unless he does not deal with the goods themselves but only introduces a purchaser (National Mercantile Bank v Rymill (1881) 44 LT 767, CA).

5 See the Sale of Goods Act 1979 s 62(3), (4); and SALE OF GOODS AND SUPPLY OF SERVICES vol 41 (2005 Reissue) PARAS 8, 10. The Factors Act 1889 contains no express provision on the point, but the distinction between a sale and a mortgage is well established at common law: see eg Beckett v Tower Assets Co [1891] 1 QB 1.

6 This would be the case if, at the date of the bill, the grantor's interest in the goods was only an equitable interest or if, within the limits permitted by the Bills of Sale Acts (see PARA 1697 et seq), the goods were not owned by the grantor at the date of the bill but were acquired subsequently, vesting in him in equity under the rule in Holroyd v Marshall (1862) 10 HL Cas 191: see PARAS 1622, 1635. As to the Bills of Sale Acts (ie the Bills of Sale Act 1878 and the Bills of Sale Act (1878) Amendment Act 1882) see PARA 1630.

7 Eg under a sale, legal mortgage or pledge. Such a person does not have constructive notice merely by reason of registration of the bill of sale: see PARA 1756.

8 In the case of registrable bills, priorities will be determined in accordance with the principles stated in PARA 1800 et seq.

1807. Distress for rent.

At common law, a landlord can distrain for rent on all goods on the demised premises, whether or not belonging to the tenant<sup>1</sup>. By statute, however, a person other than the tenant whose goods are distrained may secure their release by service of a declaration and inventory on the landlord<sup>2</sup>. These provisions now apply in relation to bills of sale<sup>3</sup> and can accordingly be invoked by the grantee of a bill.

If a landlord distrains on goods included in a bill of sale, and on other goods the property of the grantor, he may be required, under the equitable doctrine of marshalling, to resort in the first place, for satisfaction of rent, to goods not assigned by the bill of sale<sup>4</sup>. When the goods in a bill of sale are taken under a distress for rent which the grantor ought to have paid, the grantee is entitled to be indemnified by the grantor, and, it seems, to recover anything paid by him to discharge the rent<sup>5</sup>.

3 At one time bills of sale were excluded by the Law of Distress Amendment Act 1908 s 4 (see DISTRESS vol 13 (2007 Reissue) PARA 954) but that provision was repealed in relation to bills of sale and hire-purchase agreements by the Consumer Credit Act 1974 Sch 5. Levy of execution.

1810. Levy of execution.

A valid bill of sale<sup>1</sup> is effective against an execution creditor<sup>2</sup>. However, when chattels seized in execution in the High Court are claimed under a security bill, the sheriff may interplead<sup>3</sup>, and an order may then be made for sale of the whole or part of them, and directions may be given for the application of the proceeds of sale in such manner and on such terms as may be just and as may be specified in the order<sup>4</sup>. No such order should be made unless there is reasonable ground to believe that there will be a surplus for the execution creditor, nor, if the security is of doubtful value, should an order for sale be made without the grantee's consent, unless the execution creditor guarantees him against loss<sup>5</sup>.

If the execution is avoided by the judgment debtor's bankruptcy and the chattels, not having been sold, are claimed by the official receiver or trustee, the latter does not stand in the shoes of the execution creditor and there is no power to order a sale<sup>6</sup>.

If an order is made for sale and satisfaction of the grantee's claim, as stated in his particulars, he cannot afterwards claim any further sum from the sheriff<sup>7</sup>.

Where money is paid into court to abide an issue, and the goods are then seized under another execution, the grantee, if he again claims, may be ordered again to find security, on the second interpleader<sup>8</sup>.

If the grantor becomes bankrupt pending an interpleader issue, the trustee of his estate, where there has been no sale, cannot claim, as representing the goods, money paid into court by the grantee<sup>9</sup>.

Although a grantee, by paying money into court to abide the event of an issue, does not thereby acquire any property in the goods, an execution creditor who succeeds on the issue and takes the money out of court cannot again seize the goods under the same judgment<sup>10</sup>.

Where the grantee is made claimant on an interpleader issue, the defendant may defeat his claim by setting up the title of a third party, under a prior bill of sale, in order to prove that the claimant had not, at the date of seizure, the property in the goods or a right to their possession<sup>11</sup>, and such title may be set up even though it has priority over the defendant's claim<sup>12</sup>.

1811. Appointment of receiver.

Without leave of the court, the grantee cannot seize goods in the possession of a receiver duly appointed by the court<sup>1</sup>, and nor can he, after a receiver has been so appointed, remove the goods even if he was in possession before the receiver<sup>2</sup>. Indeed, since the possession of the receiver is the possession of the court<sup>3</sup>, any interference with the receiver's possession is a contempt of court and punishable accordingly<sup>4</sup>. This prohibition is not limited to physical repossession but precludes the grantee from instituting proceedings for recovery of possession without obtaining the leave of the court which appointed the receiver<sup>5</sup>.

These restrictions do not apply where the receiver is appointed by a mortgagee out of court, for the receiver is then not an officer of the court but the agent of the mortgagor, whether appointed under the statutory power<sup>6</sup> or under an express power<sup>7</sup>.

1812. Lien.

Where the grantor of goods comprised in a security bill of sale<sup>1</sup> deposits them with a third party in such circumstances as to give rise to a lien, the third party will in certain circumstances be entitled to exercise such lien against the grantee as well as against the grantor<sup>2</sup>. Even where he cannot do this, the grantee seeking recovery of his goods may, as a condition of being granted an order for specific delivery, be required to compensate the third party for the value he has added to the goods by doing work on them<sup>3</sup>.

1816. Power to grant security bill.

Subject to the statutory provisions relating to the priority of successive bills of sale<sup>1</sup>, the grantor of a security bill cannot usually transfer a greater interest than he himself possesses, so that, if he had previously divested himself of legal title to the goods, no interest in them will pass to the grantee under the bill.

Subordination of prior transferee.

1817. Subordination of prior transferee.

Where a prior transfer, not being itself a registrable bill of sale<sup>1</sup>, passed merely an equitable title, a subsequent bill of sale passing a legal title to a grantee taking in good faith and for value will have priority<sup>2</sup>. Moreover, even where the prior transferee obtained a full legal title, he may be estopped from disputing the authority or right of the transferor to give a security bill, as where the owner, in leaving business assets in the possession of the grantor, holds the grantor out as having authority to raise money on such assets in the ordinary course of business or as being still the owner of the assets<sup>3</sup>.

There are also statutory provisions by which the grantor of a security bill may be able to pass a good title to the grantee despite a prior transfer<sup>4</sup>, but some of these provisions will rarely apply because they operate only where the non-owner delivers the goods pursuant to the disposition made by him, and the grantor of a security bill of sale will almost invariably remain in possession himself<sup>5</sup>.

<sup>1</sup> As to the statutory definition of 'bill of sale' see PARA 1638 et seq. As to bills of sale at common law see PARA 1620 et seq.

<sup>2</sup> Joseph v Lyons (1884) 15 QBD 280, CA; Hallas v Robinson (1885) 15 QBD 288, CA. Different considerations arise where the prior transfer was itself a registrable bill of sale, since the priority rule embodied in the Bills of Sale Act 1878 s 10 then comes into play: see PARA 1800. As to registration see PARA 1754 et seq.

<sup>5</sup> The Factors Act 1889 ss 8, 9 and the Sale of Goods Act 1979 ss 24, 25 protect the transferee only where he has taken delivery: see further SALE OF GOODS AND SUPPLY OF SERVICES vol 41 (2005 Reissue) PARA 158.

Where the grantor was induced to give the bill of sale<sup>1</sup> by reason of the grantee's fraud, the grantor may rescind the bill<sup>2</sup>, so long as he acts within a reasonable time after discovery of the fraud and does not adopt the transaction after such recovery<sup>3</sup>. Thus a bill of sale may be set aside for fraud where the rate of interest was misrepresented<sup>4</sup> or where the lender deliberately concealed his true identity in order to induce the taking of the loan<sup>5</sup> or where the bill was taken in place of a prior bill which the grantee deliberately failed to disclose was void on legal grounds<sup>6</sup>. Similarly a bill may be rescinded for innocent misrepresentation<sup>7</sup>, subject to the statutory power of the court to declare the bill subsisting and award damages in lieu of rescission<sup>8</sup>.

AVOIDANCE UNDER THE BILLS OF SALE ACTS/1822. Types of avoidance.

C. AVOIDANCE UNDER THE BILLS OF SALE ACTS

1822. Types of avoidance.

The extent of avoidance resulting from infringement of the provisions of the Bills of Sale Acts<sup>1</sup> varies according to the particular provision that is contravened. The statutory provisions in question fall into three groups:

- 204 (1) those which render the bill of sale<sup>2</sup> totally void<sup>3</sup>;
- 205 (2) those which render the bill void as to the personal chattels<sup>4</sup> comprised in it, leaving the personal covenants valid<sup>5</sup>; and
- 206 (3) those which render the bill void against third parties as to the personal chattels comprised in it, or as to some of such chattels, leaving the bill fully effective against the grantor both as to the personal covenants and as to the security, and also effective against third parties as to those chattels in respect of which the bill does not contravene the statutory provisions<sup>6</sup>.

In certain cases the grantee may be able to escape the effect of the avoiding provisions by invoking an estoppel against the grantor<sup>7</sup> or by perfecting his title independently of the defective bill<sup>8</sup>. Even where the bill is totally void and these avenues are not open to him, he can pursue a restitutionary remedy for the recovery of his money, with reasonable interest<sup>9</sup>.

BILLS OF SALE/(3) SECURITY BILLS OF SALE/(xv) Avoidance/C. AVOIDANCE UNDER THE BILLS OF SALE ACTS/1823. Bill totally void.

1823. Bill totally void.

A bill of sale<sup>1</sup> by way of security for the payment of money is wholly void if it is not in accordance with the statutory form<sup>2</sup> or if it is made in consideration of any sum under £30<sup>3</sup>. The consequence is that the grantee is disabled not merely from enforcing his security but also from enforcing the covenants for payment and other personal covenants contained in the bill<sup>4</sup>. Avoidance of the bill also renders void contracts of guarantee given to secure performance of the covenants in the bill<sup>5</sup>.

The grantee of a void bill is entitled, however, to recover his loan, with reasonable interest, in an action or claim for money had and received<sup>6</sup>, unless this right of recovery is precluded on some other ground, such as contravention of the Consumer Credit Act 1974 or regulations applying to a regulated agreement secured by the bill<sup>7</sup>.

Where a document mortgages not only personal chattels<sup>8</sup> within the Bills of Sale Acts but other types of property as well, the avoidance of the document as a bill of sale does not affect its validity as to that other property, even where it is the inclusion of that other property which renders the bill void as a bill of sale as not being in accordance with the statutory form<sup>9</sup>. Thus the inclusion of chattels real in the body of the bill avoids the document as to the personal chattels comprised in it but leaves it effective as a security over the chattels real<sup>10</sup>. Again, an unregistered attornment clause in a mortgage, though void in relation to the power of distress it purports to confer, remains effective to establish the relationship of landlord and tenant<sup>11</sup>, and a bill of sale avoided by the Bills of Sale Acts may be valid in so far as it is an assurance of machinery and effects excluded by the Bills of Sale Act 1878<sup>12</sup> from the definition of personal chattels<sup>13</sup> or in so far as it is an assurance of leaseholds<sup>14</sup> or of any property other than personal chattels<sup>15</sup>.

The cases in which a document void as a bill of sale of personal chattels has been held valid in relation to other classes of property were decided on the principle that the Bills of Sale Acts affect documents only to the extent that they are bills of sale, so that such part of the security as does not constitute personal chattels is severable from the remainder<sup>16</sup>. This principle presupposes that the covenant for payment remains valid, for it is not possible for the grantee to retain an effective security for a non-existent monetary obligation. It thus appears that the inclusion in the bill of property not constituting personal chattels within the Bills of Sale Acts may preserve the validity of a personal covenant which would otherwise be rendered wholly void.

AVOIDANCE UNDER THE BILLS OF SALE ACTS/1824. Bill void as regards personal chattels.

1824. Bill void as regards personal chattels.

A security bill of sale<sup>1</sup> is void in respect of the personal chattels<sup>2</sup> comprised in it:

- 207 (1) if it is not duly registered<sup>3</sup>;
- 208 (2) if the consideration is not truly set forth<sup>4</sup>;
- 209 (3) to the extent to which the chattels comprised in the bill were comprised in a prior unregistered bill executed within the preceding seven days<sup>5</sup>;
- 210 (4) if registration of the bill expires without renewal<sup>6</sup> or is avoided as the result of the bill being subject to an unregistered defeasance<sup>7</sup>, condition or declaration of trust<sup>8</sup>.

Every bill of sale is void in respect of the personal chattels comprised in it if the bill is not duly attested<sup>9</sup>. However, in the case of security bills this provision gives way to the controlling provision rendering a bill totally void if it is not in accordance with the statutory form, and failure to attest a security bill will prevent it from according with the statutory form, so that the bill will be wholly void<sup>10</sup>. A security bill will likewise be rendered wholly void, under that controlling provision, if a statement of the consideration is omitted altogether<sup>11</sup>, if an agreed term for defeasance is not inserted in the bill<sup>12</sup>, or if other agreed terms are embodied in a separate document considered to form part of the bill and are terms which are incompatible with the statutory form<sup>13</sup>.

The Bills of Sale Act (1878) Amendment Act 1882 provides that with certain exceptions a security bill of sale<sup>1</sup> is void, except as against the grantor, in respect of chattels which are not specifically described in the schedule<sup>2</sup> or of which the grantor was not the true owner at the time of execution of the bill<sup>3</sup>. However, the inclusion of after-acquired property in the bill usually has the additional effect of preventing the bill from according with the statutory form<sup>4</sup>, thus attracting the stronger provisions of the Bills of Sale Act (1878) Amendment Act 1882 making such a bill wholly void<sup>5</sup>. The true owner may, however, be estopped from disputing that the grantor of a bill was not the owner of the goods when the bill was executed<sup>6</sup>.

In general, possession taken under a void bill of sale<sup>1</sup> does not improve the grantee's position, nor is the bill of sale any defence to an action against the grantee for seizure of the goods<sup>2</sup>. The grantee may, however, by a subsequent independent bargain or licence acquire an interest in the goods or a right to possess them, and so long as such bargain or licence is not itself adversely affected by the Bills of Sale Acts<sup>3</sup> it can be relied on by the grantee if, at the time it was made or given, no third party had acquired title to the goods; however, no new licence will be inferred merely from the fact that the grantor acquiesces in the exercise by the grantee of his purported right of seizure under the void bill<sup>4</sup>.

BILLS OF SALE/(3) SECURITY BILLS OF SALE/(xv) Avoidance/C. AVOIDANCE UNDER THE BILLS OF SALE ACTS/1827. Whether parties estopped from disputing validity of bill.

1827. Whether parties estopped from disputing validity of bill.

Since the Bills of Sale Act (1878) Amendment Act 1882 was enacted for the protection of grantors of security bills of sale<sup>1</sup>, a grantor is as a rule entitled to assert that a bill of sale is invalid, or that a document purporting to be an absolute transfer is in truth a security bill within the Bills of Sale Acts<sup>2</sup>, despite his signature of the document and his awareness that it did not truly record the bargain concluded between the parties<sup>3</sup>.

In special circumstances, however, where the grantor has in judicial proceedings asserted or relied on the validity of the bill for his own advantage, he may be estopped from alleging that the bill was invalid, even if it is evident from the facts that such allegation would be well-founded<sup>4</sup>. This principle applies with particular force where the grantor has asserted the validity of the bill to the detriment of third parties<sup>5</sup>. However, the court will not lightly hold a party estopped from invoking a statute designed to protect him<sup>6</sup>.

Whilst the grantor of a bill is, except in the case above mentioned, entitled to place the facts before the court and to adduce evidence of any matters affecting the validity of the bill<sup>7</sup>, the grantee would not seem to be in the same position. The Bills of Sale Acts were not enacted for his protection, and there is no good reason why he should be permitted to dispute the validity of a document which he has taken for his own protection, particularly where this would involve his attacking the veracity of a document at the falsity of which he himself connived.

1828. Rights of trustee in bankruptcy.

A trustee of the grantor's estate, in addition to any claim under the Bills of Sale Acts<sup>1</sup>, may impeach a bill of sale<sup>2</sup> under general insolvency law<sup>3</sup>. Subject to the provisions of this and any other relevant statute, the trustee stands in the shoes of the bankrupt and has no greater right to avoid a security bill than has the bankrupt himself<sup>4</sup>.

The court will not interfere by injunction with the rights of a grantee in possession on the mere suggestion by the trustee that he may be able to impeach the bill of sale, unless some facts are deposed to, which, if established, would make the bill void<sup>5</sup>.

3 See PARA 1829; and BANKRUPTCY AND INDIVIDUAL INSOLVENCY vol 3(2) (2002 Reissue) PARA 653 et seq. There were numerous decisions on the effect of the grantor's bankruptcy under the Bankruptcy Act 1914, but with the repeal of that Act by the Insolvency Act 1985, itself repealed and re-enacted by the Insolvency Act 1986, which has substantially changed the law, such decisions are no longer relevant.

1829. Avoidance under the Insolvency Act 1986.

A security bill of sale<sup>1</sup> may be avoided under the Insolvency Act 1986 as a preference<sup>2</sup> or an extortionate credit transaction<sup>3</sup>. It is not, however, susceptible to attack as a transaction at an undervalue, for the grant of security for an existing indebtedness does not reduce the net assets of the grantor<sup>4</sup>, it merely gives the grantee an advantage over other creditors<sup>5</sup>. In consequence it is also outside the statutory provisions relating to transactions in fraud of creditors<sup>6</sup>, which are confined to transactions at an undervalue<sup>7</sup>.

Where the grantee of a bill of sale<sup>1</sup>, void against a trustee in bankruptcy, has in good faith<sup>2</sup> made payments which have relieved the estate, then, whilst such payments do not cure the invalidity of the bill, the trustee's rights to the goods comprised in it will be subjected to a charge in favour of the grantee to secure recoupment to him of the payments so made<sup>3</sup>.

(xvi) Variation

1831. Mode of variation.

When a security bill of sale<sup>1</sup> is given and subsequently, by independent agreement, the parties agree to vary the terms of the bill, such an agreement is not a defeasance, condition or declaration of trust requiring registration as part of the original bill<sup>2</sup>. However, the policy of the Bills of Sale Acts<sup>3</sup> is to ensure that a document giving security over chattels is in accordance with the statutory form<sup>4</sup> and is duly registered so that third parties can inspect the document and make extracts from it. The purpose of the Bills of Sale Acts would be largely frustrated if, after registration of a bill, the parties were to be free to vary it in any way they thought fit by an unregistered document.

It would therefore appear that any document embodying variations of a kind that would, if the document had been executed at the time of the bill, have made the document registrable with the bill as a defeasance, condition or declaration of trust<sup>5</sup>, must itself be registered as a security bill of sale within the Bills of Sale Acts and be in accordance with the statutory form. There seems no reason why the later document should not recite that it is made by way of variation of the existing bill, although being itself a new bill the document must comply with all the requirements of the Bills of Sale Acts. In particular it must state the consideration for which it is given, which must not be less than £30<sup>6</sup>, and, unless given for the purpose of correcting some material error in the original bill, it must not be given within seven days after execution of the original bill, if the latter is unregistered<sup>7</sup>.

(xvii) Transfer

1832. Registration unnecessary.

A transfer or assignment of a registered bill of sale<sup>1</sup> need not be registered<sup>2</sup>, nor is renewal of registration necessary by reason only of a transfer or assignment of a bill of sale<sup>3</sup>.

A memorandum of charge by the transferee of a bill of sale, given by way of sub-mortgage and accompanied by a deposit of the bill of sale and transfer, need not be registered, even though the transferee afterwards acquires the grantor's equity of redemption<sup>4</sup>.

If both grantor and grantee join in transferring a bill of sale on which a balance remains due, a further advance being made to the grantor by the transferee on different terms, but so that the amount secured at any time does not exceed the amount of the original loan with interest thereon, the transfer need not be registered, at all events to the extent of the balance remaining due on the original bill of sale<sup>5</sup>. However, if there is an increase in the amount secured, the transfer amounts to a new bill of sale and must be registered as such<sup>6</sup>.

1833. Position of transferee.

A transferee of a security bill of sale<sup>1</sup> stands in no better position than the transferor<sup>2</sup>, and, if he permits the period of renewal to elapse, the transferred bill will cease to be effective as regards the chattels comprised in it<sup>3</sup>.

1 As to the statutory definition of 'bill of sale' see PARA 1638 et seq. As to bills of sale at common law see PARA 1620 et seq.

2 The principle is established in Re Walden, ex p Odell (1878) 10 ChD 76, CA; Chapman v Knight (1880) 5 CPD 308 (though as the law then stood these cases were probably wrongly decided: see PARA 1634 note 5). There is no provision in the Bills of Sale Acts (ie the Bills of Sale Act 1878 and the Bills of Sale Act (1878) Amendment Act 1882: see PARA 1630) protecting a bona fide assignee for value without notice of the contravention.

3 See the Bills of Sale Act 1878 s 11; and the Bills of Sale Act (1878) Amendment Act 1882 s 8. The decision in Karet v Kosher Meat Supply Association (1877) 2 QBD 361 is sometimes cited in support of this proposition, but needs reconsideration in the light of later cases: see PARA 1634 note 5.

1835. Subsequent bill of sale.

A security bill of sale<sup>1</sup> may be cancelled by another bill relating to the same goods, either by express provision in the later bill or by implication<sup>2</sup>. Where, however, the later bill is taken within seven days of the earlier bill, it will be void unless given for the purpose of correcting some material error in the prior bill and not for the purpose of evading the Bills of Sale Act 1878<sup>3</sup>, and will thus not be effective by itself to cancel the earlier bill.

If the later bill is taken for the purpose of correcting some supposed defect in the first bill when in fact the first bill is valid, the later bill, being intended to operate only in the event of the invalidity of the prior bill, will not be effective to cancel the prior bill<sup>4</sup>. Again, if the second bill is taken in substitution for the first bill under a mistake of fact which leads the grantee to believe that the second bill is valid whereas in truth it is void, as where the grantee is unaware that since execution of the first bill and before the giving of the second bill the grantor had become bankrupt, the prior bill will remain operative<sup>5</sup>.

1836. Entering up satisfaction.

Where the debt secured by a bill of sale<sup>1</sup> has been satisfied or discharged, the registrar may order a memorandum of satisfaction to be written upon any registered copy of the bill<sup>2</sup>. Where a consent to the satisfaction of the bill signed by the person entitled to the benefit of the bill can be obtained, application for leave to enter up satisfaction may be made without notice by affidavit or witness statement<sup>3</sup>. The application will normally be dealt with without a hearing. Where consent cannot be obtained, an order for writing a memorandum of satisfaction must be applied for by claim form<sup>4</sup>, which must be served on the person entitled to the benefit of the bill and must be supported by evidence that the debt (if any) for which the bill of sale was made has been satisfied or discharged<sup>5</sup>.

Where there has been local registration of a bill of sale, a notice of entering up satisfaction in the prescribed form<sup>6</sup> must be transmitted to every district judge to whom a copy of such bill of sale was transmitted under the Bills of Sale Act (1878) Amendment Act 1882<sup>7</sup>, and the district judge must annex the notice to the copy of the bill of sale to which it relates and add to the entry in the index relating to the bill of sale a note that it has been satisfied<sup>8</sup>.

(4) ABSOLUTE BILLS OF SALE*(i) General Effect of the Bills of Sales Acts*1838. Nature of absolute bill of sale.

An absolute bill of sale<sup>1</sup>, for the purposes of the Bills of Sale Acts<sup>2</sup>, is a bill of sale given otherwise than by way of security for the payment of money<sup>3</sup>. Absolute bills, whether given as an outright transfer or as security for performance of a non-monetary obligation, are outside the application of the Bills of Sale Act (1878) Amendment Act 1882 and are governed only by the Bills of Sale Act 1878<sup>4</sup>. An absolute bill of sale given by a company is outside the Bills of Sale Acts altogether<sup>5</sup>, even though the bill of sale is one which falls outside the registration provisions for companies<sup>6</sup>.

- 1 As to the statutory definition of 'bill of sale' see PARA 1638 et seq. As to bills of sale at common law see PARA 1620 et seq.
- 2 Ie the Bills of Sale Act 1878 and the Bills of Sale Act (1878) Amendment Act 1882: see PARA 1630.
- 3 Cf the Bills of Sale Act (1878) Amendment Act 1882 s 3.
- 4 Bills of Sale Act (1878) Amendment Act 1882 s 3. In addition to being governed by the Bills of Sale Act 1878, absolute bills given to secure non-monetary obligations will also be regulated by general principles of mortgage law affecting personal property. Bills of sale of this kind are rare, most absolute bills being by way of outright transfer not securing any obligation, a fact which is assumed in PARA 1840 et seq. Very few absolute bills are registered, as in most cases the transferee takes immediate possession, so that registration is unnecessary. An absolute bill of sale will usually be used only for transactions where it is felt necessary or convenient that the transferor should retain possession for a period, or for transactions where the delivery of possession may otherwise be difficult to prove, as in the case of goods in common establishment: see PARA 1852.
- 5 See NV Slavenburg's Bank v Intercontinental Natural Resources Ltd [1980] 1 All ER 955, [1980] 1 WLR 1076. That case was concerned with a security bill of sale but the principle applies generally to bills of sale by companies.
- 6 See NV Slavenburg's Bank v Intercontinental Natural Resources Ltd [1980] 1 All ER 955, [1980] 1 WLR 1076. The registration provisions of the Companies Act 1985 (ie ss 395, 396 (prospectively repealed) (as to replacement provisions see the Companies Act 2006 ss 860, 861, 870, 874): see PARA 1684 note 1; and COMPANIES vol 15 (2009) PARA 1279) are confined to charges and therefore do not cover absolute bills of sale.

BILLS OF SALE/(4) ABSOLUTE BILLS OF SALE/(i) General Effect of the Bills of Sales Acts/1839. Differences in statutory treatment of absolute and security bills.

1839. Differences in statutory treatment of absolute and security bills.

The differences between the statutory treatment of absolute bills of sale and security bills of sale are as follows<sup>1</sup>.

- 215 (1) An absolute bill does not have to be in any particular form, while a security bill is required to be in accordance with the statutory form<sup>2</sup>.
- 216 (2) An absolute bill must be attested by a solicitor and the attestation must state that before the execution of the bill the effect of it was explained to the grantor by the attesting witness<sup>3</sup>. A security bill may be attested by any credible witness who is not a party to the bill, and the attestation clause need contain no reference to any explanation given to the grantor<sup>4</sup>.
- 217 (3) The various restrictions imposed by the Bills of Sale Act (1878) Amendment Act 1882 on the permissible terms of a security bill<sup>5</sup> do not apply to an absolute bill.
- 218 (4) In the case of an absolute bill, there is no special time limit for registration where the bill is executed out of England<sup>6</sup>.
- 219 (5) Local registration, which is mandatory for security bills<sup>7</sup>, is not prescribed for absolute bills<sup>8</sup>.
- 220 (6) Whilst infringement of certain provisions of the Bills of Sale Acts<sup>9</sup> will render a security bill of sale totally void<sup>10</sup>, contravention of the Bills of Sale Act 1878 never wholly vitiates an absolute bill but merely renders it liable to avoidance against certain classes of third party in circumstances detailed in that Act<sup>11</sup>.
- 221 (7) Priorities between holders of conflicting bills vary according to whether one or other of the bills is an absolute or a security bill<sup>12</sup>.

- 222 (8) The statutory provisions as to satisfaction of bills are appropriate only in relation to security bills<sup>13</sup>.
- 223 (9) An absolute bill, unlike a security bill<sup>14</sup>, gives protection against distress for taxes due from the grantor<sup>15</sup>.
- 224 (10) A hirer or buyer holding a motor vehicle on hire-purchase or conditional sale can pass a good title to a bona fide private purchaser under an absolute bill of sale not given by way of mortgage<sup>16</sup>, whereas the grant of a security bill will not be effective for this purpose<sup>17</sup>.

Except as indicated above, the discussion of the statutory provisions contained in the Bills of Sale Act 1878 affecting security bills of sale applies equally to absolute bills<sup>18</sup>.

Effect of valid absolute bill.

1840. Effect of valid absolute bill.

Even without registration an absolute bill of sale<sup>1</sup>, which divests the grantor of his title to the goods, is generally effective against all third parties<sup>2</sup> except those designated by the Bills of Sale Act 1878<sup>3</sup>. Registration makes the bill effective even as against those designated persons. However, the grantee of an absolute bill given as part of a sale transaction<sup>4</sup> does not have complete protection because, if the grantor, remaining in possession of the goods, delivers them under a sale, pledge or other disposition to a person receiving the goods in good faith and without notice of the bill of sale, that person acquires title<sup>5</sup>. The same applies at common law if the grantee of the bill has allowed the grantor to hold himself out as the true owner or as authorised to dispose of the goods<sup>6</sup>. In all these cases the grantee of the bill loses title, and he is not protected even by registration of the bill, since, quite apart from any holding out that would estop him from disputing the grantor's right of disposal, the doctrine of constructive notice by registration is not applicable in regard to chattels or commercial transactions, so that the transferee is not fixed with notice of the bill merely by reason of registration<sup>7</sup>.

2 Ie other than the grantee of another absolute bill, since priority is then governed by the date of registration under the Bills of Sale Act 1878 s 10: see PARA 1801.

3 Ie those designated in the Bills of Sale Act 1878 s 8: see PARA 1849.

4 The Sale of Goods Act 1979 s 24 (see note 5) applies only to a seller remaining in possession.

5 See the Factors Act 1889 s 8; the Sale of Goods Act 1979 s 24; and SALE OF GOODS AND SUPPLY OF SERVICES vol 41 (2005 Reissue) PARA 157. However, it seems that if the disposition to the third party is itself effected by a bill of sale, those provisions are displaced by the Bills of Sale Act 1878 s 10: see PARA 1801 note 8.

(ii) Form, Contents and Attestation

1841. Requirements as to form and content.

An absolute bill of sale<sup>1</sup>, unlike a security bill<sup>2</sup>, is not required to be in accordance with any particular form, save that it must set forth the consideration for which it is given<sup>3</sup>, must contain or have annexed to it any defeasance, condition or declaration of trust subject to which it is given<sup>4</sup> and must be attested in accordance with the requirements of the Bills of Sale Act 1878<sup>5</sup>.

1 As to the statutory definition of 'bill of sale' see PARA 1638 et seq. As to bills of sale at common law see PARA 1620 et seq.

2 See PARA 1711 et seq.

3 See the Bills of Sale Act 1878 s 8; and PARA 1704. There would seem to be no reason why the bill should not express the transfer as being by way of gift, in consideration of natural love and affection, or as the case may be.

4 See the Bills of Sale Act 1878 s 10(3); and PARA 1748 et seq.

5 See PARA 1842.

BILLS OF SALE/(4) ABSOLUTE BILLS OF SALE/(ii) Form, Contents and Attestation/1842. Attestation requirements.

1842. Attestation requirements.

An absolute bill of sale<sup>1</sup> must be attested by a solicitor of the Supreme Court, and the attestation must state that, before the execution of the bill of sale, its effect has been explained to the grantor by the attesting solicitor<sup>2</sup>, otherwise the bill will be void to the extent, and against the persons, specified in the Bills of Sale Act 1878<sup>3</sup>, though remaining valid as between the parties<sup>4</sup>.

Although the attestation must state that an explanation of the bill has been given, it is not a requirement of the Bills of Sale Act 1878 that an explanation should be given<sup>5</sup>. The affidavit filed on registration need not verify the fact of explanation<sup>6</sup>.

An absolute bill may be attested by the solicitor for both parties<sup>7</sup>, or by the grantee's solicitor<sup>8</sup> or his managing clerk if a solicitor, even though not practising on his own account<sup>9</sup>. However, a solicitor who is party to the bill of sale cannot attest it<sup>10</sup>.

1 As to the statutory definition of 'bill of sale' see PARA 1638 et seq. As to bills of sale at common law see PARA 1620 et seq.

2 Bills of Sale Act 1878 s 10(1). As from a day to be appointed, the reference to the Supreme Court is replaced by a reference to the Senior Courts: s 10(1) (prospectively amended by the Constitutional Reform Act 2005 Sch 11 Pt 2 para 4(1), (3)). At the date at which this volume states the law no such day had been appointed.

This provision, by virtue of the Bills of Sale Act (1878) Amendment Act 1882 s 3, is not repealed by s 10 as regards bills of sale given otherwise than by way of security: Casson v Churchley (1884) 53 LJQB 335. Cf Swift v Pannell (1883) 24 ChD 210. This makes it difficult to apply to an absolute bill the reasoning in Furnivall v Hudson [1893] 1 Ch 335, that the grantor of a security bill may execute the bill by his attorney, there being no requirement that the effect of a security bill be explained to the grantor.

1843. Affidavit of attestation.

An affidavit proving due attestation must be filed on registration<sup>1</sup>. It is not enough to verify the handwriting of the attesting solicitor; the affidavit must depose to the fact that the solicitor whose name appears as the attesting witness was present when the bill of sale<sup>2</sup> was executed by the grantor<sup>3</sup>. It will be sufficient if it can be inferred from the whole affidavit that the solicitor did in fact attest the bill although this is not expressly stated<sup>4</sup>.

(iii) Registration

1844. Time limit for registration.

An absolute bill of sale<sup>1</sup> must be registered within seven clear days<sup>2</sup> after it is made or given<sup>3</sup>. No extension of time is provided for bills executed out of England, as is prescribed for security bills<sup>4</sup>, though the court has a general power to extend the time for registration where failure to register within the time permitted was accidental or due to inadvertence<sup>5</sup>.

1 As to the statutory definition of 'bill of sale' see PARA 1638 et seq. As to bills of sale at common law see PARA 1620 et seq.

2 As to the computation of such periods see TIME vol 97 (2010) PARA 329 et seq. When the time for registration expires on a Sunday or other day on which the registrar's office is closed, the registration is valid if made on the next following day on which the office is open: Bills of Sale Act 1878 s 22. Hence a bill made on a Saturday may be registered at any time up to and including the second Monday afterwards. Weekends and public holidays are not, however, otherwise excluded from the computation of the seven days. Power is given to extend the time for registration in certain cases: see s 14; and PARA 1779 et seq. As to the registrar see PARA 1758 note 5.

1845. Mode of registration.

The method of registration of an absolute bill of sale is the same as for a security bill<sup>1</sup>. The bill cannot be registered unless the original is produced to the Central Office of the High Court<sup>2</sup>, but, where the bill cannot be immediately stamped because it requires adjudication, it is the practice of that department to proceed with registration against a solicitor's undertaking to produce the original after adjudication<sup>3</sup>.

1 As to the statutory definition of 'bill of sale' see PARA 1638 et seq. As to bills of sale at common law see PARA 1620 et seq. As to the registration of security bills see PARA 1758.

2 As to the enrolment of deeds and other documents see CIVIL PROCEDURE vol 11 (2009) PARA 86.

3 There is no specified form of undertaking; an ordinary letter suffices.

1846. Local registration.

The Bills of Sale Acts<sup>1</sup> do not prescribe local registration of absolute bills of sale<sup>2</sup>, but it is the practice of the Central Office of the High Court to transmit copies of absolute bills for local registration in the same circumstances as for security bills<sup>3</sup>, and additional copies should therefore be lodged<sup>4</sup> for that purpose, where requisite. However, registration will not be refused merely because these are not provided.

(iv) Avoidance

1847. Grounds for avoidance.

An absolute bill of sale<sup>1</sup> is not wholly avoided for any contravention of the Bills of Sale Act 1878, but may be rendered void to the extent thereby prescribed<sup>2</sup> where:

- 225 (1) it contravenes the provisions as to successive bills<sup>3</sup>;
- 226 (2) it fails to set forth the consideration for which it is given<sup>4</sup>; or
- 227 (3) the requirements of the Bills of Sale Act 1878 as to attestation and registration<sup>5</sup> are not observed.

1 As to the statutory definition of 'bill of sale' see PARA 1638 et seq. As to bills of sale at common law see PARA 1620 et seq.

2 See PARA 1848. An absolute bill may also be avoided under the Insolvency Act 1986 ss 339, 340, 423: see PARA 1829; and BANKRUPTCY AND INDIVIDUAL INSOLVENCY vol 3(2) (2002 Reissue) PARAS 657-661, 664-667. Unlike a security bill an absolute bill is capable of constituting a transaction at an undervalue.

3 See the Bills of Sale Act 1878 s 9; and PARAS 1755, 1848.

1848. Extent of avoidance.

An absolute bill of sale<sup>1</sup> which, in contravention of the provisions of the Bills of Sale Act 1878, is given within seven days of a prior unregistered bill, is void to the extent to which it is a security for the same debt or part thereof and so far as respects the personal chattels<sup>2</sup> or part thereof comprised in the prior bill<sup>3</sup>. Failure to set forth the consideration for which the bill is given, or to have the bill attested and registered in accordance with the Bills of Sale Act 1878, renders the bill void as against the persons<sup>4</sup> and in the circumstances<sup>5</sup> set out in that Act.

1 As to the statutory definition of 'bill of sale' see PARA 1638 et seq. As to bills of sale at common law see PARA 1620 et seq.

2 As to the meaning of 'personal chattels' see PARA 1662 et seq.

1849. Persons against whom bill avoided.

An absolute bill of sale<sup>1</sup> in which the consideration is not stated or which is not attested and registered in conformity with the Bills of Sale Act 1878 is avoided against trustees or assignees in the grantor's bankruptcy or liquidation<sup>2</sup>, trustees or assignees under any assignment for the benefit of his creditors<sup>3</sup>, sheriffs' officers, and other persons seizing chattels under execution against the grantor; and every person on whose behalf that process of execution has been issued<sup>4</sup>. The bill is not avoided against the grantor or any persons other than those mentioned above<sup>5</sup>.

1 As to the statutory definition of 'bill of sale' see PARA 1638 et seq. As to bills of sale at common law see PARA 1620 et seq.

2 'Trustees' includes the Official Receiver when acting as trustee of the bankrupt's estate (Insolvency Act 1986 s 293(3)) but not, it is thought, when acting as interim receiver under s 286 or as receiver and manager under s 370 prior to his being appointed as trustee or the appointment of an outside trustee. See also BANKRUPTCY AND INDIVIDUAL INSOLVENCY vol 3(2) (2002 Reissue) PARA 233.

3 Such an assignment, if made otherwise than in bankruptcy proceedings, is regulated by the Deeds of Arrangement Act 1914: see generally BANKRUPTCY AND INDIVIDUAL INSOLVENCY vol 3(2) (2002 Reissue) PARA 860 et seq.

Circumstances in which bill avoided.

1850. Circumstances in which bill avoided.

An absolute bill of sale<sup>1</sup> is only avoided<sup>2</sup> so far as regards the property in, or the right to possession of, any chattels comprised in such bill of sale, which at or after the time of the filing of a petition for bankruptcy or liquidation, or of the execution of any assignment for the benefit of creditors, or of the execution of process of any court authorising the seizure of the chattels, as the case may be, and after the expiration of the seven days from execution of the bill of sale allowed for its registration, are in the possession or apparent possession of the grantor<sup>3</sup>. During the seven days allowed for registration, an absolute bill, if otherwise valid, is not avoided by the occurrence of the events mentioned above, although the grantor remains in uncontrolled possession of the chattels comprised therein<sup>4</sup>. If before the occurrence of any of those events the grantee takes and holds actual possession, registration is unnecessary<sup>5</sup>. However, if the grantor remains in apparent possession after the seven days have expired and the bill of sale is unregistered, it is avoided by a current execution of the process of the court, even if this was initiated within the seven days<sup>6</sup>.

1851. Apparent possession.

The rule as to apparent possession now only affects bills of sale<sup>1</sup> to which the Bills of Sale Act (1878) Amendment Act 1882 does not apply. For the purpose of the Bills of Sale Act 1878, personal chattels<sup>2</sup> are deemed to be in the apparent possession of the grantor of a bill so long as they remain or are in or upon any house, mill, warehouse, building, works, yard, land or other premises occupied by him<sup>3</sup>, or are used and enjoyed by him in any place whatever<sup>4</sup>, notwithstanding that formal possession of them may have been taken by or given to any other person<sup>5</sup>.

Chattels not in the possession of the grantor but held for him by a bailee may remain in his apparent possession<sup>6</sup>, though it is otherwise in the case of goods held under a pledge or lien<sup>7</sup>.

Chattels may still be in the grantor's apparent possession although a demand of possession or threat to take forcible possession has been made by the grantee<sup>8</sup>.

1 As to the statutory definition of 'bill of sale' see PARA 1638 et seq. As to bills of sale at common law see PARA 1620 et seq.

2 As to the meaning of 'personal chattels' see PARA 1662 et seq.

3 This means de facto occupation in the ordinary sense of the term: see Robinson v Briggs (1870) LR 6 Exch 1 (where the tenant of the rooms in which the goods were placed resided elsewhere and, having given up the keys to the grantee, was held not to be in occupation). Moreover, occupation means sole occupation. Goods are not in the apparent possession of the grantor merely because they are in premises of which he shares the occupation with another: Koppel v Koppel [1966] 2 All ER 187 at 195, [1966] 1 WLR 802 at 813, CA, per Diplock LJ; French v Gething [1922] 1 KB 236, CA. See also PARA 1852.

4 Chattels are not 'used and enjoyed' by the grantor where they have been let to a third person, together with the house (Re Westray, ex p Morrison (1880) 42 LT 158, where part of the rent was payable to the grantee), or where use and enjoyment is shared with another (see Koppel v Koppel [1966] 2 All ER 187 at 195, [1966] 1 WLR 802 at 813, CA, per Diplock LJ; and PARA 1852).

1852. Chattels in common establishment.

When two persons are together in the enjoyment of chattels, the law refers possession to the one who has the legal title<sup>1</sup>. Thus, if a husband settles on his wife, or sells to her, the furniture and effects of the matrimonial home, the chattels in question are thereafter, in general, deemed to be in her possession and not in the possession or apparent possession of her husband, and the transaction cannot be impeached on the ground that the document of transfer was not registered as a bill of sale<sup>2</sup>. The principle applies not merely between husband and wife but generally between persons sharing a common establishment<sup>3</sup>, though not as between master and servant<sup>4</sup>. However, for the principle to be successfully invoked it must be shown that all necessary steps have been taken to transfer the legal title from the grantor to the person sharing the enjoyment of the chattels and in whose possession they are claimed to be<sup>5</sup>.

BILLS OF SALE/(4) ABSOLUTE BILLS OF SALE/(iv) Avoidance/1853. Termination of apparent possession.

1853. Termination of apparent possession.

To terminate the grantor's apparent possession there must be more than formal possession on the part of another<sup>1</sup>. Something must be done which in the eyes of everybody who sees the goods, or is concerned in the matter, plainly takes the goods out of the possession or apparent possession of the grantor. Where possession is taken merely to prevent removal of the goods, these continuing to be used by the grantor or everything proceeding as it did before, the goods remain in his apparent possession<sup>2</sup>. However, if the grantee has taken actual possession, even though it be wrongful<sup>3</sup>, and the goods no longer appear to be in the possession of the grantor, the Bills of Sale Act 1878 does not apply, even though the goods remain on premises occupied by the grantor<sup>4</sup>. Chattels of which the sheriff has taken and holds actual possession under an execution do not remain in the grantor's apparent possession<sup>5</sup>.

(5) GENERAL ASSIGNMENT OF BOOK DEBTS

1854. Necessity for registration.

Debts and other choses in action are outside the definition of 'personal chattels' for the purpose of the Bills of Sale Acts<sup>1</sup>, so that an assignment of debts is not a bill of sale<sup>2</sup> and is not in general registrable. However, where a person engaged in any business makes a general assignment to another person of his existing or future book debts, or any class of them, and is subsequently adjudged bankrupt, the assignment is void against the trustee of his estate as regards any book debts which were not paid before the presentation of the bankruptcy petition, unless the assignment has been registered under the Bills of Sale Act 1878<sup>3</sup>. The term 'assignment' includes an assignment by way of security or charge on book debts<sup>4</sup> but 'general assignment' does not include an assignment of book debts due at the date of the assignment from specified debtors or of debts becoming due under specified contracts, or any assignment of book debts included either in a transfer of business made in good faith and for value, or in an assignment of assets for the benefit of creditors generally<sup>5</sup>.

This provision, being confined to the eventuality of bankruptcy, does not apply to general assignments made by a company<sup>6</sup>.

1 See the Bills of Sale Act 1878 s 4; and PARA 1662 et seq. As to the Bills of Sale Acts (ie the Bills of Sale Act 1878 and the Bills of Sale Act (1878) Amendment Act 1882) see PARA 1630.

1855. Form and filing.

Since a general assignment of book debts<sup>1</sup> is not declared to be a bill of sale<sup>2</sup> but is merely registrable under the Bills of Sale Act 1878 as if it were a bill of sale given otherwise than as security for the payment of a sum of money<sup>3</sup>, it does not require to be in accordance with any particular form, even if made by way of security. However, the registration provisions of the Bills of Sale Act 1878<sup>4</sup> have an impact on the form of the assignment in that they require the assignment, as a deemed bill of sale, to be witnessed<sup>5</sup> and any defeasance, condition or declaration of trust to be written on the same paper or parchment before registration and filed with it and as part of it<sup>6</sup>. The assignment must be filed in the separate register of assignments of book debts kept in the Central Office of the High Court<sup>7</sup>. Application for registration is made by producing at the Central Office a true copy of the assignment, and of every schedule to it, together with a witness statement or affidavit verifying the date and the time<sup>8</sup>, and the due execution of the assignment in the presence of the witness, and setting out the particulars of the assignment and the parties to it<sup>9</sup>. The copy of the assignment and schedule or schedules, together with the affidavit or witness statement, are filed, and particulars of the assignment are entered in the register<sup>10</sup>.

Attestation is also rendered necessary by the Law of Property (Miscellaneous Provisions) Act 1989 s 1(3) (see DEEDS AND OTHER INSTRUMENTS vol 13 (2007 Reissue) PARA 33) if the assignment is by deed and, whether or not it is by deed, by the filing requirements imposed by CPR Sch 1 RSC Ord 95 r 6(2). See the text and notes 8-9. It is important to record not only the date but the time of day of execution as this is required to be stated in the verifying affidavit: see the Bills of Sale Act 1878 s 10(2). It is not the practice to refuse registration merely because the time of day is omitted but in view of the mandatory requirements of s

10(2) failure to include the time in the affidavit is likely to vitiate the registration and render the assignment liable to avoidance under the Insolvency Act 1986 s 344: see PARA 1854; and BANKRUPTCY AND INDIVIDUAL INSOLVENCY vol 3(2) (2002 Reissue) PARA 676.

(A) NATURE OF BUILDING SOCIETIES

1856. General nature of building societies.

A building society is a society incorporated under the Building Societies Act 1986<sup>1</sup>. A society may be established if (1) its purpose or principal purpose is that of making loans which are secured on residential property<sup>2</sup> and are funded substantially by its members<sup>3</sup>; and (2) its principal office is in the United Kingdom<sup>4</sup>.

Building societies are mutual associations which were originally unincorporated and terminating. Over the years terminating societies have been replaced by permanent societies. Members subscribe to a society by investing in its shares, upon which interest is paid in accordance with the society's rules. Unlike the share capital of a limited liability company the share capital of a building society is, with limited exceptions<sup>5</sup>, subject to fluctuation, and a society has no fixed amount of authorised share capital. No limit is therefore placed on the number of shares which it may issue, and, subject to the society's rules and the terms on which their shares were issued, members may withdraw their share investments. A society may accept deposits or loans from members or non-members, to be applied for its purposes<sup>6</sup>. Out of the funds so acquired loans may be made to members secured on residential property<sup>7</sup>.

of s 5 was in the United Kingdom, is deemed to be registered and incorporated under the Building Societies Act 1986: s 5(4). As to the incorporation of societies see PARAS 1865-1866. As to the requirements for principal offices see PARA 1872. The constitution, powers and regulation of societies are dealt with in Sch 2 (see PARA 1867 et seq): see s 5(8) (amended by the Building Societies Act 1997 s 3(1)). As to the meaning of 'United Kingdom' see PARA 2 note 3.

The Treasury has power by order to make such modifications to the Building Societies Act 1986 as it considers appropriate for or in connection with facilitating the provision of relevant financial assistance by the Bank of England to building societies (ie building societies incorporated (or deemed to be incorporated) under the Building Societies Act 1986): Banking (Special Provisions) Act 2008 s 11(1), (5). For these purposes 'relevant financial assistance' means any financial assistance provided for the purpose of maintaining the stability of the financial system in the United Kingdom: s 11(2). An order under s 11 may in particular make provision for or in connection with modifying the operation of any of the following: (1) the Building Societies Act 1986 s 5 (see also PARAS 1865, 1867), s 6 (see PARAS 1916, 2008), s 7 (see PARA 1916), Sch 2 (see PARA 1865 et seq) (establishment, constitution and powers, the lending limit and the funding limit); (2) any other provision of the Building Societies Act 1986 which might otherwise prevent any relevant financial assistance from being provided by the Bank of England to building societies or affect the amount of any such assistance; (3) s 8 (see PARAS 1905, 1917), s 9A (see PARA 2040) and s 9B (see PARA 2042) (restrictions on raising funds and borrowing, on transactions involving derivative instruments etc and on creation of floating charges); (4) any other provision of the Building Societies Act 1986 which might otherwise prevent building societies from entering into any transaction in connection with the provision of financial assistance by the Bank of England to building societies; (5) s 90 (see PARA 2071), s 90A (see PARA 2079), Sch 15 (see PARA 2071 et seq) and Sch 15A (see PARA 2079) (application of companies winding up legislation and other companies insolvency legislation to building societies): Banking (Special Provisions) Act 2008 s 11(4). At the date at which this volume states the law no such order had been made. As to the Treasury see PARA 3; and CONSTITUTIONAL LAW AND HUMAN RIGHTS vol 8(2) (Reissue) PARA 512 et seq. As to the Bank of England see PARA 74; and PARA 793 et seq. See also PARA 791.

2 'Residential property' means land at least 40% of which: (1) is normally used as, or in connection with, one or more dwellings; or (2) has been, is being or is to be developed or adapted for such use: Building Societies Act 1986 s 5(10) (substituted by the Building Societies Act 1997 s 1(4)). For the purposes of the Building Societies Act 1986 s 5(10), the area of any land which comprises a building or other structure containing two or more storeys is taken to be the aggregate of the floor areas of each of those storeys: s 5(10) (as so substituted).

3 As to membership see PARA 1888 et seq.

4 Building Societies Act 1986 s 5(1) (substituted by the Building Societies Act 1997 s 1(1)). If, after its establishment, a society fails to comply with these requirements, the powers conferred on the Financial Services Authority by the Building Societies Act 1986 s 36 (power to direct restructuring of the business) (see PARA 2047) or s 37 (power to petition for winding up the society) (see PARA 2049) become exercisable in relation to the society, but the failure does not affect the validity of any transaction or other act: s 5(4A) (added by the Building Societies Act 1997 s 1(2); and amended by SI 2001/2617). As to the Financial Services Authority see PARA 1863. As to the Authority generally see PARAS 4, 6 et seq.

As from a day to be appointed, the provisions of the Building Societies Act 1986 s 5(11)-(14) are added by the Building Societies (Funding) and Mutual Societies (Transfers) Act 2007 s 1(2). At the date at which this volume states the law, no such day had been appointed. The Treasury may by order amend the Building Societies Act 1986 s 5(1)(a) (see head (1) in the text) so as to alter the extent to which the making of loans is required to be funded by a society's members: s 5(11) (as so prospectively added). An order under s 5 may make such consequential, saving, supplementary or transitional provision as the Treasury thinks necessary or expedient: s 5(12) (as so prospectively added). The consequential provision that may be made by virtue of s 5(12) includes, in particular, provision amending any of the following so far as relating to funding by the members of a society: (1) s 1(1)(a) (functions of the Authority in relation to building societies) (see PARA 1863); (2) s 93(2)(a) (amalgamations) (see PARA 1918); (3) Sch 2 para 2 (memorandum) (see PARAS 1867, 1874): s 5(13) (as so prospectively added). The power to make an order under s 5 is exercisable by statutory instrument, but no such order may be made unless a draft of it has been laid before and approved by a resolution of each House of Parliament: s 5(14) (as so prospectively added).

5 Ie permanent interest bearing shares which are deferred shares: see PARA 1906 text and notes 7-8.

6 But note the restrictions on the acceptance of deposits from individuals: see PARA 1917.

7 The funds may be used for other permitted purposes. It is unlawful for a society to discriminate on the ground of colour, race, ethnic or national origins, disability, religion or belief or sexual orientation in the provision of services: see the Sex Discrimination Act 1975 s 29; the Race Relations Act 1976 s 20; the Disability Discrimination Act 1995 s 19; the Equality Act 2006 Pt 2 (ss 44-80); the Equality Act (Sexual Orientation) Regulations 2007, SI 2007/1263; and DISCRIMINATION vol 13 (2007 Reissue) PARAS 382, 461, 582 et seq, 691 et seq, 753. As to circumstances where less favourable treatment is justified in relation to guarantees and deposits in respect of goods and facilities see PARA 839.

1857. Exemption from stamp duty and stamp duty land tax.

There is a general exemption from stamp duty<sup>1</sup> for any instrument required or authorised to be given, issued, signed, made or produced under the Building Societies Act 1986 or the rules of a building society<sup>2</sup>. Certain documents are expressly exempted from stamp duty by the Act including:

- 228 (1) any copy of the rules of a society<sup>3</sup>;
- 229 (2) any transfer of a society share<sup>4</sup>;
- 230 (3) any bond or other security to be given to, or on account of, a society or by an officer<sup>5</sup> of a society<sup>6</sup>; and
- 231 (4) any instrument appointing or revoking the appointment of an agent of a society<sup>7</sup>.

No stamp duty arises on any transfer of business to a commercial company<sup>8</sup>.

For the purposes of stamp duty land tax<sup>9</sup>, a land transaction<sup>10</sup> effected by or in consequence of an amalgamation of two or more building societies<sup>11</sup> or a transfer of engagements between building societies<sup>12</sup>, is exempt from charge<sup>13</sup>. Relief under this provision must be claimed in a land transaction return<sup>14</sup> or an amendment of such a return<sup>15</sup>.

(B) REVIEW OF LEGISLATION

1858. Building societies legislation.

The Building Societies Act 1986 repealed the Building Societies Act 1962, which was largely a consolidating Act drawing together provisions from previous legislation, particularly the Building Societies Act 1874. The Building Societies Act 1986 makes major reform to the legislation governing building societies<sup>1</sup>. All building societies are now governed by the Building Societies Act 1986, which makes provision for many matters to be dealt with by delegated legislation, reflecting the need for flexibility in the application of the Act. The Building Societies Act 1986 has in turn been substantially amended including by the Building Societies (Joint Account Holders) Act 1995<sup>2</sup>, the Building Societies Act 1997<sup>3</sup>, the Building Societies (Distributions) Act 1997<sup>4</sup> and the Financial Services and Markets Act 2000<sup>5</sup>.

1 See the preamble to the Building Societies Act 1986, which indicates that it is an 'Act to make fresh provision with respect to building societies'. As to the commencement of the Act see s 126 (amended by the Statute Law (Repeals) Act 2004); the Building Societies Act 1986 (Commencement No 1) Order 1986, SI 1986/1560; and the Building Societies Act 1986 (Commencement No 2) Order 1989, SI 1989/1083.

2 As to the commencement of the Building Societies (Joint Account Holders) Act 1995 see s 2.

The Building Societies Act 1986 generally applies to England and Wales, Scotland and Northern Ireland<sup>1</sup>. Appropriate definitions, substitutions and variations relating to Scotland or Northern Ireland are contained in the Act<sup>2</sup>.

1 See the Building Societies Act 1986 s 5(4) (see PARA 1856), s 122(1) (amended by the Statute Law (Repeals) Act 2004). The Building Societies Act 1986 s 122(1) is subject to s 120(3) which provides that where any enactment amended or repealed or revoked by the Building Societies Act 1986 extends to any part of the United Kingdom, the amendment, repeal or revocation extends to that part. As to the meaning of 'United Kingdom' see PARA 2 note 3.

1860. Power to modify legislation to assimilate to company law.

The Treasury<sup>1</sup> has power to modify<sup>2</sup> relevant provisions<sup>3</sup> of the Building Societies Act 1986 as it thinks appropriate for the purpose of assimilating the law relating to companies<sup>4</sup> and the law relating to building societies<sup>5</sup>. This power includes the power to modify the relevant provisions of the Building Societies Act 1986 so as to confer power to make orders, regulations, rules or other subordinate legislation, create criminal offences or provide for the charging of fees but not any charge in the nature of taxation<sup>6</sup>. Such an order may make consequential amendments of or repeals in other provisions of the Building Societies Act 1986<sup>7</sup>, or make such transitional or saving provisions as appear to the Treasury to be necessary or expedient<sup>8</sup>. The power to make such an order is exercisable by statutory instrument but no such order may be made unless a draft of it has been laid before and approved by a resolution of each House of Parliament<sup>9</sup>.

1 As to the Treasury see PARA 3; and CONSTITUTIONAL LAW AND HUMAN RIGHTS vol 8(2) (Reissue) PARA 512 et seq.

2 'Modification' includes any additions and, as regards modifications of the statutory provisions relating to companies, any modification whether effected by any future Act or by an instrument made after the passing of the Building Societies Act 1986 under an Act whenever passed: s 104(6). 'Statutory provisions' includes the provisions of any instrument made under an Act: s 104(6).

3 The relevant provisions are so much of the Building Societies Act 1986 Pt VI (ss 36-57) as relates to investigations or inspections (see PARA 2047 et seq), Pt VII (ss 58-70) (management) (see PARA 1944 et seq), Pt VIII (ss 71-81) (accounts and audit) (see PARAS 1991-2004), so much of Pt X (ss 86-103) as relates to winding up or insolvency (see PARAS 1918 et seq, 2041, 2066 et seq), and s 110 (exemption of officers and auditors from liability) (see PARAS 1970-1971): s 104(2) (amended by the Companies Act 1989 s 211(1); and the Building Societies Act 1997 Sch 7 para 48).

1861. Application of company law to the registration of charges created by building societies.

For the purpose of securing the registration of charges created by building societies, the Secretary of State<sup>1</sup> may, by order made with the concurrence of the Treasury<sup>2</sup>, provide that such of the provisions of Part XII of the Companies Act 1985<sup>3</sup> and Part XIII of the Companies (Northern Ireland) Order 1986<sup>4</sup> as may be specified in the order apply in relation to societies, and charges created by societies, with such modifications as may be so specified<sup>5</sup>. Such an order may make different provision for different cases or different areas and may contain such incidental, supplemental and transitional provisions as may appear to the Secretary of State to be necessary or expedient<sup>6</sup>. The power to make such an order is exercisable by statutory instrument which is subject to annulment in pursuance of a resolution of either House of Parliament<sup>7</sup>.

MUTUAL SOCIETIES/(1) BUILDING SOCIETIES/(i) Constitution of Building Societies/A. INTRODUCTION/(B) Review of Legislation/1862. Conveyancing services.

1862. Conveyancing services.

The following provisions were to have effect but are now prospectively repealed<sup>1</sup>. The Courts and Legal Services Act 1990 provides for building societies, if they become 'authorised practitioners', to provide conveyancing services. Authorised practitioners will be permitted to provide conveyancing services and the statutory restriction<sup>2</sup> limiting the categories of person who may provide conveyancing services will not apply to any act done in connection with the provision of conveyancing services by an authorised practitioner<sup>3</sup>. On an application made by a person who proposes to provide conveyancing services, the Authorised Conveyancing Practitioners Board must authorise that person to provide those services, if<sup>4</sup>: (1) it is satisfied that the applicant's business is, and is likely to continue to be, carried on by fit and proper persons or, in the case of an application by an individual, that he is a fit and proper person<sup>5</sup>; and (2) it is of the opinion that the applicant will comply with the statutory requirements<sup>6</sup>.

1 The Courts and Legal Services Act 1990 ss 36, 37, 43 were to be brought into force by order made by the Lord Chancellor or by the Secretary of State or by both acting jointly under s 124(3) as from a day to be appointed but those provisions are repealed by the Legal Services Act 2007 ss 208(1), 210, Sch 21 paras 83, 87, Sch 23 as from a day to be appointed under s 211(2). At the date at which this volume states the law no such day had been appointed. As to the Lord Chancellor see CONSTITUTIONAL LAW AND HUMAN RIGHTS vol 8(2) (Reissue) PARA 477 et seq. As to the Secretary of State see PARA 3. As to the Legal Services Act 2007 generally see COURTS; LEGAL PROFESSIONS.

The provisions relating to the provision of conveyancing services by building societies and others in the Building Societies Act 1986 s 124, Sch 21 (provision of conveyancing services by recognised institutions and practitioners) were repealed (by the Statute Law (Repeals) Act 2004) before they were brought into force.

3 See the Courts and Legal Services Act 1990 s 36(1). The Secretary of State may make regulations about the competence and conduct of authorised practitioners: see s 40 (amended by SI 2003/1881). At the date at which this volume states the law no such regulations had been made. See note 1.

5 Courts and Legal Services Act 1990 s 37(1)(a). See note 1.

6 Courts and Legal Services Act 1990 s 37(1)(b). The statutory requirements referred to in the text relate to compliance with rules made by the Board or regulations made by the Lord Chancellor, arrangements for covering against claims made against the applicant in connection with conveyancing services, procedures for dealing with complaints and payment of compensation, protection of clients if the applicant ceases to provide conveyancing services, and membership of the Conveyancing Ombudsman Scheme: s 37(7). As to the Conveyancing Ombudsman Scheme see s 43 (amended by SI 2003/1887). See note 1.

Functions of the Financial Services Authority in relation to building societies.

(C) THE FINANCIAL SERVICES AUTHORITY

1863. Functions of the Financial Services Authority in relation to building societies.

Building societies are regulated by the Financial Services Authority, a body corporate<sup>1</sup> whose functions are conferred by or under the Financial Services and Markets Act 2000<sup>2</sup>. In relation to societies, the general functions of the Authority under the Financial Services and Markets Act 2000 are amplified by its additional functions under the Building Societies Act 1986, which are<sup>3</sup>:

- 232 (1) to secure that the principal purpose of societies remains that of making loans which are secured on residential property<sup>4</sup> and are funded substantially by their members<sup>5</sup>;
- 233 (2) to administer the system of regulation of societies provided for by or under the Building Societies Act 1986<sup>6</sup>; and
- 234 (3) to advise and make recommendations to the Treasury<sup>7</sup> and other government departments on any matter relating to societies<sup>8</sup>.

In relation to societies, the Authority also has the other functions conferred by or under the Building Societies Act 1986 or any other enactment<sup>9</sup>, of:

- 235 (a) registering memoranda and rules of societies<sup>10</sup>;
- 236 (b) confirming and registering amalgamations<sup>11</sup>, transfers of engagements<sup>12</sup> and dissolutions<sup>13</sup>; and
- 237 (c) maintaining the public records of societies<sup>14</sup>.

1864. The public file.

The Financial Services Authority<sup>1</sup> must prepare and maintain a public file relating to each building society which<sup>2</sup>: (1) contains the documents or, as the case may be, the copies of the documents and the records of the matters directed by or under any provision of the Building Societies Act 1986 to be kept in the public file of the society<sup>3</sup>; and (2) is available for inspection on reasonable notice by members of the public<sup>4</sup>. The Authority may charge a reasonable fee for making the public file available to any person for inspection under head (2) above<sup>5</sup>. Any member of the public is entitled to be furnished with a copy of all or any of the documents or records kept in the public file of a society<sup>6</sup>, and the Authority may charge a reasonable fee for furnishing any person with a copy of any such documents or records<sup>7</sup>. The Authority may by directions<sup>8</sup> make provision with respect to the form of, and particulars to be included in, any document to be sent to it<sup>9</sup>.

B. ESTABLISHMENT OF A BUILDING SOCIETY

1865. Establishment and incorporation of a new building society.

In order to establish a building society ten or more persons are required to<sup>1</sup>:

- 238 (1) agree upon the purpose or principal purpose of the society<sup>2</sup> and the extent of its powers in a memorandum<sup>3</sup> the provisions of which comply with the requirements of the Building Societies Act 1986<sup>4</sup>;
- 239 (2) agree upon rules for the regulation of the society which comply with the requirements of the Act<sup>5</sup>; and
- 240 (3) send to the Financial Services Authority<sup>6</sup> three copies of the memorandum and the rules, each copy signed by at least ten of those persons (or, if there are only ten, by all of them) and by the intended secretary<sup>7</sup>.

If the Authority is satisfied that<sup>8</sup>:

- 241 (a) the provisions of the memorandum are in conformity with the Act and any instruments made under it<sup>9</sup>;
- 242 (b) the rules are in conformity with the Act<sup>10</sup>; and
- 243 (c) the intended name of the society is not, in its opinion, undesirable<sup>11</sup>, it must register the society and issue it with a certificate of incorporation<sup>12</sup>. The society is incorporated as from the date on which it is registered by the Authority<sup>13</sup>.

On registering a society the Authority must<sup>14</sup>:

- 244 (i) retain and register one copy of the memorandum and of the rules<sup>15</sup>;
- 245 (ii) return another copy to the secretary of the society, together with a certificate of registration<sup>16</sup>; and
- 246 (iii) keep another copy, together with a copy of the certificate of incorporation, and of the certificate of registration of the memorandum and the rules, in the public file of the society<sup>17</sup>.

1866. Effects of incorporation.

Although the court cannot declare the incorporation of a building society<sup>1</sup> void on the ground that it has been obtained by fraud or irregularity<sup>2</sup> the Financial Services Authority<sup>3</sup> has the power to cancel the registration of a society<sup>4</sup> if it is satisfied that the certificate of incorporation has been obtained for the society by fraud or mistake<sup>5</sup> and that the society does not have permission under Part IV of the Financial Services and Markets Act 2000<sup>6</sup> to accept deposits<sup>7</sup>. Before cancelling the registration on this ground it must give the society not less than two months' previous notice<sup>8</sup>, specifying briefly the grounds of the proposed cancellation<sup>9</sup>. Where the registration is so cancelled the society may appeal to: (1) the High Court<sup>10</sup>, where the principal office of the society is situated in England and Wales or in Northern Ireland<sup>11</sup>; or (2) the Court of Session, where the principal office is situated in Scotland<sup>12</sup>. The court may set aside the cancellation if it thinks it is just to do so<sup>13</sup>.

A building society, since it is a body corporate<sup>14</sup>, may sue and be sued in its registered name<sup>15</sup>.

1867. Limitations on choice of name.

The name of the building society must be specified both in the memorandum<sup>1</sup> and in the rules<sup>2</sup>. Before registering a new society the Financial Services Authority<sup>3</sup> must be of the opinion that the intended name of the society is not undesirable<sup>4</sup>.

1 See the Building Societies Act 1986 s 5(8), Sch 2 para 2(2)(a) (substituted by the Building Societies Act 1997 Sch 7 para 56(3)). As to the meaning of 'memorandum' see PARA 1873 note 2.

As to the power to modify certain legislation applying in relation to building societies see the Banking (Special Provisions) Act 2008 s 11; and PARA 1856 note 1.

2 See the Building Societies Act 1986 Sch 2 para 3(1), (4). See also PARA 1878.

1868. Use of registered name.

Every building society must paint or affix, and keep painted or affixed, its registered name<sup>1</sup> on the outside of every office or place in which its business is carried on, in a conspicuous position and in letters easily legible<sup>2</sup>. If a society does not paint or affix its registered name or keep its registered name painted or affixed, as so required, the society will be liable on summary conviction to a fine<sup>3</sup>.

Every society must state its registered name in legible characters which are reasonably prominent in all of the following documents, in every electronic communication<sup>4</sup> containing any of the following documents and on every website on which any of the following documents is published<sup>5</sup>:

- 247 (1) its business letters<sup>6</sup>;
- 248 (2) its account statements, including those relating to deposit<sup>7</sup>, share<sup>8</sup>, loan or mortgage<sup>9</sup> accounts<sup>10</sup>;
- 249 (3) its passbooks<sup>11</sup>;
- 250 (4) its notices<sup>12</sup> and publications, including all documents sent to members<sup>13</sup>;
- 251 (5) its invoices and receipts<sup>14</sup>;
- 252 (6) its letters of credit and any instruments creating or acknowledging its indebtedness<sup>15</sup>;
- 253 (7) its contracts, agreements, mortgages and deeds<sup>16</sup>; and
- 254 (8) its bills of exchange, promissory notes, indorsements, cheques and orders for money or goods<sup>17</sup>.

A society which, without reasonable excuse, does not comply with this requirement is liable on summary conviction to a fine<sup>18</sup>. If an officer<sup>19</sup> of a society or a person on its behalf issues or authorises the issue of any document mentioned in heads (1) to (7) above, in which the society's registered name is not stated as so required, he is liable on summary conviction to a fine<sup>20</sup>. If an officer of a society or a person on its behalf signs or authorises to be signed on behalf of the society any document mentioned in head (8) above in which the society's registered name is not stated as so required he is liable on summary conviction to a fine<sup>21</sup>, and he is further personally liable to the holder of the bill of exchange, promissory note, cheque or order for money or goods for the amount of it (unless it is duly paid by the society)<sup>22</sup>.

The society must in all documents mentioned in heads (1) to (8) above state in legible characters an address in the United Kingdom<sup>23</sup> at which service of any document relating in any way to the business will be effective<sup>24</sup>. The society must also in any premises where the business is carried on and to which the members of the society, the customers of the business or suppliers of any goods or services to the business have access, display in a prominent position so that it may easily be read by such persons a notice containing the society's registered name and the address for service<sup>25</sup>. The society must secure that the registered name and the address for service are immediately given, by written notice, to any person with whom anything is done or discussed in the course of the business and who asks for the registered name or the address for service<sup>26</sup>. A society which, without reasonable excuse, does not comply with the statutory requirements relating to disclosure of registered name and address for service<sup>27</sup>, or any associated regulations<sup>28</sup>, is liable on summary conviction to a fine<sup>29</sup>.

The common seal of a society must bear the society's registered name<sup>30</sup>.

1 For the purposes of the Building Societies Act 1986 s 5(8), Sch 2 paras 9, 10-10C, 'registered name', in relation to a building society, means the name of the society which is for the time being registered with the Financial Services Authority: Building Societies Act 1986 Sch 2 para 9(8) (added by the Building Societies Act 1997 s 36(2); and amended by SI 2001/2617). MUTUAL SOCIETIES/(1) BUILDING SOCIETIES/(i) Constitution of Building Societies/C. NAME AND PRINCIPAL OFFICE/(A) Name of Building Society/1869. Method of changing name.

1869. Method of changing name.

A building society may change its name by special resolution<sup>1</sup>. Notice<sup>2</sup> of the change of name must be sent to the Financial Services Authority<sup>3</sup> and unless the Authority is of the opinion that the changed name is undesirable, it must register the notice of the change of name and give the society a certificate of registration<sup>4</sup>. The change of name takes effect on the date on which the certificate of registration is issued or on such later date as may be specified in the certificate<sup>5</sup>. The change of name does not affect the rights and obligations of the society or of any of its members<sup>6</sup> or of any other person concerned<sup>7</sup>.

1 Building Societies Act 1986 s 5(8), Sch 2 para 9(3). As to the meaning of 'special resolution' see PARA 1980.

2 As to the meaning of 'notice' see PARA 1866 note 8.

3 It is an offence if a building society fails to send to the Authority a notice which it is required to send to it under the Building Societies Act 1986 Sch 2 para 9(4), and the society, and any officer who is also guilty of the offence, is liable on summary conviction to a fine not exceeding level 3 on the standard scale: Sch 2 para 10(5) (Sch 2 para 10 substituted by the Building Societies Act 1997 s 36(3); and the Building Societies Act 1986 Sch 2 paras 9(4), (6), 10(5) amended by SI 2001/2617). MUTUAL SOCIETIES/(1) BUILDING SOCIETIES/(i) Constitution of Building Societies/C. NAME AND PRINCIPAL OFFICE/(A) Name of Building Society/1870. Restrictions on business names.

1870. Restrictions on business names.

Where a building society carries on business under a name other than<sup>1</sup>:

255 (1) its registered name<sup>2</sup>;

256 (2) its registered name with the omission of the words 'Building Society'<sup>3</sup>; and 257 (3) its registered name with an addition which merely indicates that the business is carried on in succession to a former building society with which it has merged<sup>4</sup>, the society must not, without the written approval of the Financial Services Authority<sup>5</sup>, carry on business under a name which would be likely to give the impression that the business is connected with Her Majesty's government or with any local authority<sup>6</sup>, or includes any word or expression for the time being specified in regulations made by the Treasury<sup>7</sup>. A society which contravenes this provision is liable on summary conviction to a fine<sup>8</sup>.

Where the society proposes to carry on business under a name which is or includes any such word or expression, and a government department or other body is specified in regulations made by the Treasury<sup>9</sup> in relation to that word or expression, the society must<sup>10</sup>:

258 (a) request, in writing<sup>11</sup>, the relevant body to indicate whether (and if so why) it has any objections to the proposal<sup>12</sup>; and

259 (b) submit to the Authority a statement that such a request has been made and a copy of any response received from the relevant body<sup>13</sup>.

1871. Civil remedies for breach of statutory requirements relating to disclosure.

Any legal proceedings brought by a building society to which the restrictions on business names apply<sup>1</sup> to enforce a right arising out of a contract made in the course of a business in respect of which the society was, at the time the contract was made, in breach of the statutory requirements relating to disclosure of registered name and address for service<sup>2</sup> must be dismissed if the defendant to the proceedings shows<sup>3</sup>:

- 260 (1) that he has a claim against the claimant arising out of that contract which he has been unable to pursue by reason of the claimant's breach of such requirements as to disclosure<sup>4</sup>; or
- 261 (2) that he has suffered some financial loss in connection with the contract by reason of the claimant's breach of such requirements as to disclosure<sup>5</sup>, unless the court<sup>6</sup> before which the proceedings are brought is satisfied that it is just and equitable to permit the proceedings to continue<sup>7</sup>. This is without prejudice to the right of any person to enforce such rights as he may have against another person in any proceedings brought by that person<sup>8</sup>.

5 Building Societies Act 1986 Sch 2 para 10C(3)(b) (as added: see note 3).

6 'Court', in relation to a building society, normally means the court which has jurisdiction under the applicable winding up legislation to wind up the society: Building Societies Act 1986 s 119(1) (definition substituted by the Building Societies Act 1997 Sch 7 para 53(1)(e)). However, the definitions in the Building Societies Act 1986 s 119(1) are expressed to apply except where the context otherwise requires and it is thought that, in the context of Sch 2 para 10C(3), the word 'court' can only be read as meaning the court before which the proceedings are brought.

1872. Requirements for principal office.

The address of a building society's principal office must be specified both in the memorandum<sup>1</sup> and in the rules<sup>2</sup>. A society may change its principal office in such manner as its rules direct, or if there is no such direction in the rules, by an ordinary resolution<sup>3</sup>. No alteration of the memorandum or rules of a society is necessary by reason only that its principal office has changed<sup>4</sup>, but notice<sup>5</sup> of the change and of the date of it must be sent to the Financial Services Authority<sup>6</sup> within seven days after the change, and the Authority must keep the notice in the public file<sup>7</sup> of the society<sup>8</sup>.

It is an offence if a society fails to send to the Authority such a notice, and the society, and any officer<sup>9</sup> who is also guilty of the offence, is liable on summary conviction to a fine<sup>10</sup>.

D. MEMORANDUM AND RULES

(A) MEMORANDUM

1873. Effect of memorandum.

The memorandum of a building society is a matter of agreement between the members of a society and together with the rules forms a contract between the society and its members<sup>1</sup>. The provisions of the memorandum<sup>2</sup>, as read with the provisions of the Building Societies Act 1986 as in force for the time being, are binding upon<sup>3</sup>: (1) each of the members<sup>4</sup> and officers<sup>5</sup> of the society<sup>6</sup>; and (2) all persons claiming on account of a member or under the rules<sup>7</sup>, and all such members, officers and persons so claiming and all persons dealing with the society are taken to have notice of the provisions of the memorandum<sup>8</sup>.

A society must supply, on demand, a printed copy of its memorandum for the time being free of charge to any member of the society to whom a copy has not previously been supplied, and to any other person upon payment of such fee as the society may require, not exceeding the prescribed amount<sup>9</sup>. It is an offence if a society fails to comply with this requirement, and the society, and any officer who is also guilty of the offence, is liable on summary conviction to a fine<sup>10</sup>.

Subject to the provisions of the Building Societies Act 1986, a building society has the powers conferred on it by its memorandum<sup>11</sup>.

1 For authorities relating to a society's rules, which it is thought would apply equally to the memorandum, see PARA 1878 note 1. As to contracts generally see CONTRACT.

2 'Memorandum', in relation to a building society, means the memorandum of the purpose and the extent of the powers of the society including the record of any alteration under the Building Societies Act 1986 s 5(8), Sch 2 para 4 (see PARAS 1876, 1879 et seq): s 119(1), Sch 2 para 1(4) (substituted by the Building Societies Act 1997 Sch 7 para 56(2)).

1876. Registration of alteration of memorandum.

Any building society altering its purpose or powers must send to the Financial Services Authority<sup>1</sup>:

- 264 (1) three copies of a record of the alteration signed by the secretary<sup>2</sup>; and
- 265 (2) a statutory declaration by the secretary that the alteration was effected by a resolution passed as a special resolution<sup>3</sup> and that the record is a true record of the resolution<sup>4</sup>.

It is an offence if a society fails to comply with this requirement, and the society, and any officer<sup>5</sup> who is also guilty of the offence, is liable on summary conviction to a fine<sup>6</sup>.

On altering its purpose or powers the society must determine the date on which it intends the alteration to take effect and the record of the alteration must specify that date (the 'specified date')<sup>7</sup>. If the Authority is satisfied that the alteration is in conformity with the Building Societies Act 1986 and, where applicable, any instruments under it, the Authority must<sup>8</sup>:

- 266 (a) retain and register one of the copies<sup>9</sup>;

- 267 (b) return another to the secretary of the society together with a certificate of registration of the alteration<sup>10</sup>; and
- 268 (c) keep another copy, together with a copy of the certificate of registration of the alteration, in the public file<sup>11</sup> of the society<sup>12</sup>.

An alteration of the purpose or powers takes effect on the specified date or, if registration of the alteration is not effected until a later date, that later date<sup>13</sup>. If a society arranges for the publication in a consolidated form of its memorandum as altered for the time being, it must send a copy to the Authority, and the Authority must keep the copy in the public file of the society but not register the copy<sup>14</sup>.

1877. Effect of registration.

Following the case law relating to rules<sup>1</sup> the certificate of the Financial Services Authority<sup>2</sup> will be conclusive that the necessary preliminary steps have been taken to make the alteration of a memorandum binding on the building society and members<sup>3</sup>, but the fact that an alteration has been registered is not conclusive as to its legality or validity. The Authority's duties when alterations are presented for registration, are merely to consider whether or not the alterations are in conformity with the Building Societies Act 1986 and, where applicable, any instruments under it<sup>4</sup>. If the Authority refuses to register an alteration, the proper remedy is judicial review seeking a mandatory order<sup>5</sup>.

(B) RULES GENERALLY

1878. Effect of rules.

The rules, together with the memorandum, of a building society form the contract between the society and the members<sup>1</sup>. This contract is to be found in the rules for the time being in force, having regard to any alterations duly made<sup>2</sup>. They are binding (except as to any particular rule which is void by statute<sup>3</sup>) upon each of the members and officers of the society and on all persons claiming on account of a member, or under the rules, all of which persons (but no others) are taken to have notice of the rules<sup>4</sup>.

A society must supply, on demand, a printed copy of its rules for the time being, with a copy of the certificate of incorporation<sup>5</sup> annexed to it, free of charge to any member of the society to whom a copy has not previously been supplied, and to any other person upon payment of such fee as the society may require, not exceeding the prescribed amount<sup>6</sup>. It is an offence if a society fails to comply with this requirement, and the society, and any officer who is also guilty of the offence, is liable on summary conviction to a fine<sup>7</sup>.

See also PARA 1873. In the case of a shareholding member (see PARA 1894), the contract contained in the rules is likely to be supplemented by a separate agreement setting out the terms on which the particular shares held by the member have been issued (eg terms specifying the interest which the society will pay on the shares and terms regulating withdrawals by the member). Similarly, in the case of a borrowing member (see PARA 1894), his mortgage constitutes a separate contract between himself and the society. As to the memorandum see PARA 1873 et seq. 3 Under the Building Societies Act 1986 s 110, subject to stated exceptions, a provision exempting directors, officers or auditors from liability for negligence, default, breach of duty or breach of trust is void: see PARAS 1970-1971. For another example of a rule which would be void see PARA 1879. As to the meaning of 'officer' see PARA 1944. As to the office of auditor see PARA 1998 et seq.

4 Building Societies Act 1986 s 5(8), Sch 2 para 3(2). Nothing in Sch 2 para 3 is taken to authorise any provision to be made which is inconsistent with the Building Societies Act 1986 or an instrument made under it by the Treasury or to affect the operation of any provision of the Building Societies Act 1986 making rules void to any specified extent: Sch 2 para 3(3) (amended by SI 2001/2617). ### 1879. Power to change rules.

The rules of a building society can only be altered in the manner authorised by statute<sup>1</sup>, that is by special resolution<sup>2</sup>. Any provision in the rules of a society that the rules may be altered without passing such a resolution is void<sup>3</sup>.

1 Auld v Glasgow Working Men's Building Society (1887) 12 App Cas 197 at 205, HL, per Lord Macnaghten, where it was held that the rights of withdrawing members under the rules could not be altered by an ordinary resolution.

MUTUAL SOCIETIES/(1) BUILDING SOCIETIES/(i) Constitution of Building Societies/D. MEMORANDUM AND RULES/(B) Rules Generally/1880. Extent of power to change rules.

1880. Extent of power to change rules.

Subject to compliance with the Building Societies Act 1986, no limit is placed by the Act upon the power to alter the rules of a building society, and the power is very extensive. Thus alterations may be made whereby the rights of members who have given notice of withdrawal are altered to their detriment<sup>1</sup>, the sums standing to the credit of investing members are diminished<sup>2</sup>, and the sums payable by borrowing members in respect of their mortgages are increased<sup>3</sup>. It is no objection that the alteration affects members who have an existing claim on the society<sup>4</sup>. However, though the limits of the power of altering rules are not defined, the alterations must relate only to the internal rights of the members of the society<sup>5</sup>, and there are certain classes of alterations which are clearly invalid. No alteration of a rule can be valid which is not made in good faith or which purports to affect the rights of outside creditors or to change the nature of the constitution of the society or which is directed against a particular individual<sup>6</sup>. A society which is recognised to be in a state of insolvency cannot make alterations in its rules the effect of which would be to alter the rights of the members in a winding up<sup>7</sup>, although it may make such alterations as will facilitate the realisation of assets and the discharge of obligations<sup>8</sup>.

The alteration must be such as can reasonably be considered to have been within the contemplation of the members of the society when the contract of membership was made<sup>9</sup>. An alteration in the purposes of the society or of the amount of the share subscription which a member is liable to take up will not be binding on a member who has not assented to this<sup>10</sup>.

1 Davies v Second Chatham Permanent Benefit Building Society (1889) 61 LT 680, DC; Pepe v City and Suburban Permanent Building Society [1893] 2 Ch 311. It seems that this would not apply to a person who had already ceased to be a member on giving notice of withdrawal under the rules: see Christie v Northern Counties Permanent Benefit Building Society (1889) 43 ChD 62 at 68 per North J. As to membership see PARA 1888 et seq.

2 Strohmenger v Finsbury Permanent Investment Building Society [1897] 2 Ch 469, CA. Such a result cannot be effected by an ordinary resolution: Auld v Glasgow Working Men's Building Society (1887) 12 App Cas 197 at 201, HL, per Lord Halsbury LC.

3 Wilson v Miles Platting Building Society (1887) 22 QBD 381n, CA; Rosenberg v Northumberland Building Society (1889) 22 QBD 373, CA; Bradbury v Wild [1893] 1 Ch 377. In these cases the securities were framed so as to secure the payment of sums payable under the rules for the time being of the society. If a mortgagor has made a special contract with the society, such contract cannot be altered by an alteration of rules: Re Norwich and Norfolk Provident Permanent Benefit Building Society, Smith's Case (1875) 1 ChD 481; Wilson v Miles Platting Building Society above. 10 Hole v Garnsey [1930] AC 472 at 495-496, HL, per Lord Atkin, and at 500 per Lord Tomlin. In this case it was held (distinguishing Biddulph and District Agricultural Society v Agricultural Wholesale Society [1927] AC 76, HL) that an alteration in the rules of an industrial and provident society whereby members of the society were required to subscribe for additional shares was not binding on members who had neither voted for the alteration nor otherwise assented to it. Constitution of Building Societies/D. MEMORANDUM AND RULES/(B) Rules Generally/1881.
Registration of alteration of rules.

1881. Registration of alteration of rules.

Any building society altering its rules must send to the Financial Services Authority<sup>1</sup>:

- 269 (1) three copies of a record of the alteration signed by the secretary<sup>2</sup>; and
- 270 (2) a statutory declaration by the secretary that the alteration was effected by a resolution passed as a special resolution<sup>3</sup> and that the record is a true record of the resolution<sup>4</sup>.

It is an offence if a society fails to comply with this requirement, and the society, and any officer<sup>5</sup> who is also guilty of the offence, is liable on summary conviction to a fine<sup>6</sup>.

On altering its rules the society must determine the date on which it intends the alteration to take effect and the record of the alteration must specify that date (the 'specified date')<sup>7</sup>. If the Authority is satisfied that the alteration is in conformity with the Building Societies Act 1986 and, where applicable, any instruments under it, the Authority must<sup>8</sup>:

- 271 (a) retain and register one of the copies<sup>9</sup>;
- 272 (b) return another to the secretary of the society together with a certificate of registration of the alteration<sup>10</sup>; and
- 273 (c) keep another copy, together with a copy of the certificate of registration of the alteration, in the public file<sup>11</sup> of the society<sup>12</sup>.

An alteration of the rules takes effect on the specified date or, if registration of the alteration is not effected until a later date, that later date<sup>13</sup>. If a society arranges for the publication in a consolidated form of its rules as altered for the time being, it must send a copy to the Authority, and the Authority must keep the copy in the public file of the society but not register the copy<sup>14</sup>.

1882. Effect of registration.

The certificate of the Financial Services Authority<sup>1</sup> is conclusive that the necessary preliminary steps have been taken to make an alteration to the rules of a building society binding on the society and members<sup>2</sup>, but the fact that a rule has been registered is not conclusive as to its legality or validity<sup>3</sup>. The Authority's duties, when rules are presented for registration, are merely to consider whether or not the alterations are in conformity with the Building Societies Act 1986 and, where applicable, any instruments under it<sup>4</sup>. If the Authority refuses to register a rule or alteration, the proper remedy is judicial review seeking a mandatory order<sup>5</sup>.

1 The certificate was formerly issued by the central office of the registry of friendly societies. The functions of the central office in this instance have been transferred to the Financial Services Authority: see the Building Societies Act 1986 s 5(8), Sch 2 para 4(4); the Financial Services and Markets Act 2000 s 335(2)(a), (4); the Financial Services and Markets Act 2000 (Mutual Societies) Order 2001, SI 2001/2617, art 13(1), Sch 3 paras 131, 200(a); and PARA 1881. ## (C) CONTENT OF RULES

1883. Required content of rules.

The rules of a building society must provide for a number of matters set out in the Building Societies Act 1986<sup>1</sup>. The rules must cover:

- 274 (1) the name of the society and the address of its principal office<sup>2</sup>;
- 275 (2) the manner in which the funds of the society are to be raised<sup>3</sup>;
- 276 (3) the manner in which the terms are to be determined on which shares are to be issued and the manner in which shareholders are to be informed of changes in the terms on which their shares are held<sup>4</sup>;
- 277 (4) whether any preferential or deferred shares are to be issued and, if so, within what limits<sup>5</sup>;
- 278 (5) the manner in which loans are to be made and repaid, and the conditions on which a borrower may redeem the amount due from him before the end of the period for which the loan was made<sup>6</sup>;
- 279 (6) the manner in which losses are to be ascertained and provided for<sup>7</sup>;
- 280 (7) the manner in which membership is to cease<sup>8</sup>;
- 281 (8) the manner of remunerating the auditors<sup>9</sup>;
- 282 (9) as respects directors:

21

- 1. (a) the manner of electing them and whether they may be co-opted<sup>10</sup>;
- 2. (b) any conditions which must be satisfied with respect to the holding of shares in the society if a person is to become, or is to remain, a director<sup>11</sup>;
- 3. (c) the manner of remunerating and, where it is not to be fixed by resolution at the annual general meeting, the maximum amount of the remuneration to be paid to, directors<sup>12</sup>; and
- 4. (d) the circumstances in which pensions may be awarded to persons by virtue of their office as director and the method of determining the terms of such pensions<sup>13</sup>;

22

- 283 (10) the powers and duties of the board of directors<sup>14</sup>;
- 284 (11) the custody of the mortgage deeds and other securities belonging to the society<sup>15</sup>;
- 285 (12) the form, custody and use of the society's common seal<sup>16</sup>;
- 286 (13) the calling and holding of meetings and, in particular:

23

- 5. (a) the right of members to requisition meetings<sup>17</sup>;
- 6. (b) the right of members to move resolutions at meetings<sup>18</sup>;
- 7. (c) the manner in which notice of any resolutions to be moved at meetings is to be given to members<sup>19</sup>;
- 8. (d) the procedure to be observed at meetings<sup>20</sup>;
- 9. (e) the form of notice for the convening of a meeting and the manner of its service<sup>21</sup>;
- 10. (f) the voting rights of members, the right to demand a poll and the manner in which a poll is to be taken<sup>22</sup>;

24

- 287 (14) the entitlement of members to participate in the distribution of any surplus assets after payments to creditors, on the winding up, or dissolution by consent, of the society<sup>23</sup>.

Nothing in the rules of a society prevents the service of a notice or other document by the society by sending it electronically to an electronic address<sup>24</sup> notified for the purpose in accordance with express provision made by the Building Societies Act 1986, or by its publication on a website in accordance with any such provision<sup>25</sup>.

The rules of a building society must provide that no person will be a member of the society unless he is a shareholding member<sup>26</sup> or a borrowing member<sup>27</sup> or both<sup>28</sup>. The rules may exclude minors from admission as members<sup>29</sup>.

The rules may provide for certain disputes to be referred to arbitration<sup>30</sup>.

Provided that the rules of a building society do not conflict with the general law or the express provisions of the Building Societies Act 1986 and do not make the society a thing different from a building society<sup>1</sup>, such as a bank<sup>2</sup>, a society may make such rules as it pleases<sup>3</sup>.

E. SERVICE, RECORDS AND EVIDENCE

1885. Service of notices, directions and documents.

Any notice<sup>1</sup>, directions or other document required or authorised by or under the Building Societies Act 1986, or by the rules of a building society, to be served on any person other than the Financial Services Authority<sup>2</sup> may (subject, in the case of notices or other documents to be given or sent to members of a society<sup>3</sup>, to any provision of its rules)<sup>4</sup> be served on that person by<sup>5</sup>: (1) delivering it to him<sup>6</sup>; (2) leaving it at his proper address<sup>7</sup>; or (3) sending it by post to him at that address<sup>8</sup>. Any such document may: (a) in the case of a society, be served on its secretary<sup>9</sup>; (b) in the case of a body corporate, other than a society, be served on the secretary or clerk of that body<sup>10</sup>; (c) in the case of a partnership, be served on any partner<sup>11</sup>; and (d) in the case of an unincorporated association other than a partnership, be served on any member of its governing body<sup>12</sup>.

In a wide range of documents relating to the society, the society must state an address in the United Kingdom at which service of any document relating in any way to the business will be effective<sup>13</sup>.

1886. Records.

Unless there is anything to the contrary in the Building Societies Act 1986, or any regulations under it, any record kept by a building society may be kept in any manner<sup>1</sup>. However, where records are not kept by making entries in a bound book, but by some other means, adequate precautions must be taken for guarding against falsification and facilitating its discovery<sup>2</sup>. It is an offence if default is made in complying with these provisions, and the society, and any officer<sup>3</sup> who is also guilty of the offence, is liable on summary conviction to a fine<sup>4</sup>, and, in the case of a continuing offence, to an additional fine<sup>5</sup> for every day during which the offence continues<sup>6</sup>.

1 Building Societies Act 1986 s 114(1). The power extends to recording matters otherwise than in legible form so long as the recording is capable of being reproduced in a legible form: s 114(3). In such cases, any duty imposed by or under the Building Societies Act 1986 to allow inspection of, or to furnish a copy of, the record or any part of it, is to be treated as a duty to allow inspection of, or to furnish, a reproduction of the recording or of the relevant part of it, in a legible form: s 114(3). The Treasury may by regulations make such provision in addition to s 114(3) as it considers appropriate in connection with such records as are kept otherwise than in legible form; and the regulations may make modifications of the Building Societies Act 1986 so far as it relates to the records of societies: s 114(4) (amended by SI 2001/2617). At the date at which this volume states the law no such regulations had been made. As to the Treasury see PARA 3; and CONSTITUTIONAL LAW AND HUMAN RIGHTS vol 8(2) (Reissue) PARA 512 et seq. Any document<sup>1</sup> bearing the seal or stamp of the Financial Services Authority is to be received in evidence without further proof<sup>2</sup>. Any document purporting to have been signed by a person authorised to do so on behalf of the Authority, in the absence of any evidence to the contrary, is to be received in evidence without proof of the signature<sup>3</sup>.

Any printed document purporting to be a copy of the rules or memorandum<sup>4</sup> of a building society, and certified by the secretary<sup>5</sup> or other officer<sup>6</sup> of the society to be a true copy of its rules or memorandum as registered, will be received in evidence and is, in the absence of any evidence to the contrary, deemed to be a true copy of its rules or memorandum<sup>7</sup>.

1 For the purposes of the Building Societies Act 1986 s 113(1) and s 113(1A), 'document' means any document issued, received or created by the Financial Services Authority for the purposes of or in connection with the Building Societies Act 1986: s 113(1B) (s 113(1) substituted, and s 113(1A), (1B) added, by SI 2001/2617). ## F. MEMBERS AND DEPOSITORS

(A) MEMBERSHIP

1888. Test of membership.

The rules of a building society must provide that no person will be a member of the society unless he is a shareholding member<sup>1</sup> or a borrowing member<sup>2</sup> or both<sup>3</sup>.

It would seem that, in the case of unincorporated societies, it was competent for each society to prescribe by its rules what should be considered primary, if not conclusive, evidence of membership, and that such rules would be enforced by the court<sup>4</sup>. It is probable that a similar view would be taken by the court in the case of incorporated societies<sup>5</sup>.

For the purpose of liquidation, the question whether a person is or is not a member must be fixed as at the date of the liquidation and as if the society were a going concern; and when it has once been established that a person has been a member of the society in liquidation, it lies with him to show that he has ceased to be a member<sup>6</sup>.

1 As to the meaning of 'shareholding member' see PARA 1894.

2 As to the meaning of 'borrowing member' see PARA 1894.

3 Building Societies Act 1986 s 5(8), s 119(1), Sch 2 para 5(1) (substituted by the Building Societies Act 1997 s 2(1)). By the Building Societies Act 1986 s 119(1), the term 'member' is to be construed in accordance with Sch 2 para 5 (definition substituted by the Building Societies Act 1997 Sch 7 para 53(1)(j)). The effect is that the members of a building society are its shareholding and borrowing members (and no one else).

MUTUAL SOCIETIES/(1) BUILDING SOCIETIES/(i) Constitution of Building Societies/F. MEMBERS AND DEPOSITORS/(A) Membership/1889. Joint shareholders and borrowers.

1889. Joint shareholders and borrowers.

Two or more persons may jointly hold shares in a building society<sup>1</sup>, and where they do so the joint holder who is first named in the records of the society is called the representative joint holder<sup>2</sup>. Where a loan secured on land<sup>3</sup> is made by a society to two or more persons jointly<sup>4</sup> the joint borrower who is named first in the record of the society is called the representative joint borrower<sup>5</sup>. Joint holders and borrowers are entitled to choose the order in which they are named in the records of the society<sup>6</sup>. The entry relating to a member in the register of members<sup>7</sup> must, if he is a representative joint holder or borrower, indicate that fact<sup>8</sup>. Unless the rules provide to the contrary, any notice<sup>9</sup> or other document may be given or sent by the society to the joint holders or borrowers by giving or sending it to the representative joint holder or borrower<sup>10</sup>.

For the purposes of determining (1) who is entitled to vote in an election of directors of the society<sup>11</sup>; (2) who is qualified to vote on a resolution of the society<sup>12</sup>; and (3) where it is relevant<sup>13</sup>, the number of votes a person may then give<sup>14</sup>, the representative joint holder or borrower is to be treated as the sole holder of the shares or rights<sup>15</sup>, and a person who is a member of the society by reason only of being a joint holder or borrower, and who is not the representative joint holder or borrower, is not therefore entitled to vote in any such election or qualified to vote on any such resolution<sup>16</sup>.

For the purposes of the provisions relating to dissolution of a society by consent<sup>17</sup>, mergers<sup>18</sup> and the transfer of a society's business to a commercial company<sup>19</sup>, the shares or rights<sup>20</sup> are to be treated as held by the representative joint holder or borrower alone, and a person who is a member of the society by reason only of being a joint holder or borrower, and who is not the representative joint holder or borrower, is not therefore regarded as a member for the purposes of those provisions<sup>21</sup>. The representative joint holder or borrower, but none of the other joint holders or borrowers, has the right to join in making an application for the Financial Services Authority<sup>22</sup> to appoint inspectors or to call a special meeting of a society<sup>23</sup> and any reference to the total membership of a society must be construed accordingly<sup>24</sup>.

No restriction is imposed by the Building Societies Act 1986 as to the number of members which a building society may have, except that at its incorporation<sup>1</sup> a society is required to have not fewer than ten members<sup>2</sup>.

1 As to the incorporation of building societies see PARAS 1865-1866.

A person under the age of 18<sup>1</sup> may be admitted as a member of a building society if the rules of the society do not prohibit such admission<sup>2</sup>, and it seems that there is no necessity of obtaining any consent. He can give all necessary receipts<sup>3</sup>, but during minority cannot propose a resolution, vote or hold any office in the society<sup>4</sup> and cannot join in requisitioning a special meeting, or nominate, or join in nominating a person for election as a director of the society<sup>5</sup>. Any receipt or acknowledgement given to a society by a person who is a minor in respect of the payment to him of any sum due in respect of a deposit made by him with the society, is not invalid on the ground that he is under 18 years of age<sup>6</sup>.

(B) RIGHTS AND LIABILITIES OF MEMBERS AND DEPOSITORS

1894. Classes of members.

The rules of a building society must provide that no person may be a member of the society unless he is a shareholding member or a borrowing member or both<sup>1</sup>. A 'shareholding member' is a person who holds a share in the society<sup>2</sup>. A 'borrowing member' is<sup>3</sup> an individual who is indebted to the society<sup>4</sup>: (1) in respect of a loan which is fully secured on land<sup>5</sup>; or (2) if the rules of the society so provide, in respect of a loan which is (within the meaning of the rules) substantially secured on land<sup>6</sup>.

If the rules of a society so provide, an individual ceases to be a borrowing member at any time if at that time the society<sup>7</sup>: (a) takes possession of, or exercises its power of sale in relation to, the whole or any part of the land on which the loan is secured<sup>8</sup>; or (b) obtains an order for foreclosure absolute<sup>9</sup>. Unless the rules of a society so provide, an individual is not a borrowing member at any time if at that time the loan is owed to the society in equity rather than at law<sup>10</sup>.

A borrowing member gives a mortgage to secure a loan made by the society<sup>11</sup>. In respect of such mortgage the member may sue and be sued as borrower. A borrowing member may or may not (according to the rules of the particular society) be entitled to share in the profits. While it was formerly the case that, if the rules so provided, a borrowing member might be made liable for losses<sup>12</sup>, the liability of such a member is now limited by statute to the amount payable under the mortgage or other security by which his indebtedness to the society in respect of the loan is secured<sup>13</sup>.

A shareholding member is one who, in consideration of paying his subscriptions (and all other money due under the rules) at specified times until the total value of his shares has been paid, or who holds paid-up shares for which he has paid in full in one sum<sup>14</sup>, has a claim on the assets of the society for the amount of his shares, subject to any losses<sup>15</sup> incurred by the society<sup>16</sup>.

Funds raised from an individual must be by the issue of shares, and funds raised from a body corporate, or from a bare trustee for a body corporate or for persons who include a body corporate, cannot be issued with shares, other than deferred shares: see s 8(1); and PARA 1917. 15 The liability of a shareholding member at any time is statutorily limited to the amount which, at that time, as actually been paid, or is in arrear, on his shares in the society: see Building Societies Act 1986, Sch 2 para 6(1) and PARA 1898. A shareholding member may be entitled to a share in the profits of the society if so provided in the society's rules or in the terms on which his shares are issued.

16 A person may, of course, have received a loan from a society and at the same time hold investment shares in the society, thus being both a borrowing and a shareholding member.

1895. Status of members.

Members of a building society are members of a corporation<sup>1</sup>, and creditors must therefore look to the society, and not to the individual members<sup>2</sup>. However, societies are not limited liability companies, still less ordinary partnerships, but are societies of a special kind formed and regulated by statute for special purposes, and the relation of their members to non-members is controlled by statute<sup>3</sup>.

A building society must send a copy of its summary financial statement<sup>1</sup> and, where appropriate, of the auditors' report<sup>2</sup>, not later than 21 days before the annual general meeting<sup>3</sup> at which the accounts and reports are to be considered, to every member who is entitled to receive notice<sup>4</sup> of the meeting, and two copies of the documents to the Financial Services Authority<sup>5</sup>. It is an offence if a society fails to comply with this requirement, and the society, and any officer<sup>6</sup> who is also guilty of the offence, is liable on summary conviction to a fine<sup>7</sup>, and, in the case of a continuing offence, to an additional fine<sup>8</sup> for every day during which the offence continues<sup>9</sup>.

A copy of the summary financial statement and, where appropriate, of the auditors' report must be given or sent by the society free of charge at any time before the publication of the next summary financial statement to<sup>10</sup>: (1) any individual who for the first time subscribes for shares in the society<sup>11</sup>, on his first subscribing for the shares<sup>12</sup>; and (2) any member of the society who was not sent a copy<sup>13</sup>, within seven days of his making a demand for a copy<sup>14</sup>. Creditors can only enforce payment against the building society, and the liability of members to contribute to the funds of the society is, in the case of a shareholding member<sup>1</sup>, limited to the amount which, at that time, has been actually paid, or is in arrear, on his shares<sup>2</sup> in the society<sup>3</sup>. The liability in the case of a borrowing member<sup>4</sup> is limited to the amount which, at that time, is payable under the mortgage<sup>5</sup> or other security by which his indebtedness to the society in respect of the loan is secured<sup>6</sup>.

On the winding up or dissolution by consent<sup>7</sup> of a society, a borrowing member is not liable to pay any amount other than one which, at that time, is payable under the mortgage or other security by which his indebtedness to the society in respect of the loan is secured<sup>8</sup>.

The issue of advanced shares to borrowing members has passed into disuse, there being no need to issue such shares to borrowing members to make them members of the society or to enable them to exercise the statutory rights of borrowing members. It is thought that any advanced shares which still remain in issue would not constitute 'shares' within the meaning of the Building Societies Act 1986, since they would not have been issued for the purpose of raising funds: see PARA 1905.

1899. Rights and liabilities between themselves.

The rights and liabilities of members of a building society between themselves are regulated by the rules, which (together with the memorandum) constitute a contract between the members<sup>1</sup>.

Unless the rules otherwise provide, the rights and liabilities of the members between themselves are not varied by reason of the winding up of the society<sup>2</sup>; nor can members escape from the incidents of membership even when the incidents are such as were not anticipated at the time they joined<sup>3</sup>. In cases for which the rules do not expressly provide (where, that is, the contract is not explicit) the rules are to be applied as nearly as possible<sup>4</sup>.

1900. Members or depositors dying.

Where a member of, or a depositor<sup>1</sup> with, a building society dies, testate or intestate, domiciled in any part of the United Kingdom<sup>2</sup>, leaving a sum of money in the funds of the society not exceeding £5,000<sup>3</sup>, the society, on receiving satisfactory evidence of the death<sup>4</sup> and a statutory declaration by a claimant to the money that the member or depositor has died and that the claimant is the person entitled to receive the sum either beneficially under the will or under the law of intestacy<sup>5</sup>, may pay the amount due to the claimant, without probate of the will or the grant of letters of administration or confirmation<sup>6</sup>. Payment so made is valid and effectual with respect to any demand against the funds of the society from any other person claiming to be entitled to it, but without prejudice to that other person's pursuing his remedy for the amount against the person who received it<sup>7</sup>.

3 Building Societies Act 1986 s 32, Sch 7 para 1(1). The Treasury may from time to time by order direct that Sch 2 para 1 has effect as if for the reference in Sch 7 para 1(1) to £5,000 there were substituted a reference to such higher amount as may be specified in the order: Sch 7 para 1(4). Such an order applies in relation to deaths occurring after the expiration of a period of one month beginning with the date on which the order comes into force: Sch 7 para 1(5). The power to make such an order is exercisable by statutory instrument but no such order may be made unless a draft of it has been laid before and approved by a resolution of each House of Parliament: Sch 7 para 1(6). At the date at which this volume states the law no such order had been made. As to the Treasury see PARA 3; and CONSTITUTIONAL LAW AND HUMAN RIGHTS vol 8(2) (Reissue) PARA 512 et seq.

(C) FINES AND FORFEITURES

1901. Power to impose fines and forfeitures.

The right to impose fines or forfeitures, if referred to in the rules of a building society, will form part of the contract between members<sup>1</sup>. The Building Societies Act 1986, unlike earlier legislation, does not require societies to state in their rules what fines and forfeitures are to be imposed on members<sup>2</sup>. Rules as to fines cannot be arbitrarily dispensed with<sup>3</sup>.

The liability to be fined is in some cases, as, for instance, in that of executors or administrators of deceased members, a test of membership<sup>4</sup>.

1 See PARA 1878. As to contracts generally see CONTRACT.

2 It is not one of the express matters to be covered by the rules: see the Building Societies Act 1986 s 5(8), Sch 2 para 3; and PARA 1883.

MUTUAL SOCIETIES/(1) BUILDING SOCIETIES/(i) Constitution of Building Societies/F. MEMBERS AND DEPOSITORS/(C) Fines and Forfeitures/1902. Nature and enforcement of fines.

1902. Nature and enforcement of fines.

Fines are not penalties<sup>1</sup>, nor are they interest by way of a penalty<sup>2</sup>. It is, however, likely that fines are not enforceable unless they are reasonable<sup>3</sup>. No interest is chargeable on fines unless the rules of a building society otherwise provide<sup>4</sup>, but fines secured by covenant in a mortgage form part of the principal in foreclosure, and are payable with interest<sup>5</sup>. Fines for non-payment of fines may be recovered, if the rules so provide<sup>6</sup>. If the rules as to fines are not duly enforced, they cannot, as in liquidation proceedings, be revived against those members who have been allowed to escape their effect<sup>7</sup>.

The fact that fines are not entered up against a member by the proper official does not absolve the member from liability<sup>8</sup>.

2 Parker v Butcher (1867) LR 3 Eq 762. As to relief against penalties and forfeitures see EQUITY vol 16(2) (Reissue) PARA 801 et seq.

3 The Building Societies Act 1986 makes no provision as to fines. In the case of unincorporated societies the Building Societies Act 1836 s 1 (repealed) conferred power to impose 'reasonable' fines. Unreasonable fines, such as those which were cumulative in arithmetical progression, could not be enforced, but if possible the rules would be construed so as to make the fines reasonable and, if reasonable, they would be enforced: Re Tierney's Estate (1874) IR 9 Eq 1; Lovejoy v Mulkern (1877) 46 LJCh 630, CA; Re Middlesbrough Building Society (1884) 54 LJCh 592. As to what fines are reasonable see Parker v Butcher (1867) LR 3 Eq 762; Pilkington v Baker [1877] WN 210. It is thought that, nowadays, a term in the rules which conferred a right on the society to impose fines on members would, unless qualified so as to ensure that any fine was proportionate to the loss suffered by the society by reason of the member's default, be vulnerable to challenge as an unfair term within the meaning of the Unfair Terms in Consumer Contracts Regulations 1999, SI 1999/2083: see CONTRACT vol 9(1) (Reissue) PARA 790 et seq.

1903. Effect of forfeiture.

Forfeiture usually takes place on non-payment for a definite period of subscriptions and fines or on small or dormant investment accounts, when the sums already paid by the defaulting member become forfeited to the building society<sup>1</sup>. Rules as to forfeiture of shares will be enforced by the court, if reasonable<sup>2</sup>. Whether the forfeiture takes effect, not ipso facto on default, but at the option of the directors, depends on the construction of the rules<sup>3</sup>. But although the forfeiture is binding so far as the shares are concerned, the shareholder is not therefore absolved from all liability to the society. He may, for instance, still be liable to be placed on the list of contributories in a winding up<sup>4</sup>.

(D) CESSATION OF MEMBERSHIP

1904. Cessation of membership.

The rules of a building society must state the manner in which membership is to cease<sup>1</sup>. Generally, membership comes to an end when, in the case of a shareholding member, he has withdrawn the whole amount standing to his credit in respect of his shares<sup>2</sup> or when, in the case of a borrowing member, all sums due from him in respect of the loan secured by the mortgage have been repaid<sup>3</sup>. Membership may also cease upon the dissolution of the society<sup>4</sup>, upon the discharge of all liabilities in the winding up of a society<sup>5</sup>, upon forfeiture<sup>6</sup>, or upon death<sup>7</sup>.

Although power to expel members is not expressly given in the Building Societies Act 1986, such a power can, it is conceived, be exercised if the rules of the society so provide.

G. SHARES

(A) SHARES AND SUBSCRIPTIONS

1905. Nature and restriction of shares.

Subject to certain exceptions, a building society must not<sup>1</sup>:

- 288 (1) accept a deposit<sup>2</sup> from an individual<sup>3</sup>;
- 289 (2) raise funds<sup>4</sup> from an individual otherwise than by the issue of shares<sup>5</sup>; and
- 290 (3) raise funds from a body corporate<sup>6</sup>, or from a bare trustee for a body corporate or for persons who include a body corporate, otherwise than by the issue of deferred shares<sup>7</sup>.

The rules of a society must state<sup>8</sup>: (a) the manner in which the funds of the society are to be raised<sup>9</sup>; (b) the manner in which the terms are to be determined on which shares are to be issued and the manner in which shareholders are to be informed of changes in the terms on which their shares are held<sup>10</sup>; and (c) whether any preferential or deferred shares are to be issued and, if so, within what limits<sup>11</sup>.

Shares in societies differ in essence from shares in limited liability companies in that the latter constitute definite portions of the capital of the company, and are strictly limited in number, whereas the former represent no proportionate quota of the capital of the society, and are unlimited in number. There may be as many shares in a building society as people like to apply for<sup>12</sup>.

The statutory funding limit must be complied with<sup>13</sup>.

MUTUAL SOCIETIES/(1) BUILDING SOCIETIES/(i) Constitution of Building Societies/G. SHARES/(A) Shares and Subscriptions/1906. Classes of shares.

1906. Classes of shares.

The rules of a building society must state: (1) the manner in which the terms are to be determined on which shares are to be issued<sup>1</sup>; and (2) whether preferential or deferred shares<sup>2</sup> are to be issued and, if so, within what limits<sup>3</sup>.

Commonly societies issue paid-up shares and subscription shares and, where permitted by the rules, preferential and deferred shares. The terms on which preferential shares are issued may differ widely from society to society, so it is not possible to identify particular features which must in all cases be possessed by a preferential share. It may, however, be said that, to qualify as preferential, a share must be issued as a preferential share under rules which provide for the issue of such shares. Moreover, where the rules specify the respects in which a preferential share is to be accorded preference, a share will only qualify as preferential if it carries the preferential rights for which the rules provide<sup>4</sup>. In practice, a preferential share would typically be issued on terms that it carries a guaranteed rate of interest; that, in the event of a deficiency in a winding up, it will be repaid in priority to ordinary investment shares; and that the holders of preferential shares will be liable for the society's losses only after the funds belonging to deferred and ordinary shareholders have been exhausted<sup>5</sup>. The right of preferential payment of capital sometimes depends on notice of withdrawal having been given<sup>6</sup>.

Deferred shares are shares of a class defined by order of the Treasury<sup>7</sup> in a statutory instrument subject to annulment in pursuance of a resolution of either House of Parliament<sup>8</sup>.

8 Building Societies Act 1986 s 119(1) (definition amended by SI 2001/2617). As to the order made under the Building Societies Act 1986 s 119(1) see the Building Societies (Deferred Shares) Order 1991, SI 1991/701 (amended by SI 2001/3649). Shares which are issued by a society upon terms which have the effect of the 'key term' set out in the Building Societies (Deferred Shares) Order 1991, SI 1991/701, Schedule and in respect of which the conditions set out in heads (1)-(3) below are satisfied, are shares of a class defined as deferred shares for the purposes of the Building Societies Act 1986 s 119: Building Societies (Deferred Shares) Order 1991, SI 1991/701, art 3(1). The conditions mentioned in art 3(1) are that:

- 1 (1) the document containing the issue terms, or where the issue terms are contained in a series of documents, one of those documents, being in either case a document which is furnished to every applicant for the shares (the 'issue document'), and every document evidencing title to the shares (the 'title document'), contains a prominent statement to the effect that the shares are deferred shares for the purposes of the Building Societies Act 1986 s 119 (Building Societies (Deferred Shares) Order 1991, SI 1991/701, art 3(2)(a) (art 3(2) substituted by SI 2001/3649));
- 2 (2) where the issue document was issued before 1 December 2001 or where the title document evidences title obtained before that date, that document contains a prominent statement to the effect that the shares are not protected investments for the purposes of payments out of the Building Societies Investor Protection Fund (Building Societies (Deferred Shares) Order 1991, SI 1991/701, art 3(2)(b) (as so substituted)); and
- 3 (3) where the issue document was issued on or after 1 December 2001 or where the title document evidences title obtained on or after that date, that document contains a prominent statement stating whether or not the shares are an investment in respect of which a claim may be entertained by the Financial Services Compensation Scheme (art 3(2)(c) (as so substituted)).

The 'key term' is a term which has effect so as to prohibit the repayment of any principal to the shareholders in respect of the shares except (a) on the winding up or dissolution of the society in circumstances where all sums due from the society to creditors claiming in the winding up or dissolution are paid in full; or (b) with the granting of relevant consent by the Financial Services Authority: art 3(1), Schedule (amended by SI 2001/3649). As to the functions of the Financial Services Authority in relation to building societies see PARA 1863. As to the Authority generally see PARAS 4, 6 et seq. The term 'creditors', in relation to a society extends to members holding shares in the society, other than deferred shares, as regards the principal of those shares and all interest due thereon in accordance with their terms: Building Societies (Deferred Shares) Order 1991, SI 1991/701, art 2. 'Relevant consent' means consent applied for by the society otherwise than in consequence of a provision among the issue terms requiring the society so to apply or granting the society any benefit for so applying or imposing a sanction against failure so to apply: art 2. 'Issue terms' in relation to an issue of deferred shares means the provisions of a document which sets out, or of a connected series of documents which set out, the rights and obligations of the society and shareholders in respect of those shares: art 2. 'Society' in relation to deferred shares means a society which proposes to issue or, as the case may be, has issued, such shares: art 2.

Any shares issued by a society prior to 1 June 1991 (ie the date on which the Building Societies (Deferred Shares) Order 1991, SI 1991/701, came into force) and in respect of which the terms are in compliance with art 3 continue to be shares of a class defined as deferred shares for the purpose of the Building Societies Act 1986 s 119: Building Societies (Deferred Shares) Order 1991, SI 1991/701, art 4. The most common form of deferred shares are permanent interest-bearing shares (PIBs). The requirements for deferred shares to qualify as a permanent interest bearing shares (a question which is primarily relevant in determining whether the shares can be counted as part of the issuing society's Tier 1 capital) are now to be found in the Financial Services Authority Handbook of Rules and Guidance. As to the Handbook generally see PARA 22.

Registration in the books of a building society constitutes prima facie legal title to shares. MUTUAL SOCIETIES/(1) BUILDING SOCIETIES/(i) Constitution of Building Societies/G. SHARES/(A) Shares and Subscriptions/1908. Rights of members to transfer shares.

1908. Rights of members to transfer shares.

Shares in building societies are subject to transfer<sup>1</sup>. The motive of the transfer cannot be inquired into<sup>2</sup>. Where rules regulating the method of transfer exist they must be strictly complied with<sup>3</sup>.

Building societies come within the Forged Transfers Acts<sup>4</sup>, which empower the societies to provide for the payment of compensation for losses arising from transfers of shares or securities in pursuance of forged transfers or forged powers of attorney<sup>5</sup>.

If the holder of shares in a society sells and transfers them after an order has been made for the compulsory winding up of the society, the transferee is not entitled to be registered as owner without the sanction of the court<sup>6</sup>.

Shares in societies may be bequeathed, as such, to a charity<sup>7</sup>. They may pass on a residuary bequest of 'money', in view of the wide modern interpretation of that expression<sup>8</sup>, if as a matter of construction of the will this is the expressed intention of the testator<sup>9</sup>, and they may be the subject of a donatio mortis causa, if the instrument handed over is the essential evidence of title, possession or production of which entitled the possessor to the property purported to be given<sup>10</sup>. It has been held that a minor could not transfer shares in a building society<sup>11</sup>.

1 See Allan v Urquhart (1887) 25 SLR 47, shares being a class of property of which the right to transfer is a necessary incident. Transfers of society shares are exempt from stamp duty: see the Building Societies Act 1986 s 109(1)(b); and PARA 1857.

(B) WITHDRAWAL OF SHARES

1909. Right of withdrawal.

The rules of a building society must state the manner in which membership is to cease<sup>1</sup>. Under earlier legislation the rules were required to state the terms on which shares might be withdrawn<sup>2</sup> and it was thought that the right of withdrawal was an essential part of a member's contract. Societies may now, however, issue deferred shares on terms which exclude the right to withdraw<sup>3</sup>. The rights of withdrawal depend on the rules of the society<sup>4</sup> and the terms on which the particular shares are issued.

Notice of withdrawal can be required to be given, the period varying according to the rules. An informal notice will be sufficient if accepted by the society, although a special form is provided by the rules<sup>5</sup>. Notice is waived if the member subsequently accepts a loan from the society on the footing of his continuing to be a member, even if the loan is ultra vires<sup>6</sup>.

2 See the Building Societies Act 1962 s 4(1)(c) (repealed), which made it obligatory for all societies under that Act to state in their rules the terms on which subscription shares could be withdrawn.

1910. Liability of withdrawing member.

A withdrawing member is not liable to make any further contribution after the date of his notice either while the building society continues or in a winding up<sup>1</sup>. However, if before the notice expires the stoppage of the business of the society is recognised as inevitable, or the society is wound up, the notice has no effect, and gives no priority for payment over members who have given no notice<sup>2</sup>.

MUTUAL SOCIETIES/(1) BUILDING SOCIETIES/(i) Constitution of Building Societies/G. SHARES/(B) Withdrawal of Shares/1911. Position of matured member.

1911. Position of matured member.

For certain purposes matured members<sup>1</sup> of a building society are still members. Thus they are subject to rules compelling disputes between members to be referred to arbitration<sup>2</sup>, and they must be counted among the number of members when calculating the majority necessary to constitute a valid instrument of dissolution<sup>3</sup>, and further they are liable to have the rules altered to their prejudice<sup>4</sup>, and to have their notices postponed by rules made after the notices were given<sup>5</sup>, but not so as to render the notices of no effect<sup>6</sup>. Matured members, relative to continuing members, are creditors of the society, and have priority in a winding up<sup>7</sup>.

If the rules provide that members may withdraw 'provided the funds permit', and there are no funds when a notice of withdrawal matures, the member giving the notice acquires a right to receive payment when funds permit, and will have priority over non-withdrawing members in a winding up<sup>8</sup>.

1 The term 'matured member' relates to a member who has given notice of withdrawal which has expired but to whom payment has not yet been made. A member withdrawing passes through two stages: first, from the date the notice is given to that of its expiration; secondly, from the date of the expiration of the notice to that of payment. Such a member, therefore, occupies in turn three different positions. For the purposes of clarity a different title is used for each position, ie for a member during the currency of the notice being called a 'withdrawing' member, after the expiration of the notice and before a payment a 'matured' member and after payment a 'withdrawn' member. ### 1913. Loss of right of withdrawal.

The right to withdraw from a building society is put to an end by a winding-up order, which acts as a compulsory withdrawal<sup>1</sup>, by insolvency of the society, and by stoppage of business, or by a condition of things that renders stoppage of business inevitable<sup>2</sup>. However, a notice which has matured before any of those events is nevertheless effective<sup>3</sup>.

1914. Effect of winding-up order.

The rights of withdrawing, of matured, and even in some circumstances of withdrawn, members of a building society are liable as against the outside public to be modified by an order for winding up<sup>1</sup> though the validity and force of the contract between them, that is of the rules, is not thereby impaired<sup>2</sup>.

The rule as to priority of payment when a society is being wound up is as follows: outside creditors, including persons who have deposited money by way of loan<sup>3</sup>, must be paid first<sup>4</sup>; then realised<sup>5</sup> members and those matured members<sup>6</sup> whose notices had expired before the winding up began; then withdrawing members and continuing members pari passu<sup>7</sup>. The members of each class are entitled to be paid in full<sup>8</sup> before any payment is made to the classes behind them; priority between the members of each class depends on the rules of the society<sup>9</sup>. Preference shareholders are entitled to be paid in full after all outside creditors have been paid, subject to the rules and the terms on which the shares were issued. There is doubt as to the priority between preference shareholders and matured members whose notice of withdrawal has expired before the commencement of the winding up<sup>10</sup>.

The above order of priority is subject, as respects payment to members, to any contrary provision contained in the society's rules<sup>11</sup>.

A member who, having given notice of withdrawal, afterwards accepts from the society a loan upon terms whereby he still continues to receive interest upon his share, but pays interest upon his advance, cannot in the winding up set off the amount of his share against the unpaid balance of the loan<sup>12</sup>.

10 Re Reliance Permanent Benefit Building Society (1892) 61 LJCh 453; Sixth West Kent Mutual Building Society v Shove [1899] 2 Ch 64n.

11 In the past, rules were sometimes encountered which gave priority to widows and children of deceased members, or to the executors of deceased members, over all other members, including matured or withdrawing members: see Thompson v Atlas Permanent Building Society (1894) 97 LT Jo 218, CA; Re West London and General Permanent Benefit Building Society (1898) 78 LT 393; Barnard v Tomson [1894] 1 Ch 374 at 392 per North J; Re Counties Conservative Permanent Benefit Building Society, Davis v Norton [1900] 2 Ch 819. While it is thought that the principle that the normal order or priority can be altered by the rules is still sound, it is highly improbable that, in modern conditions, the rules of a society would seek to accord priority to classes of the kinds favoured by the rules under consideration in these authorities.

1915. Right to interest.

For the purposes of the Building Societies Act 1986, 'interest' in relation to shares, includes dividends<sup>1</sup>.

Interest, whether simple or compound<sup>2</sup>, is payable by the building society in case of withdrawal if the rules so provide<sup>3</sup>; and if by the rules the day for payment of the sum payable on withdrawal is fixed, and payment is not made by the society, a member who brings proceedings for recovery of the money may be able to obtain an award of interest on the sum due, although the rules do not provide for interest<sup>4</sup>. But if the payment depends on a condition, such as the determination by the directors or the committee of the rate, or the availability of funds, payment cannot be enforced unless and until the condition is fulfilled<sup>5</sup>. Interest, if payable, may in the case of withdrawals between half-yearly dates of payment be recovered for the period between the last such date of payment and the day of withdrawal<sup>6</sup>.

NOTE 4--Appointed day is 1 October 2009: SI 2009/1604.

MUTUAL SOCIETIES/(1) BUILDING SOCIETIES/(i) Constitution of Building Societies/H. RAISING FUNDS AND BORROWING MONEY/1916. The funding limit.

H. RAISING FUNDS AND BORROWING MONEY

1916. The funding limit.

Broadly speaking, the purpose of the funding limit is to ensure that shares in the society held by individuals account for not less than 50 per cent of the funds raised by the society and its subsidiary undertakings. This objective is secured by placing the society under a duty to secure that the difference between: (1) the value of X on any quarter day<sup>1</sup>; and (2) the value of Y on that day or the value of Y on the immediately preceding quarter day, whichever is the greater<sup>2</sup>, does not exceed 50 per cent of that value of X<sup>3</sup>. If a society fails to comply with this requirement the powers conferred on the Financial Services Authority<sup>4</sup> become exercisable in relation to the society, but the failure does not affect the validity of any transaction or other act<sup>5</sup>.

For these purposes X equals the aggregate of: (a) the principal value of, and interest<sup>6</sup> accrued on, shares<sup>7</sup> in the society<sup>8</sup>; (b) the principal of, and interest accrued on, sums deposited with the society or any subsidiary undertaking<sup>9</sup> of the society<sup>10</sup>; and (c) the principal value of, and interest accrued under, bills of exchange<sup>11</sup>, instruments or agreements creating or acknowledging indebtedness and accepted, made, issued or entered into by the society or any such undertaking<sup>12</sup>. For these purposes Y equals the principal value of, and interest accrued on, shares in the society held by individuals otherwise than as bare trustees for bodies corporate<sup>13</sup> or for persons who include bodies corporate<sup>14</sup>. However, the following must be disregarded: (i) any sums or amounts which are own funds<sup>15</sup>; and (ii) to the extent that they are not included in the total liabilities of the society and any subsidiary undertakings of the society as shown in the society's accounts<sup>16</sup> (A) any sums deposited with the society or any such undertaking<sup>17</sup>; and (B) any indebtedness created or acknowledged by bills of exchange, instruments or agreements accepted, made, issued or entered into by the society or any such undertaking<sup>18</sup>.

Where an individual declares that he is acquiring any shares in a building society otherwise than as a bare trustee for a body corporate, or for persons who include a body corporate, he is, unless the contrary is shown, conclusively presumed<sup>19</sup> to hold the shares otherwise than as such a trustee<sup>20</sup>.

1 Building Societies Act 1986 s 7(1)(a) (s 7 substituted by the Building Societies Act 1997 s 8). For the purposes of the Building Societies Act 1986 s 6 (see PARA 2008) and s 7, 'quarter day', in relation to a building society, means a day on which a financial year of the society ends, or a day which is three months, six months or nine months after such day: s 6(14) (s 6 substituted by the Building Societies Act 1997 s 4). References to any value on a quarter day are references to that value at the close of business on that day: Building Societies Act 1986 s 6(14) (as so substituted). If an agreement between the Financial Services Authority and a building society so provides, the definition of 'quarter day' has effect in relation to the society as if for any reference to a number of months there were substituted a reference to a number of days specified in the agreement: s 6(15) (as so substituted; and amended by SI 2001/2617). As to the meaning of 'financial year' see PARA 1992 note 2. As to the functions of the Financial Services Authority in relation to building societies see PARA 1863. 2 Building Societies Act 1986 s 7(1)(b) (as substituted: see note 1).

3 Building Societies Act 1986 s 7(1) (as substituted: see note 1).

As from a day to be appointed, the provisions of s 7(6A)-(6C), (8A) are added by the Building Societies (Funding) and Mutual Societies (Transfers) Act 2007 s 1(1). At the date at which this volume states the law, no such day had been appointed. The Treasury may, by order (1) provide for the Building Societies Act 1986 s 7(1) to have effect as if the reference to 50% were a reference to such greater percentage (not exceeding 75) as it thinks appropriate; (2) prohibit a society from applying the increased percentage unless a resolution of the society of such description as the Treasury thinks appropriate is passed in favour of applying the increased percentage: s 7(6A) (as so prospectively added). An order under s 7(6A) is of no effect at any time unless, at the same time, there is also in force an order under s 90B (power to alter priorities on dissolution and winding up) (see PARA 2080): s 7(6B) (as so prospectively added). An order under head (1) above (a) may not be amended so as to reduce the percentage specified in the order; (b) may not be revoked, unless it is replaced by another such order specifying the same or a greater percentage: s 7(6C) (as so prospectively added). The power to make an order under s 7(6A) is exercisable by statutory instrument but no such order may be made unless a draft of it has been laid before and approved by a resolution of each House of Parliament: s 7(8A) (as so prospectively added). As to the Treasury see PARA 3; and CONSTITUTIONAL LAW AND HUMAN RIGHTS vol 8(2) (Reissue) PARA 512 et seq. See note 8.

4 The powers conferred by the Building Societies Act 1986 s 36 (power to direct restructuring of business): see PARA 2047.

5 Building Societies Act 1986 s 7(5) (as substituted (see note 1); and amended by SI 2001/2617).

6 As to the meaning of 'interest' see PARA 1915.

7 As to shares in relation to societies see PARA 1905 et seq.

8 Building Societies Act 1986 s 7(2)(a) (as substituted: see note 1). The Treasury may by order: (1) modify s 7(2), (3) (see the text to notes 9-18) in its application to liabilities of subsidiary undertakings; (2) apply s 7(2), (3) to corresponding liabilities of associated undertakings; or (3) modify s 7(2), (3) in its application to such liabilities: s 7(7) (as so substituted; and amended by SI 2001/2617). An order under the Building Societies Act 1986 s 7(7) may make different provision for different circumstances, provision for particular liabilities of undertakings to be disregarded, and such supplementary, transitional and saving provision as appears to the Treasury to be necessary or expedient: Building Societies Act 1986 s 7(8) (as so substituted; and amended by SI 2001/2617). As from a day to be appointed, there is an amendment to the provision so that the reference is to an order under the Building Societies Act 1986 s 7(6A) or s 7(7) (as to s 7(6A) see note 3): s 7(8) (prospectively amended by the Building Societies (Funding) and Mutual Societies (Transfers) Act 2007 s 1(1)). At the date at which this volume states the law no such day had been appointed. The power to make such an order is exercisable by statutory instrument, which is subject to annulment in pursuance of a resolution of either House of Parliament: Building Societies Act 1986 s 7(9) (as so substituted). As to orders made see the Building Societies Act 1986 (Modification of the Lending Limit and Funding Limit Calculations) Order 2004, SI 2004/3200 (amended by SI 2006/3221); and the Building Societies Act 1986 (Substitution of Specified Amounts and Modification of the Funding Limit Calculation) Order 2007, SI 2007/860.

'Associated undertaking' has the meaning given by the Building Societies Act 1986 s 119A: s 119(1) (definition added by SI 2008/948). In the Building Societies Act 1986 'associated undertaking', in relation to a building society, means an undertaking (other than a subsidiary undertaking of the society) (a) in which the society (or the group of which the society is a member) holds a participating interest; and (b) over whose operating and financial policy the society (or group) exercises a significant influence: s 119A(1) (s 119A added by SI 2008/948). 'Participating interest' means an interest in the shares of the undertaking held on a long term basis for the purpose of securing a contribution to the activities of the society (or group) by the exercise of control or influence arising from or related to that interest: Building Societies Act 1986 s 119A(2) (as so added). For this purpose (i) a holding of 20% or more of the shares of an undertaking is presumed to be a participating interest unless the contrary is shown; (ii) an 'interest in shares' includes (A) an interest that is convertible into an interest in shares; and (B) an option to acquire shares or any such interest, and an interest or option falls within head (A) or (B) above notwithstanding that the shares to which it relates are, until the conversion or the exercise of the option, unissued; (iii) an interest held on behalf of an undertaking is treated as held by it: s 119A(3) (as so added). A holding of 20% or more of the voting rights in an undertaking is presumed to result in the exercise of such influence as is mentioned in head (b) above, unless the contrary is shown: s 199A(4) (as so added). For this purpose (aa) the voting rights in an undertaking means the rights conferred on shareholders in respect of their shares or, in the case of an undertaking not having a share capital, on members, to vote on all, or substantially all, matters affecting the undertaking; and (bb) the provisions of the Companies Act 2006 Sch 7 paras 5-11 (rights to be taken into account and attribution of rights) (see COMPANIES vol 14 (2009) PARA 27) apply in determining whether the society (or the group) holds 20% or more of the voting rights in an undertaking: Building Societies Act 1986 s 119A(5) (as so added). References in s 119A to the group of which the society is a member at any time are to the undertakings that would fall to be included in the consolidation if consolidated group accounts were to be drawn up by the society at that time: s 119A(6) (as so added). An undertaking is not an 'associated undertaking' of a building society for the purposes of the Building Societies Act 1986 if, in such accounts, it would fall to be dealt with as a joint venture (that is, an undertaking managed jointly with one or more undertakings not included in the consolidation): s 119A(7) (as so added). As to the meaning of 'subsidiary undertaking' see note 9.

9 'Subsidiary undertaking' and 'undertaking' have the same meaning as in the Companies Acts (see the Companies Act 2006 ss 1161(1), 1162, Sch 7; and COMPANIES vol 14 (2009) PARAS 26, 27); Building Societies Act 1986 s 119(1) (definitions added by SI 2008/948).

As to the application of the Building Societies Act 1986 s 7(2) to liabilities of subsidiary undertakings see the Building Societies Act 1986 (Modifications of the Lending Limit and Funding Limit Calculations) Order 2004, SI 2004/3200; and note 8.

11 As to bills of exchange generally see PARA 1400 et seq.

12 Building Societies Act 1986 s 7(2)(c) (as substituted: see note 1). See note 8.

13 As to bodies corporate see generally COMPANIES; CORPORATIONS.

14 Building Societies Act 1986 s 7(2) (as substituted: see note 1). See note 8. Unless the contrary is shown, a society may assume that any shares in the society which are held by an individual on 1 December 1997 (ie the date the Building Societies Act 1997 s 8 came into force: see the Building Societies Act 1997 (Commencement No 3) Order 1997, SI 1997/2668, art 2(2)-(5), Schedule Pt II(g)) are held otherwise than as a bare trustee for a body corporate, or for persons who include a body corporate: Building Societies Act 1997 s 46(1), Sch 8 para 7.

15 Building Societies Act 1986 s 7(3)(a) (as substituted: see note 1). See note 8. 'Own funds' means own funds as defined in European Parliament and EC Council Directive 2006/48 (OJ L177, 30.06.2006, p 1) relating to the taking up and pursuit of the business of credit institutions Title V Ch 2 Section 1: Building Societies Act 1986 s 119(1) (definition added by SI 2001/3649); Building Societies Act 1986 s 119(2B) (added by SI 1996/1669; and substituted by SI 2006/3221).

16 Building Societies Act 1986 s 7(3)(b) (as substituted: see note 1). See note 8. For the purposes of ss 6, 7 (see PARA 2008), 'accounts' in relation to a building society without subsidiary undertakings, means individual accounts (see PARA 1992), and in relation to such a society with such undertakings, means group accounts: s 6(14) (as substituted (see note 1); and amended by SI 2004/3380).

The reference in the Building Societies Act 1986 s 7(3) to anything being shown in a society's accounts is to be construed: (1) in relation to a quarter day on which a financial year of the society ends, as a reference to its being shown in the accounts prepared by the society for that year; (2) in relation to any other quarter day, as a reference to its being shown in the accounts which would have been prepared by the society for the year ending on that day if that year were a financial year of the society: s 7(4) (as substituted: see note 1).

MUTUAL SOCIETIES/(1) BUILDING SOCIETIES/(i) Constitution of Building Societies/H. RAISING FUNDS AND BORROWING MONEY/1917. Raising funds and borrowing.

1917. Raising funds and borrowing.

A building society must not do any of the following things, namely<sup>1</sup>:

- 291 (1) accept a deposit<sup>2</sup> from an individual<sup>3</sup>;
- 292 (2) raise funds<sup>4</sup> from an individual otherwise than by the issue of shares<sup>5</sup>; and
- 293 (3) raise funds from a body corporate, or from a bare trustee for a body corporate or for persons who include a body corporate, otherwise than by the issue of deferred shares<sup>6</sup>.

However, contravention of these prohibitions does not invalidate any transaction or other act<sup>7</sup>.

The prohibition in head (1) above does not apply in relation to<sup>8</sup>:

- 294 (a) the maintenance on behalf of an individual of a current account, or a deposit account which contains in its title the word 'client' or the words 'trust' or 'trustee'<sup>9</sup>;
- 295 (b) the issue to an individual of a transferable instrument<sup>10</sup>;
- 296 (c) the acceptance from an individual of a qualifying time deposit<sup>11</sup> or an overseas deposit<sup>12</sup>; or
- 297 (d) in the case of a society which has announced publicly that it intends<sup>13</sup> to transfer the whole of its business to a company, anything done by the society during the period of two years beginning with the date of the announcement<sup>14</sup>.

Where an individual declares that he is acquiring any shares in a society otherwise than as a bare trustee for a body corporate, or for persons who include a body corporate, he is, unless the contrary is shown, conclusively presumed for the purposes of the provisions relating to raising funds and borrowing<sup>15</sup> to hold the shares otherwise than as such a trustee<sup>16</sup>.

The power of a society to raise funds by the issue of shares is a power<sup>17</sup>: (i) to issue shares of one or more denominations, whether in sterling or another currency<sup>18</sup>; and (ii) to issue them either as shares paid up in full or as shares to be paid by periodical or other payments, and (in either case) with accumulating or other interest<sup>19</sup>, and funds so raised may be repaid when they are no longer required for the purposes of the society<sup>20</sup>. In the case of deferred shares, the power of a society to raise funds by the issue of shares includes the issue of shares at a premium<sup>21</sup>. For the purposes of the provisions relating to raising funds and borrowing, the acceptance of deposits, including the issue of debt securities, does not constitute the raising of funds<sup>22</sup>.

1 See the Building Societies Act 1986 s 8(1); and PARA 1905. The substitution of s 8 does not affect the operation of the Building Societies Act 1986 in relation to:

- 4 (1) any deposit accepted by a society from an individual before 1 December 1997 (ie the date on which the Building Societies Act 1997 s 9 came into force: see the Building Societies Act 1997 (Commencement No 3) Order 1997, SI 1997/2668, art 2(2)-(5), Schedule Pt II(h)) (Building Societies Act 1997 s 46(1), Sch 8 para 8(1)(a));
- 5 (2) any deposit accepted by a society from an individual if: (a) his deposit is held in a deposit account opened before 1 December 1997; (b) he has been notified by the society that he may transfer the deposit without penalty into an account which, at the date of the notice, was an equivalent share account; and (c) he has chosen not to do so (Sch 8 para 8(1)(b), (2));

- 6 (3) any deposit accepted by a society from an individual which is to be credited to a tax-exempt special savings account opened before 1 December 1997 (Sch 8 para 8(1)(c)); or
- 7 (4) any share issued by a society to a body corporate before 1 December 1997 (Sch 8 para 8(1)(d)).

'Equivalent share account', in relation to a deposit account, means a share account: (i) whose access period is no longer than that of the deposit account; and (ii) whose rate of interest is not less than that of each other share account with the society which has the same access period or, where there is no such account, that of any one share account with the society which has a longer access period: Sch 8 para 8(3). 'Access period', in relation to a deposit or share account, means the period of notice required for making withdrawals from the account: Sch 8 para 8(3). For these purposes, 'tax-exempt special savings account' has the same meaning as in the Income and Corporation Taxes Act 1988 s 326A(2) (repealed) (see INCOME TAXATION vol 23(2) (Reissue) PARA 1194): Building Societies Act 1997 Sch 8 para 8(3). As to bodies corporate see generally COMPANIES; CORPORATIONS.

As to the power to modify certain legislation applying in relation to building societies see the Banking (Special Provisions) Act 2008 s 11; and PARA 1856 note 1.

2 As to the meaning of 'deposit' see PARA 1866 note 7.

3 See the Building Societies Act 1986 s 8(1)(a); and PARA 1905.

4 'Raise funds' means, subject to the Building Societies Act 1986 s 8(8) (see the text to note 22), raise funds by the issue of shares or other securities: s 8(9) (s 8 substituted by the Building Societies Act 1997 s 9). See note 8.

5 See the Building Societies Act 1986 s 8(1)(b); and PARA 1905.

6 See the Building Societies Act 1986 s 8(1)(c); and PARA 1905. As to the meaning of 'deferred shares' see PARA 1906.

7 Building Societies Act 1986 s 8(4) (as substituted: see note 4).

8 Building Societies Act 1986 s 8(2) (as substituted: see note 4). The Treasury may by order vary the provisions of s 8(2), (9), (10) (see the text and notes 4, 9-14) by adding to or deleting from them any provision or by varying any provision contained in them; and such an order may make such supplementary, transitional and saving provision as appears to the Treasury to be necessary or expedient: s 8(12) (as so substituted; and amended by SI 2001/2617). The power to make such an order is exercisable by statutory instrument which is subject to annulment in pursuance of a resolution of either House of Parliament: Building Societies Act 1986 s 8(13) (as so substituted). At the date at which this volume states the law no such order had been made. As to the Treasury see PARA 3; and CONSTITUTIONAL LAW AND HUMAN RIGHTS vol 8(2) (Reissue) PARA 512 et seq.

9 Building Societies Act 1986 s 8(2)(a) (as substituted: see note 4). See note 8.

10 Building Societies Act 1986 s 8(2)(b) (as substituted: see note 4). 'Transferable instrument' means an instrument which embodies a transferable right to receive an amount referable to a deposit with the society: s 8(9) (as so substituted). A right is transferable for these purposes if it is transferable by delivery of the instrument, or it is a right: (1) which may, under the terms of the instrument, be held by any person, or by any person other than a person of a description specified in the instrument; (2) express provision for the transfer of which is included in the instrument; and (3) the transfer of which, under the terms of the instrument, does not require the consent of any person: s 8(10) (as so substituted). See note 8.

11 For these purposes 'qualifying time deposit' has the same meaning as in the Income Tax Act 2007 s 866(2), (3) (see INCOME TAXATION): Building Societies Act 1986 s 8(9) (as substituted (see note 4); and definition amended by the Income Tax Act 2007 Sch 1 para 273). According to the Income Tax Act 2007 s 866(2), (3), an investment is a qualifying time deposit for these purposes if: (1) it is a deposit consisting of a loan of at least £50,000; (2) the terms of the deposit require its repayment at a specified time within five years beginning with the date on which it is made; (3) those terms do not make provision for the transfer of the right to repayment; and (4) those terms prevent partial withdrawals of, or additions to, the deposit; and if a deposit is denominated in a foreign currency, head (1) above has effect as if it referred to an amount which is at least the equivalent in that currency of £50,000 at the time the deposit is made. See note 8. As to transitional provisions, savings, etc in relation to the amendment of the definition by the Income Tax Act 2007 see s 1030(1).

12 Building Societies Act 1986 s 8(2)(c) (as substituted: see note 4). For these purposes 'overseas deposit' means a deposit which is accepted by a branch or agency of the society in a country or territory outside the United Kingdom and is repayable in such a country or territory: s 8(9) (as so substituted). See note 8. As to the meaning of 'United Kingdom' see PARA 2 note 3.

13 Ie in accordance with the Building Societies Act 1986 s 97 and the other applicable provisions of the Building Societies Act 1986: see PARAS 1927-1941. As to the applicable provisions see PARA 1927 note 1.

14 Building Societies Act 1986 s 8(2)(d) (as substituted: see note 4). See note 8. In relation to anything which, after 1 December 1997 (ie the date on which the Building Societies Act 1997 s 9 came into force: see note 1), is done by a society under the Building Societies Act 1986 s 8(2)(d), the Building Societies Act 1997 Sch 8 para 8(1), (2) (see note 1) has effect as if any reference to 1 December 1997 were a reference to the expiry of the period mentioned in the Building Societies Act 1986 s 8(2)(d): Building Societies Act 1997 Sch 8 para 8(4).

The Financial Services Authority may, if it thinks fit, extend or further extend the period mentioned in s 8(2)(d) if written application is made to it before the expiry of that period or that period as extended; and a direction under s 8(3) must be in writing and may be given subject to such limitations or conditions as the Authority may think fit: s 8(3) (as so substituted; and amended by SI 2001/2617). As to the functions of the Financial Services Authority in relation to building societies see PARA 1863. As to the Authority generally see PARAS 4, 6 et seq. ### (A) AMALGAMATIONS AND TRANSFERS OF ENGAGEMENTS

1918. Method and procedure of amalgamation.

Two or more building societies desiring to amalgamate may do so by establishing a building society as their successor<sup>1</sup>. In order to establish a society as their successor the societies desiring to amalgamate must<sup>2</sup>:

- 298 (1) agree the purpose or principal purpose<sup>3</sup> of their successor to be that of making loans which are secured on residential property<sup>4</sup> and are funded substantially by its members<sup>5</sup>, and agree upon the extent of its powers, in a memorandum which complies with the requirements of the Building Societies Act 1986 relating to memoranda<sup>6</sup>;

- 299 (2) agree on the rules for the regulation of their successor which comply with the requirements of the Building Societies Act 1986 relating to rules<sup>7</sup>;
- 300 (3) each approve the terms of the amalgamation by two resolutions which also approve the memorandum and the rules of their successor and of which<sup>8</sup>: (a) one is passed as a shareholding members' resolution<sup>9</sup>; and (b) the other is passed as a borrowing members' resolution<sup>10</sup>, in accordance with the applicable provisions of the Building Societies Act 1986<sup>11</sup>;
- 301 (4) make a joint application to the Financial Services Authority<sup>12</sup> for confirmation of the amalgamation and send to the Authority three copies of the rules and of the memorandum, each copy signed by the secretary of each of the societies<sup>13</sup>.

If the Authority confirms the amalgamation<sup>14</sup>, and is satisfied, as regards the proposed successor, of the matters relating to its rules, its purpose and powers and its name as to which it must<sup>15</sup> be satisfied before it registers a society, it must<sup>16</sup>:

- 302 (i) register the successor society<sup>17</sup>;
- 303 (ii) issue to it a certificate of incorporation, specifying a date (the 'specified date') as from which the incorporation takes effect<sup>18</sup>;
- 304 (iii) retain and register one copy of the memorandum and of the rules<sup>19</sup>;
- 305 (iv) return another copy to the secretary of the successor together with a certificate of registration<sup>20</sup>; and
- 306 (v) keep another copy, together with a copy of the certificate of incorporation and of the certificate of registration of the memorandum and the rules, in the public file<sup>21</sup> of the successor society<sup>22</sup>.

1919. Effect of amalgamation.

On the date specified in the certificate of incorporation as the date from which the incorporation takes effect<sup>1</sup>, all the property, rights and liabilities of each of the building societies whose amalgamation was confirmed by the Financial Services Authority<sup>2</sup> (whether or not capable of being transferred or assigned) are transferred to and vested in the building society so incorporated as their successor<sup>3</sup>. On the specified date, each of the societies to which the successor succeeds is dissolved<sup>4</sup>, but the transfer of all the property, rights and liabilities of each of the societies amalgamating is deemed to have been effected immediately before the dissolution<sup>5</sup>. If, on the specified date, each of the societies whose amalgamation was confirmed by the Authority has permission under Part IV of the Financial Services and Markets Act 2000<sup>6</sup> to accept deposits, the Authority must, with effect from that date, give their successor such permission under Part IV as it considers appropriate, and must notify the successor of the permission by giving the successor a decision notice<sup>7</sup>.

Method and procedure of transfer of engagements.

1920. Method and procedure of transfer of engagements.

A building society may<sup>1</sup> transfer its engagements to any extent to another building society which<sup>2</sup> undertakes to fulfil the engagements<sup>3</sup>. In order to transfer its engagements, a society must resolve to do so by two resolutions, of which one is passed as a shareholding members' resolution<sup>4</sup> and the other as a borrowing members' resolution<sup>5</sup>. In order to transfer some but not all of its engagements to its members<sup>6</sup> in respect of shares<sup>7</sup> held by them (with or without other engagements), a society must, in addition to resolving to transfer the engagements by the two resolutions so required, resolve to do so by an affected shareholders' resolution<sup>8</sup>.

In order to undertake to fulfil the engagements of another society, a society must resolve to do so<sup>9</sup>: (1) by two resolutions, of which one is passed as a shareholding members' resolution and the other as a borrowing members' resolution<sup>10</sup>; or (2) by a resolution of the board of directors<sup>11</sup>, if the Financial Services Authority<sup>12</sup> consents to that mode of proceeding<sup>13</sup>. The extent of the transfer, as so resolved by the society making and the society taking the transfer, must be recorded in an instrument of transfer of engagements<sup>14</sup>. A transfer of engagements between societies is of no effect unless<sup>15</sup>: (a) the transfer is confirmed by the Authority<sup>16</sup>; and (b) a registration certificate is issued in respect of the transfer<sup>17</sup>. Where the Authority confirms a transfer of engagements between societies, it must register a copy of the instrument of transfer of engagements, and issue a registration certificate to the society taking the transfer<sup>18</sup>.

1921. Effect of transfer of engagements.

On the date specified in the registration certificate issued to a building society taking a transfer of engagements<sup>1</sup>, the property, rights and liabilities of the society transferring its engagements (whether or not capable of being transferred or assigned) are transferred to and vested in the society taking the transfer to the extent provided in the instrument of transfer of engagements<sup>2</sup>. The Financial Services Authority<sup>3</sup> must keep a copy of the instrument and of the registration certificate<sup>4</sup> in the public file<sup>5</sup> of the society taking the transfer<sup>6</sup>. If the transfer is of all its engagements the society which has transferred its engagements is dissolved on the date specified in the registration certificate, but the transfer is deemed to have been effected immediately before the dissolution<sup>7</sup>.

As to the effect of a transfer of engagements generally see Sun Permanent Benefit Building Society v Western Suburban and Harrow Road Permanent Building Society [1921] 2 Ch 438, 456. In Co-operative Group (CWS) Ltd v Stansell Ltd [2006] EWCA Civ 538; [2006] 1 WLR 1704, CA, it was held that a transfer of engagements by an industrial and provident society will be effective to pass a contractual right which could only have been assigned at common law with the consent of the other contracting party (which had not been obtained). That conclusion was reached even though, in contrast to the Building Society 1986 s 94(8), the relevant statutory provision (the Industrial and Provident Societies Act 1965 s 1(1); see also PARA 2414) does not expressly state that it applies to rights which are not otherwise capable of being assigned. Information to be given to members.

1922. Information to be given to members.

A building society which desires to: (1) amalgamate with one or more other building societies<sup>1</sup>; or (2) transfer its engagements to another building society<sup>2</sup>; or (3) undertake to fulfil the engagements of another building society<sup>3</sup>, must send to every member<sup>4</sup> entitled to notice<sup>5</sup> of a meeting of the society a statement<sup>6</sup>, the contents of which, so far as they concern the matters specified in heads (a) to (f) below, have been approved by the Financial Services Authority<sup>7</sup>. The statement concerns:

- 307 (a) the financial position of the society and that of the other society or societies participating in the amalgamation or transfer of engagements<sup>8</sup>;
- 308 (b) the interest of the directors<sup>9</sup> of the society in the amalgamation or transfer of engagements<sup>10</sup>;
- 309 (c) the compensation<sup>11</sup> or other consideration, if any, proposed to be paid to or in respect of the directors or other officers<sup>12</sup> of the society and of the other society or societies participating in the amalgamation or transfer<sup>13</sup>;
- 310 (d) the payments, if any, to be made to members of the society and of the other society or societies participating in the amalgamation or transfer by way of a distribution of funds<sup>14</sup> in consideration of the amalgamation or transfer<sup>15</sup>;
- 311 (e) the changes, if any, to be made, in connection with the amalgamation or transfer of engagements, in the terms governing outstanding loans made by the society which are secured on land<sup>16</sup>; and
- 312 (f) any other matter which the Authority requires in the case of the particular amalgamation or transfer of engagements<sup>17</sup>.

A society must include the statement in or with the notice to be sent to its members of the meeting at which the resolutions required for the approval of the amalgamation or, as the case may be, the transfer are to be moved<sup>18</sup>. Provision is made for the statement to be sent electronically<sup>19</sup>.

The requirement to send such a statement does not apply to a society wishing to undertake to fulfil another's engagements if the Authority has consented<sup>20</sup> to the society's proceeding by resolution of the board of directors<sup>21</sup>.

18 Building Societies Act 1986 Sch 16 para 1(2).

19 See the Building Societies Act 1986 Sch 16 para 1(2A)-(2C) (added by SI 2003/404). Where a statement is required under the Building Societies Act 1986 Sch 16 para 1(2) (see the text to note 18) to be sent to a member in or with the notice of the meeting: (1) in a case where notice of the meeting is given to that member electronically in accordance with Sch 2 para 22A (see PARA 1985), the statement may be sent to him electronically only if it is sent to the same electronic address, and at the same time, as the notice; (2) in a case where notice of the meeting is given on a website in accordance with Sch 2 para 22B (see PARA 1985), the requirement to send it is also treated as satisfied if the conditions set out in Sch 16 para 1(2B) are satisfied: Sch 16 para 1(2A) (as so added). As to the meaning of 'electronic address' see PARA 1883 note 24.

The conditions mentioned in head (2) above are satisfied in the case of a statement if: (a) the society and that member have agreed that information that is required to be sent to him may instead be accessed by him on a website; (b) the agreement applies to the statement in question; (c) at the same time and in the same manner as the society notifies that person of the publication of the notice of the meeting, it notifies him of the publication of the statement on a website, the address of that website, the place on that website where the statement may be accessed, and how it may be accessed; and (d) the statement is published continuously on that website throughout the period beginning with the giving of that notification and ending with the decision of the Authority whether to confirm the amalgamation or transfer of engagements pursuant to s 95 (see PARA 1926): Sch 16 para 1(2B) (as so added).

Where, in a case in which head (2) above is relied on for compliance with a requirement under Sch 16 para 1(2), a statement is published for a part, but not all, of the period mentioned in head (d) above, but the failure to publish it throughout that period is wholly attributable to circumstances which it would not be reasonable to have expected the society to prevent or avoid, that failure does not invalidate the proceedings of a meeting or prevent the requirements of Sch 16 para 1(2B) from being treated as fulfilled in relation to s 95(4)(c) (see PARA 1926): Sch 16 para 1(2C) (as so added).

MUTUAL SOCIETIES/(1) BUILDING SOCIETIES/(i) Constitution of Building Societies/I. MERGERS AND TRANSFERS OF BUSINESS/(A) Amalgamations and Transfers of Engagements/1923. Notice of other merger or transfer proposals.

1923. Notice of other merger or transfer proposals.

A building society which receives a proposal in writing<sup>1</sup> by another building society desiring to merge with it, for the societies to merge, with or without terms for the merger<sup>2</sup>, must send a merger statement in respect of the proposal to every member<sup>3</sup> entitled to notice<sup>4</sup> of a meeting of the society<sup>5</sup>. The merger statement must contain the fact that a merger proposal has been made and the identity of the proposer, with or without other particulars regarding the proposal<sup>6</sup>. The merger statement is not required to be sent to members if the proposer has requested in writing that the details are to be treated as confidential; and if the request for confidentiality is at a later date withdrawn in writing, the society receiving the proposal is<sup>7</sup> to treat the proposal as having been received on that date instead of any earlier date<sup>8</sup>.

A society must include in or with every notice of its annual general meeting<sup>9</sup> a merger statement with respect to any merger proposal (other than a proposal of which notice has already been given<sup>10</sup>) which (1) has been received by it during the period of 12 months ending with the ninth month of the last financial year<sup>11</sup> of the society before that meeting<sup>12</sup>; or (2) is treated as having been received by it during the last three months of that financial year<sup>13</sup>, and it may also include a merger statement with respect to any proposal received, or treated as received, after the end of either period<sup>14</sup>. It is an offence if a society fails to comply with this requirement, and the society, and any officer who is also guilty of the offence, is liable on summary conviction to a fine<sup>15</sup>.

Where resolutions are to be moved at any meeting of a society for the approval of a merger<sup>16</sup>, every notice of the meeting must have included in or with it<sup>17</sup>: (a) a merger statement with respect to any merger proposal, other than a proposal of which notice has already been given, received by it more than 42 days before the date of the meeting<sup>18</sup>; and (b) a transfer proposal notification<sup>19</sup> with respect to any transfer proposal so received by it<sup>20</sup>. It is an offence if a society fails to comply with this requirement, and the society, and any officer who is also guilty of the offence, is liable on summary conviction to a fine<sup>21</sup>.

Provision is made for the merger statement or transfer proposal notification to be sent electronically<sup>22</sup>.

Where a society sends a merger statement or transfer proposal notification to its members in connection with a meeting of the society, it must send a copy of the statement to the Financial Services Authority<sup>23</sup> at least 14 days before the date of the meeting<sup>24</sup>, and the Authority must keep the copy in the public file<sup>25</sup> of that society<sup>26</sup>. It is an offence if a society fails to comply with this requirement, and the society, and any officer who is also guilty of the offence, is liable on summary conviction to a fine<sup>27</sup>.

18 Building Societies Act 1986 Sch 16 para 4(2)(a) (as substituted: see note 17).

19 'Transfer proposal', in relation to a building society, means a proposal in writing by a company for a transfer by the society to the company, with or without terms for the transfer; and 'proposer' has a corresponding meaning: Building Societies Act 1986 Sch 17 para 5A (added by the Building Societies Act 1997 Sch 5 Pt II); definition applied by the Building Societies Act 1986 Sch 16 para 4(3) (as added: see note 17). 'Transfer proposal notification' means a transfer proposal notification (within the meaning of Sch 17 Pt IA (paras 5A-5E) (see PARA 1935 note 3)) required to be sent to members by Sch 17 para 5B(1) (see PARA 1935): Sch 16 para 4(3) (as so added).

22 See the Building Societies Act 1986 Sch 16 paras 4(2A)-(2C), 6(2) (added by SI 2003/404). Where a merger statement or a transfer proposal notification is required under the Building Societies Act 1986 Sch 16 para 4(1) (see the text to notes 9-14) or under Sch 16 para 4(2) (see the text to notes 16-20) to be sent to a person in or with the notice of a meeting of the society: (1) in a case where notice of a meeting is given electronically to a person in accordance with Sch 2 para 22A (see PARA 1985), the merger statement or transfer proposal notification may be sent to him electronically only if it is sent to the same electronic address and at the same time as the notice; (2) in a case where notice of a meeting is given on a website in accordance with Sch 2 para 22B (see PARA 1985), the requirement to send the statement or notification is also treated as satisfied if the conditions set out in Sch 16 para 4(2B) are satisfied: Sch 16 para 4(2A) (as so added). As to the meaning of 'electronic address' see PARA 1883 note 24.

The conditions mentioned in head (2) above are satisfied in the case of a merger statement or transfer proposal notification if: (a) the society and that person have agreed that information that is required to be sent to him may instead be accessed by him on a website; (b) the agreement applies to the merger statement or transfer proposal notification in question; (c) at the same time and in the same manner as the society notifies that person of the publication of the notice of the meeting, it notifies him of the publication of the merger statement or transfer proposal notification on a website, the address of that website, the place on that website where that statement or notification may be accessed, and how it may be accessed; and (d) the statement or notification is published continuously on that website throughout the period beginning when the person is notified in accordance with head (c) above and ending with the conclusion of the meeting: Sch 16 para 4(2B) (as so added).

Where, in a case in which head (2) above is relied on for compliance with a requirement under Sch 16 para 4(1) or Sch 16 para 4(2), a statement or notification is published for a part, but not all, of the period mentioned in head (d) above, but the failure to publish it throughout that period is wholly attributable to circumstances which it would not be reasonable to have expected the society to prevent or avoid, that failure does not invalidate the proceedings of a meeting or prevent the requirements of Sch 16 para 4(2B) from being treated as fulfilled in relation to s 95(4)(c) (see PARA 1926): Sch 16 para 4(2C) (as so added).

Where, in a case in which head (2) above is relied on for compliance with a requirement under Sch 16 para 4(1) or Sch 16 para 4(2), a merger statement or transfer proposal notification is published for a part, but not all, of the period mentioned in head (d) above, but the failure to publish it throughout that period is wholly attributable to circumstances which it would not be reasonable to have expected the society to prevent or avoid, no offence is committed under Sch 16 para 6 (see the text to notes 15, 21) by reason of that failure: Sch 16 para 6(2) (as so added).

MUTUAL SOCIETIES/(1) BUILDING SOCIETIES/(i) Constitution of Building Societies/I. MERGERS AND TRANSFERS OF BUSINESS/(A) Amalgamations and Transfers of Engagements/1924. Compensation for loss of office.

1924. Compensation for loss of office.

The terms of an amalgamation<sup>1</sup> of or transfer of engagements<sup>2</sup> between building societies may include provision for compensation<sup>3</sup> to be paid by a society to or in respect of any director<sup>4</sup> or other officer<sup>5</sup> of that or any other society for loss of office<sup>6</sup> or diminution of emoluments attributable to the amalgamation or transfer, but the provision must be authorised as follows<sup>7</sup>:

313 (1) except in so far as head (2) below applies, the provision for such compensation to be paid by a society must be approved by the society by a resolution passed as a special resolution<sup>8</sup>, not being one of the two resolutions required<sup>9</sup> for the approval of the other terms of the amalgamation or transfer<sup>10</sup>;

314 (2) if regulations are made authorising payments of such compensation within prescribed limits<sup>11</sup> and the provision for such compensation includes only payments of amounts not exceeding the prescribed limits, the passing of the two resolutions approving the terms of the amalgamation or transfer is sufficient authority for their payment<sup>12</sup>.

A director or other officer is not prevented by the above provisions<sup>13</sup> from receiving payments from societies which, in the aggregate, exceed any limit applicable to him<sup>14</sup> if the excess payment is included in provision approved as required by head (1) above; but if any payment is received which has not been authorised under head (1) or head (2) above it must be repaid<sup>15</sup>.

MUTUAL SOCIETIES/(1) BUILDING SOCIETIES/(i) Constitution of Building Societies/I. MERGERS AND TRANSFERS OF BUSINESS/(A) Amalgamations and Transfers of Engagements/1925. Distribution of funds to members.

1925. Distribution of funds to members.

The terms of an amalgamation<sup>1</sup> of, or transfer of engagements<sup>2</sup> between, building societies may include provision for part of the funds of one or more of the participating societies to be distributed in consideration of the amalgamation or transfer among any of the members<sup>3</sup> of the participating societies, but the provision must be authorised<sup>4</sup>. Authorisation must be by each of the two resolutions giving the approval of the society to the terms of the amalgamation or transfer<sup>5</sup>, and the provision for such a distribution by a society must not exceed the limits prescribed by regulations<sup>6</sup>. If the prescribed limits are exceeded the distribution must be approved by each of the two resolutions of the society desiring it and each of the other societies participating in the amalgamation or transfer by which each approved the terms of the amalgamation or transfer<sup>7</sup>.

Where the terms of a transfer of engagements include provision for a distribution of the funds of the society transferring or the society undertaking the engagements and the society undertaking the engagements applies to the Financial Services Authority<sup>8</sup> for consent to the society's approving the transfer by a resolution of the board of directors<sup>9</sup> instead of a shareholding members' resolution and a borrowing members' resolution<sup>10</sup>, the Authority must not give its consent unless it is satisfied that the proposed distribution to be made by each society will not exceed the prescribed limits<sup>11</sup>.

1 As to the amalgamation of building societies see PARAS 1918-1919.

2 As to the transfer of engagements between building societies see PARAS 1920-1921.

3 As to membership see PARA 1888 et seq.

4 Building Societies Act 1986 s 96(4).

5 As to the resolutions giving such approval see the Building Societies Act 1986 s 93(2), s 94(2); and PARAS 1918, 1920.

6 Building Societies Act 1986 s 96(4)(a) (s 96(4)(a), (b) amended by the Building Societies Act 1997 Sch 7 para 44(2)). The Building Societies Act 1986 s 96(4)(a) is expressed to be subject to s 96(4)(b) (see the text to note 7). 'Prescribed' with reference to limits on distribution of assets means prescribed by regulations made under s 96(5): s 96(8). The Treasury must by regulations authorise distributions of funds to members by societies participating in amalgamations or transfers of engagements subject to limits specified in or determinable under the regulations; and the regulations may make different provision for different circumstances: s 96(5) (amended by SI 2001/2617). The power to make such regulations is exercisable by statutory instrument which is subject to annulment in pursuance of a resolution of either House of Parliament: Building Societies Act 1986 s 96(7). The prescribed limit on any distribution among members of any one society is the lesser of (1) 5% of the value of the society's total assets; and (2) the sum calculated by deducting the value of the society's fixed assets, both tangible and intangible, from the aggregate of the society's general reserves and, if any, revaluation and other reserves, the relevant values in each case being those given in the statement sent under Sch 16 Pt I or, if the values are not given in the statement, their values as determined for the purposes of making that statement: see the Building Societies (Mergers) Regulations 1987, SI 1987/2005, regs 2, 3(1), (2)(a), (3), (4) (amended by SI 1995/1874). In the case of a partial transfer of engagements, the prescribed limit is the lesser of (a) 5% of the liabilities in respect of the value of the shares being transferred; and (b) such proportion of the sum mentioned in head (2) above as the value of the liabilities in respect of shares that are transferred bears to the value of the liabilities in respect of the totality of shares in the society (both those being transferred and those not being transferred): see the Building Societies (Mergers) Regulations 1987, SI 1987/2005, regs 2, 3(1), (2)(b), (3), (4) (as so amended). MUTUAL SOCIETIES/(1) BUILDING SOCIETIES/(i) Constitution of Building Societies/l. MERGERS AND TRANSFERS OF BUSINESS/(A) Amalgamations and Transfers of Engagements/1926. Confirmation by the Financial Services Authority.

1926. Confirmation by the Financial Services Authority.

An application for confirmation by the Financial Services Authority<sup>1</sup> of an amalgamation<sup>2</sup> or transfer of engagements<sup>3</sup> must be made in such manner as the Authority may direct<sup>4</sup>. The building society applying for confirmation must publish notice<sup>5</sup> of the application in any one or more of the London Gazette, the Edinburgh Gazette or the Belfast Gazette, as the Authority directs and, if it so directs, in one or more newspapers<sup>6</sup>. The notice must:

- 315 (1) state that any interested party has the right to make representations to the Authority with respect to the application<sup>7</sup>;
- 316 (2) specify a date determined by the Authority before which any written<sup>8</sup> representations or notice of a person's intention to make oral representations must be received by the Authority<sup>9</sup>; and
- 317 (3) specify a date determined by the Authority as the day on which it intends to hear any oral representations<sup>10</sup>.

After the date mentioned in head (2) above the Authority must<sup>11</sup>:

- 318 (a) determine the time and place at which oral representations may be made<sup>12</sup>;
- 319 (b) give notice of the determination to the societies participating in the amalgamation or transfer and any persons who have given notice of their intention to make oral representations<sup>13</sup>; and
- 320 (c) send copies of the written representations received by the Authority to the societies participating in the amalgamation or transfer<sup>14</sup>.

Any society participating in the amalgamation or transfer must be allowed an opportunity to comment on the written representations, whether at a hearing or in writing before the expiration of such period as the Authority specifies in a notice to the society<sup>15</sup>.

Where an application is made to the Authority for confirmation of an amalgamation or transfer of engagements the Authority must confirm the amalgamation or transfer except where this is precluded<sup>16</sup>. The Authority must not give its confirmation if it considers that<sup>17</sup>:

- 321 (i) some information material to the members' decision about the amalgamation or transfer was not made available to all the members eligible to vote<sup>18</sup>; or
- 322 (ii) the vote on any resolution approving the amalgamation or transfer does not represent the views of the members eligible to vote<sup>19</sup>; or
- 323 (iii) some relevant requirement<sup>20</sup> of the Building Societies Act 1986 or the rules of any of the societies participating in the amalgamation or transfer was not fulfilled or not fulfilled as regards that society<sup>21</sup>.

However, the Authority is not precluded from giving its confirmation by virtue only of the non-fulfilment of some relevant requirement of the Building Societies Act 1986 or the rules of a society, if it appears to the Authority that it could not have been material to the members' decision about the amalgamation or transfer and the Authority directs that the failure is to be disregarded<sup>22</sup>. Where the Authority is precluded from giving its confirmation by reason of any of the defects specified in heads (i) to (iii) above, it may direct any society concerned to take such steps to remedy the defect or defects, including the calling of a further meeting, as it specifies in the direction, and to furnish the Authority with satisfactory evidence that it has done so<sup>23</sup>. If the Authority is satisfied that the steps have been taken and the defect or defects has or have been substantially remedied it must give its confirmation, but if it is not so satisfied it must refuse its confirmation<sup>24</sup>.

A failure to comply with a relevant requirement of the Building Societies Act 1986 or any rules of a society does not invalidate an amalgamation or transfer of engagements, but if a society fails without reasonable excuse to comply with such a requirement it is an offence and the society, and any officer<sup>25</sup> who is also guilty of the offence, is liable on summary conviction to a fine<sup>26</sup>.

(B) TRANSFER OF BUSINESS TO COMMERCIAL COMPANY

1927. Transfer of business.

A building society may transfer the whole of its business to a company<sup>1</sup>, its 'successor'<sup>2</sup>. The successor company may be a company formed by the society wholly or partly for the purpose of assuming and conducting the society's business in its place or an existing company which is to assume and conduct the society's business in its place<sup>3</sup>. In order to transfer its business to its successor a society must:

- 324 (1) in the case of a transfer to a specially formed company<sup>4</sup>, secure that it is formed having articles of association with the requisite protective provisions<sup>5</sup>;
- 325 (2) agree conditionally with its successor in a transfer agreement<sup>6</sup> on the terms of the transfer which, in so far as they are regulated terms<sup>7</sup>, comply with the Building Societies Act 1986<sup>8</sup> and transfer regulations<sup>9</sup>;
- 326 (3) approve the transfer and the terms of the transfer by the requisite transfer resolutions<sup>10</sup>; and
- 327 (4) obtain the confirmation of the Financial Services Authority<sup>11</sup> of the transfer and its terms<sup>12</sup>.

A society is prohibited from using a dissolution of the society to effect or facilitate the transfer of the society's engagements to any other society or to a company without the Authority's consent<sup>13</sup>.

1 'Company' means a company within the meaning of the Companies Act 1985 or the Companies (Northern Ireland) Order 1986, SI 1986/1032 (NI 6), which is a public company limited by shares: Building Societies Act 1986 s 97(12). See COMPANIES. A company is a 'specially formed' company if it is formed by a building society (and by no others than its nominees) for the purpose of assuming and conducting its business in its place, and is an 'existing' company if it is a company carrying on business as a going concern on the date of the transfer agreement: see s 97(12). References in s 97, and the other applicable provisions of the Building Societies Act 1986, to a company include references to a body corporate which is incorporated in an EEA state other than the United Kingdom, and has power under its constitution to offer its shares or debentures to the public: s 97(13) (added by the Building Societies Act 1997 Sch 7 para 45(4)). The applicable provisions of the Building Societies Act 1986 other than s 97 are s 98 (see PARAS 1934-1935, 1937), s 99 (see PARA 1930), s 99A (see PARA 1931), s 100 (see PARAS 1928-1929, 1932), s 101 (see PARA 1933), s 102 (see notes 7, 9), s 102B (see PARA 1940), s 102C (see PARA 1941), s 102D (see PARA 1940), Sch 2 para 30 (see PARA 1936), Sch 17 (see PARAS 1934-1935, 1937): s

97(2) (amended by the Building Societies Act 1997 Sch 7 para 45(1); and the Building Societies (Distributions) Act 1997 s 1(2)). 'EEA state' means a contracting party to the Agreement on the European Economic Area signed at Oporto on 2 May 1992 (Cm 2073; OJ L1, 3.1.94, p 3), as adjusted by the Protocol signed at Brussels on 17 March 1993 (Cm 2183; OJ L1, 3.1.94, p 572): Building Societies Act 1986 s 97(13) (as so added). As to the meaning of 'United Kingdom' see PARA 2 note 3. As to bodies corporate see generally COMPANIES; CORPORATIONS. As to companies generally see COMPANIES.

2 Building Societies Act 1986 s 97(1), (12). See also generally the Financial Services Authority's Handbook of Rules and Guidance, Building Societies Regulatory Guide (BSOG) Ch 3. As to the Handbook generally see PARA 22.

As from a day to be appointed, the Treasury has power to make by statutory instrument such modifications to the transfer provisions contained in the Building Societies Act 1986 ss 97-102D, Sch 2 para 30 and Sch 17 as it thinks appropriate to facilitate, or in consequence of, the transfer of the whole of the business of a building society to a subsidiary of a mutual society (whether or not of the same type): see the Building Societies (Funding) and Mutual Societies (Transfer) Act 2007 ss 3-5; and PARA 1942. At the date at which this volume states the law, no such day had been appointed, and no orders had been made under ss 3, 4.

3 Building Societies Act 1986 s 97(3) (amended by the Building Societies Act 1997 Sch 7 para 45(2), Sch 9).

4 See note 1.

5 Building Societies Act 1986 s 97(4)(a). 'Requisite protective provisions' means the provisions required to be made by s 101(2) (see PARA 1933): s 97(12).

6 'Transfer agreement' means the agreement required by the Building Societies Act 1986 s 97(4)(b) (see the text to note 9) and, in relation to it, 'conditionally' means conditional on the approval of the transfer by the requisite transfer resolutions and on confirmation of the transfer: s 97(12). As to the terms of the transfer agreement see PARAS 1928-1929. The 'requisite transfer resolutions' are resolutions passed by the members of the society in accordance with Sch 2 para 30 (see PARA 1936): s 97(4)(c), (12).

7 'Regulated terms' means any terms of a transfer agreement (see note 6) which are regulated terms under the Building Societies Act 1986 s 99 (see PARA 1930), s 100 (see PARAS 1928-1929, 1932) or s 102 (see note 9): s 97(12). Any terms of a transfer of business to which s 99(2) (see PARA 1930), s 100(2) (see PARA 1929), s 100(8), (9), (10), (11) (see PARA 1932), regulations under s 99(3) (see PARA 1930), or transfer regulations (see note 9) apply are regulated terms for the purposes of s 97: ss 99(6), 100(12), 102(4).

9 Building Societies Act 1986 s 97(4)(b). The Treasury may, by transfer regulations under s 102, make provision regulating transfers of business under s 97: ss 97(12), 102(1) (amended by SI 2001/2617). Transfer regulations may, in particular make provision:

8 (1) for and in connection with the transition from regulation by and under the Building Societies Act 1986 to regulation by and under the Companies Act 1985 or, as regards Northern Ireland, the Companies (Northern Ireland) Order 1986, SI 1986/1032 (NI 6) (Building Societies Act 1986 s 102(2)(a) (amended by SI 2001/2617));

9 (2) for the treatment, in the hands of companies taking such transfers, of the property, rights and liabilities transferred and for the modification of any enactment in its application to property, rights and liabilities so transferred (Building Societies Act 1986 s 102(2)(b));

10 (3) for the purposes of and incidental to s 100 (see PARAS 1928-1929, 1932), s 101 (see PARA 1933), s 102B (see PARA 1940), s 102C (see PARA 1941), s 102D (see PARA 1940) (s 102(2)(c) (amended by the Building Societies (Distributions) Act 1997 s 1(3))).

The power to make transfer regulations is exercisable by statutory instrument which is subject to annulment in pursuance of a resolution of either House of Parliament: Building Societies Act 1986 s 102(3). As to the regulations made under s 102 see the Building Societies (Transfer of Business) Regulations 1998, SI 1998/212; and PARAS 1934, 1938. As to the Treasury see PARA 3; and CONSTITUTIONAL LAW AND HUMAN RIGHTS vol 8(2) (Reissue) PARA 512 et seq.

10 Building Societies Act 1986 s 97(4)(c). As to the requisite transfer resolutions see note 6; and PARA 1936.

11 'Confirmation', in relation to a transfer, means the confirmation of the Financial Services Authority required by the Building Societies Act 1986 s 97(4)(d): s 97(12) (s 97(4)(d), (12) amended by SI 2001/2617). As to the functions of the Financial Services Authority in relation to building societies see PARA 1863. As to the Authority generally see PARAS 4, 6 et seq. As to confirmation by the Authority see PARA 1937.

1928. Terms of the transfer agreement.

The terms of the transfer of a building society's business<sup>1</sup> to a successor company<sup>2</sup> must be set out in the transfer agreement<sup>3</sup>, and certain regulated terms<sup>4</sup> must be included<sup>5</sup>. The transfer agreement is between the society and its successor, but in so far as it provides for rights to be conferred on members or officers<sup>6</sup> of the society, whether or not in pursuance of regulated terms, the members or officers must, in relation to those provisions, be treated as if they had been parties to the agreement, and their rights are enforceable accordingly<sup>7</sup>. Subject to certain requirements<sup>8</sup>, the terms of the transfer may include provision for part of the funds of the society or its successor to be distributed among, or other rights in relation to shares in the successor conferred on, members of the society, in consideration of the transfer<sup>9</sup>.

1929. Required provisions of the transfer agreement.

The terms of the transfer of a building society's business<sup>1</sup> to a successor company must<sup>2</sup>:

328 (1) require the successor to assume as from the vesting date<sup>3</sup> a liability to every qualifying member of the society<sup>4</sup> as in respect of a deposit<sup>5</sup> made with the successor corresponding in amount to the value of the qualifying shares held by him in the society<sup>6</sup>; and 329 (2) confer a right<sup>7</sup> to a distribution of funds, whether of the society or its successor, by way of bonus on every qualifying member of the society<sup>8</sup> equal to the relevant proportion of the value of the qualifying shares held by him in the society<sup>9</sup>.

1 As to the transfer of business see PARA 1927. As to the terms of the transfer agreement see PARA 1928.

2 Building Societies Act 1986 s 100(2). As to the meaning of 'company' see PARA 1927 note 1.

As from a day to be appointed, the Treasury has power to make by statutory instrument such modifications to the transfer provisions contained in the Building Societies Act 1986 ss 97-102D, Sch 2 para 30 and Sch 17 as it thinks appropriate to facilitate, or in consequence of, the transfer of the whole of the business of a building society to a subsidiary of a mutual society (whether or not of the same type): see the Building Societies (Funding) and Mutual Societies (Transfer) Act 2007 ss 3-5; and PARA 1942. At the date at which this volume states the law, no such day had been appointed, and no orders had been made under ss 3, 4.

3 'Vesting date' means the date specified in or determined under the transfer agreement as the vesting date for the purposes of the Building Societies Act 1986 s 97(6) (see PARA 1938): s 97(12).

4 For the purposes of the liabilities assumed under the Building Societies Act 1986 s 100(2)(a) by the society's successor, a member is a qualifying member if he held shares in the society on the day immediately preceding the vesting date and his qualifying shares are those held by him on that day: s 100(3). As to membership see PARA 1888 et seq. As to shares in relation to societies see PARA 1905 et seq.

5 As to the meaning of 'deposit' see PARA 1866 note 7.

6 Building Societies Act 1986 s 100(2)(a).

7 le subject to the Building Societies Act 1986 s 100(7): see note 9.

8 For the purposes of the rights conferred under the Building Societies Act 1986 s 100(2)(b) on members of the society, a member is a qualifying member if he held shares in the society on the qualifying day and was not eligible to vote on the requisite shareholders' resolution, his qualifying shares are those held by him on that day and the relevant proportion is the proportion which (as shown in the latest balance sheet of the society) the society's reserves bear to its total liability to its members in respect of shares: s 100(4) (amended by the Building Societies Act 1997 Sch 7 para 47). He must, in addition to satisfying those requirements, be a member at the vesting date: Abbey National Building Society v Building Societies Commission (1989) 5 BCC 259 at 266 per Browne-Wilkinson V-C. For the purposes of the Building Societies Act 1986 s 100(4), (8), (9) (see PARA 1932), 'qualifying day' means the day specified for the purpose in the transfer agreement: s 100(13). As to the meaning of 'requisite shareholders' resolution' see PARA 1936.

9 Building Societies Act 1986 s 100(2)(b) (amended by the Building Societies Act 1997 Sch 9). Where the Financial Services Authority confirms a transfer of a society's business to an existing company, it may, as it thinks fit having regard to what is equitable between the members of the society, direct that no bonus distribution of funds in pursuance of the Building Societies Act 1986 s 100(2)(b) may be made or that the amount distributed is to be such lesser amount as is provided for in the direction, and where the Authority gives such a direction, no liability to make such a distribution arises, or the liability may be discharged by payment of a lesser amount: s 100(7) (amended by SI 2001/2617). As to the functions of the Financial Services Authority in relation to building societies see PARA 1863. As to the Authority generally see PARAS 4, 6 et seq.

MUTUAL SOCIETIES/(1) BUILDING SOCIETIES/(i) Constitution of Building Societies/I. MERGERS AND TRANSFERS OF BUSINESS/(B) Transfer of Business to Commercial Company/1930. Compensation for loss of office.

1930. Compensation for loss of office.

The terms of a transfer of a building society's business<sup>1</sup> to a successor company<sup>2</sup> may include provision for compensation<sup>3</sup> to be paid by the society or the company to or in respect of any director<sup>4</sup> or other officer<sup>5</sup> of the society for loss of office<sup>6</sup> or diminution of emoluments attributable to the transfer<sup>7</sup>, but any such provision must be authorised so far as the society is concerned<sup>8</sup>. Authorisation must be by a special resolution<sup>9</sup> of the society, not being one of the requisite transfer resolutions<sup>10</sup>. The Treasury<sup>11</sup> may by regulations authorise payments of compensation to directors or other officers attributable to transfers of business<sup>12</sup> subject to limits specified in or determinable under the regulations and the regulations may make different provision for different classes of person<sup>13</sup>. If regulations are so made authorising payments of such compensation within prescribed limits<sup>14</sup> and the provision for such compensation includes only payments of amounts not exceeding the prescribed limits, the passing of the requisite transfer resolutions is sufficient authority for their payment<sup>15</sup>.

A director or other officer is not prevented<sup>16</sup> from receiving payments which, in the aggregate, exceed any limit applicable to him<sup>17</sup> if the excess payment is included in provision approved by a special resolution<sup>18</sup>; but if any payment is received which has not been authorised<sup>19</sup> it must be repaid<sup>20</sup>.

4 As to the office of director see PARAS 1944-1963.

The power to make regulations under the Building Societies Act 1986 s 99(3) is exercisable by statutory instrument which is subject to annulment in pursuance of a resolution of either House of Parliament: s 99(5). At the date at which this volume states the law no such regulations had been made. Since the Treasury has not used this power, which is similar to the power under s 96(2) relating to mergers (see PARA 1924), all compensation payments must be approved under s 99(2) (a) (see the text to notes 9-10).

MUTUAL SOCIETIES/(1) BUILDING SOCIETIES/(i) Constitution of Building Societies/l. MERGERS AND TRANSFERS OF BUSINESS/(B) Transfer of Business to Commercial Company/1932. Restrictions.

1932. Restrictions.

Where, in connection with any transfer of business<sup>1</sup> of a building society to its successor company<sup>2</sup>, rights are to be conferred on members of a society<sup>3</sup> to acquire shares in priority to other subscribers, the right must be restricted to those members who held shares in the society<sup>4</sup> throughout the period of two years which expired on the qualifying day<sup>5</sup>. 'Subscribers' means persons taking or agreeing to take shares in a company for cash<sup>6</sup> but extends here to the situation where the transfer agreement obliges the subscriber to vest shares free of charge in members<sup>7</sup>.

Where the successor is an existing company<sup>8</sup> any distribution of funds to members of the society, except for the distribution by way of bonus<sup>9</sup>, must only be made to those members who held shares in the society throughout the period of two years which expired with the qualifying day<sup>10</sup>. Where the successor is a specially formed company<sup>11</sup> no distribution of funds may be made, except for the distribution by way of bonus<sup>12</sup>, and where negotiable instruments acknowledging rights to shares are issued by the successor within two years of the vesting date<sup>13</sup> no such instruments may be issued to former members of the society unless they are also issued, and on the same terms, to all other members of the company<sup>14</sup>. Where the successor is a specially formed company, the terms of the transfer must include provision to secure that the society ceases to hold any shares in the successor by the date on which the society is dissolved<sup>15</sup>.

5 Building Societies Act 1986 s 100(8). It is unlawful for any right in relation to shares to be conferred in contravention of this provision: s 100(8). As to the meaning of 'qualifying day' see PARA 1929 note 8. It has been held that the 'rights to acquire shares' which were subject to the restriction in s 100(8) were rights which were conferred on members by the transfer agreement; that the 'other subscribers' referred to in s 100(8) were persons who, in connection with the transfer, subscribed or were entitled to subscribe for shares in the successor company, but who did so, or were entitled to do so, on terms which were less favourable than those conferred on members or on some class of members under the transfer agreement, such as some other class of members, employees or pensioners, existing members of the successor company where the successor was an existing company, or members of the public in circumstances where, in connection with the transfer, the successor company made a public offer of its shares; and that where there was no one who, in connection with the transfer, could subscribe or be entitled to subscribe to shares in the successor company other than those persons upon whom rights were conferred by the transfer agreement and those persons enjoyed the same rights inter se, there could be no 'other subscribers' for the purposes of s 100(8). In the case of the transfer of the business of Halifax Building Society to a specially formed successor company, it was accordingly held that there were no persons who were or could become 'other subscribers' in relation to a fixed allocation of free shares in the successor company to be made under the terms of transfer where (1) the classes of members who were entitled to free shares under the terms of transfer were entitled to them on the same terms as those which applied to the classes of employees and pensioners who were also entitled to free shares under the terms of transfer; and (2) no offer of shares in the successor company was to be made to the public, or any section of the public, in connection with the transfer. Given that there were no members of the public who constituted 'other subscribers', it followed that the exclusion of the public from the allocation of free shares did not involve any infringement of s 100(8): Building Societies Commission v Halifax Building Society [1997] Ch 255, [1995] 3 All ER 193.

As from a day to be appointed, the Treasury has power to make by statutory instrument such modifications to the transfer provisions contained in the Building Societies Act 1986 ss 97-102D, Sch 2 para 30 and Sch 17 as it thinks appropriate to facilitate, or in consequence of, the transfer of the whole of the business of a building society to a subsidiary of a mutual society (whether or not of the same type): see the Building Societies (Funding) and Mutual Societies (Transfer) Act 2007 ss 3-5; and PARA 1942. Underwriters obliged to take up shares not otherwise taken up are not in competition for shares, so that it cannot be said that rights of members to subscribe for such shares are conferred 'in priority to' underwriters: Abbey National Building Society v Building Societies Commission at 263-264 per Browne-Wilkinson V-C.

Protective provisions for specially formed successors.

1933. Protective provisions for specially formed successors.

The Building Societies Act 1986 contains provisions<sup>1</sup> to reduce the risk of a take-over of, or the building up of too substantial a stake in, a specially formed successor company<sup>2</sup> within five years from the vesting date<sup>3</sup>. The company specially formed by a building society to be its successor must not, during the period beginning with the date of the company's incorporation and ending five years after the vesting date or, if this prohibition ceases to apply to the company, ending on the date on which it ceases (the 'protective period')<sup>4</sup>:

- 330 (1) offer for sale or invite subscription for any shares<sup>5</sup> in the company or allot or agree to allot any such shares with a view to their being offered for sale<sup>6</sup>;
- 331 (2) allot or agree to allot any share in the company<sup>7</sup>; or
- 332 (3) register a transfer<sup>8</sup> of shares in the company<sup>9</sup>, if the effect would be that more shares than the permitted proportion<sup>10</sup> would be held by any one person (other than the society), or by any two or more persons who are parties to a concert party agreement<sup>11</sup> which relates to shares in the company<sup>12</sup>.

The articles of association of the successor company must include provision such as will secure that the company does not offer, invite subscriptions for, allot, or register transfers of, shares in contravention of these provisions, and no alteration in such provision may be made by the company during the protective period<sup>13</sup>. Any provision (including any altered provision) of the company's articles of association which is to any extent inconsistent with these provisions is void to that extent, and any allotment or registration of a transfer of shares in contravention of these provisions is void<sup>14</sup>.

These provisions cease to apply to a company if:

- 333 (a) a person who is an authorised person<sup>15</sup> becomes a subsidiary undertaking<sup>16</sup> of the company, or the company or such an undertaking acquires the whole, or substantially the whole, of the business of such a person<sup>17</sup>;
- 334 (b) a special resolution to that effect is passed by the requisite majority<sup>18</sup> of the members of the company<sup>19</sup>; or
- 335 (c) the Financial Services Authority<sup>20</sup> by notice<sup>21</sup> to the company gives a direction to that effect<sup>22</sup>.

4 Building Societies Act 1986 s 101(1) (s 101 substituted by the Building Societies Act 1997 s 41).

As from a day to be appointed, the Treasury has power to make by statutory instrument such modifications to the transfer provisions contained in the Building Societies Act 1986 ss 97-102D, Sch 2 para 30 and Sch 17 as it thinks appropriate to facilitate, or in consequence of, the transfer of the whole of the business of a building society to a subsidiary of a mutual society (whether or not of the same type): see the Building Societies (Funding) and Mutual Societies (Transfer) Act 2007 ss 3-5; and PARA 1942. At the date at which this volume states the law, no such day had been appointed, and no orders had been made under ss 3, 4.

5 Any reference in the Building Societies Act 1986 s 101 to shares includes a reference (1) to any warrant or other instrument entitling the holder to subscribe for shares; and (2) to any certificate or other instrument issued by or on behalf of the company and conferring a right to acquire shares otherwise than by subscription, and for the purposes of s 101(1) any shares to which any such instrument relates must be deemed to be held by the holder of the instrument: s 101(8) (as substituted: see note 4).

For the purposes of s 101, shares (a) held by a person in a fiduciary capacity must be treated as not held by him; (b) held by a person as nominee for another must be treated as held by the other; and (c) must be regarded as held as nominee for another if any voting rights attaching to them are exercisable only on his instructions or with his consent or concurrence: s 101(7) (as so substituted).

Any expression used in s 101 and in the Companies Acts (as defined in the Companies Act 2006 s 2: see COMPANIES vol 14 (2009) PARA 16) has the same meaning in the Building Societies Act 1986 s 101 as in that Act or that order: s 101(6) (as so substituted; amended by SI 2007/2194).

6 Building Societies Act 1986 s 101(1)(a) (as substituted: see note 4).

7 Building Societies Act 1986 s 101(1)(b) (as substituted: see note 4).

8 'Transfer', in relation to shares, does not include a transfer to a person to whom the right to any shares has been transmitted by operation of law: Building Societies Act 1986 s 101(6) (as substituted: see note 4).

9 Building Societies Act 1986 s 101(1)(c) (as substituted: see note 4).

10 The 'permitted proportion', in relation to shares in the company, is 15% of the company's issued share capital: Building Societies Act 1986 s 101(6) (as substituted: see note 4).

11 'Concert party agreement' is an agreement to which the Companies Act 2006 s 824 (see COMPANIES vol 14 (2009) PARA 440) applies: Building Societies Act 1986 s 101(6) (as substituted (see note 4); definition amended by SI 2007/2194).

12 Building Societies Act 1986 s 101(1) (as substituted: see note 4).

13 Building Societies Act 1986 s 101(2) (as substituted: see note 4). See PARA 1927 note 5. If s 101 ceases to apply to a company, any provision included in its articles of association by virtue of s 101(2) ceases to have effect: s 101(5).

14 Building Societies Act 1986 s 101(3) (as substituted: see note 4). Where before 21 March 1997 (ie the passing of the Building Societies Act 1997) a company had been specially formed by a society to be its successor, nothing in the Building Societies Act 1986 s 101 as substituted by the Building Societies Act 1997 s 41 is to be taken: (1) to impose any requirement which would not be imposed, or to render void any provision, allotment or registration which would not be rendered void, if s 41 had not been enacted; or (2) to prevent any alterations in the provisions of the company's articles of association which are such as to secure that the company does not contravene, or that those provisions are consistent with the Building Societies Act 1986 s 101(1): Building Societies Act 1997 s 46(1), Sch 8 para 10.

17 Building Societies Act 1986 s 101(4)(a) (as substituted (see note 4); and amended by SI 2001/3649).

18 'Requisite majority' means a majority of the members having the right to attend and vote at a general meeting of the company, being a majority together holding not less than 75% in nominal value of the shares giving that right: Building Societies Act 1986 s 101(6) (as substituted: see note 4).

19 Building Societies Act 1986 s 101(4)(b) (as substituted: see note 4).

20 As to the functions of the Financial Services Authority in relation to building societies see PARA 1863. As to the Authority generally see PARAS 4, 6 et seq.

21 As to the meaning of 'notice' see PARA 1866 note 8.

22 Building Societies Act 1986 s 101(4)(c) (as substituted (see note 4); and amended by the Bank of England Act 1998 Sch 5 para 38(2)). The Authority must not give such a direction unless it considers it desirable to do so in the interests of the depositors and potential depositors of the company: Building Societies Act 1986 s 101(4) (as so substituted and amended).

Business to Commercial Company/1934. Issue of transfer statement or transfer summary to members.

1934. Issue of transfer statement or transfer summary to members.

A building society which desires to transfer its business<sup>1</sup> to a successor company<sup>2</sup> must send a transfer statement<sup>3</sup>, or a transfer summary<sup>4</sup>, to every member entitled to notice of a meeting<sup>5</sup> of the society<sup>6</sup>.

A transfer statement must contain:

- 336 (1) the particulars required, in relation to the prescribed matters<sup>7</sup>, by the regulations made by the Treasury<sup>8</sup>; and
- 337 (2) particulars of any other matters required by the Financial Services Authority<sup>9</sup> in the case of the particular transfer<sup>10</sup>, with or without other particulars regarding the transfer<sup>11</sup>.

A transfer summary must contain:

- 338 (a) the information required by the regulations made by the Treasury<sup>12</sup>; and
- 339 (b) any other information required by the Authority in the case of a particular transfer<sup>13</sup>, with or without other particulars regarding the transfer<sup>14</sup>.

The contents of the transfer statement must be approved by the Authority in so far as they concern the prescribed matters or any matter of which particulars are required to be given under head (2) above<sup>15</sup>.

Subject to the required contents having been approved by the Authority, a society must, in relation to a transfer of business, include a transfer statement, or a transfer summary, in or with the notice to be sent to its members of the meeting of the society at which the requisite transfer resolutions are to be moved<sup>16</sup>. Provision is made for the transfer statement or transfer summary to be sent electronically<sup>17</sup>.

Subject to the required contents having been approved by the Authority, where a society sends a transfer summary, a transfer statement<sup>18</sup> must be handed forthwith and free of charge to any member to whom the summary was sent who asks for such a statement at an office or branch of the society<sup>19</sup> and must be sent forthwith and free of charge to any such member who asks for such a statement otherwise than at such an office or branch<sup>20</sup>. In the latter case provision is made for the transfer statement to be sent electronically<sup>21</sup>.

1 As to the transfer of business see PARA 1927.

2 As to the meaning of 'company' see PARA 1927 note 1.

3 'Transfer statement', in relation to a transfer of business by a building society, means the statement with respect to the transfer which may be sent or handed to members of the society under the Building Societies Act 1986 Sch 17 para 2: s 98(1) (amended by the Building Societies Act 1997 s 30(1)), Building Societies Act 1986 Sch 17 para 1 (Sch 17 substituted by the Building Societies Act 1997 Sch 5 Pt II). As to membership see PARA 1888 et seq.

4 'Transfer summary', in relation to a transfer of business by a building society, means the summary of the transfer statement which may be sent to members of the society under the Building Societies Act 1986 Sch 17 para 2 (see the text to note 6): Sch 17 para 1 (as substituted: see note 3).

5 As to the meaning of 'notice' see PARA 1866 note 8. As to members entitled to receive notice of meetings see PARA 1985.

6 Building Societies Act 1986 Sch 17 para 2 (as substituted: see note 3). As to meetings generally see PARA 1974 et seq.

As from a day to be appointed, the Treasury has power to make by statutory instrument such modifications to the transfer provisions contained in the Building Societies Act 1986 ss 97-102D, Sch 2 para 30 and Sch 17 as it thinks appropriate to facilitate, or in consequence of, the transfer of the whole of the business of a building society to a subsidiary of a mutual society (whether or not of the same type): see the Building Societies (Funding) and Mutual Societies (Transfer) Act 2007 ss 3-5; and PARA 1942. At the date at which this volume states the law, no such day had been appointed, and no orders had been made under ss 3, 4.

7 'Prescribed matters' in relation to any transfer of the business of a building society to its successor, means the matters relating to the transfer, the society, its officers, members or depositors, or the successor, which are prescribed in regulations made under the Building Societies Act 1986 Sch 17 para 5(1) (see note 8): Sch 17 para 1 (as substituted: see note 3). As to the matters prescribed see the Building Societies (Transfer of Business) Regulations 1998, SI 1998/212; and note 8. As to the meaning of 'officer' see PARA 1944. As to the meaning of 'depositor' see PARA 1866 note 7.

8 Building Societies Act 1986 Sch 17 para 3(1)(a) (as substituted: see note 3). The Treasury may make regulations for the purpose of specifying, as prescribed matters, the matters of which transfer statements are to give particulars, and the regulations may also require particulars to be given of any alternatives to the particular transfer which were available to the society making the transfer: Sch 17 para 5(1) (as so substituted; and Sch 17 para 5(1), (2) amended by SI 2001/2617). Any power to make regulations under the Building Societies Act 1986 Sch 17 para 5 is exercisable by statutory instrument which is subject to annulment in pursuance of a resolution of either House of Parliament: Sch 17 para 5(3) (as so substituted). As to the Treasury see PARA 3; and CONSTITUTIONAL LAW AND HUMAN RIGHTS vol 8(2) (Reissue) PARA 512 et seq.

The Building Societies (Transfer of Business) Regulations 1998, SI 1998/212, have been made under the Building Societies Act 1986 Sch 17 para 5(1), (2) (see note 12), and prescribe the matters which must be set out in all transfer statements, those further matters which must be set out depending on whether the transfer is to an existing or a specially formed company, and the matters which must be set out if shares or rights are to be offered in connection with the transfer: see the Building Societies (Transfer of Business) Regulations 1998, SI 1998/212, reg 3(1), Sch 1 (amended by SI 2001/3649). If particulars are required of any matter which is not ascertainable at the time of making the statement, a forecast must be substituted for that matter, together with particulars of the person making the forecast, any persons consulted and the facts and assumptions on which it is based: see the Building Societies (Transfer of Business) Regulations 1998, SI 1998/212, reg 3(2). Where a proposal for a merger or a transfer of business has been made to the society by another society or a company other than the successor company, the transfer statement must contain the terms of such proposal, except to the extent that any such term is subject to a request, which has not been withdrawn, that it remain confidential: see reg 3(3), (4).

9 As to the functions of the Financial Services Authority in relation to building societies see PARA 1863. As to the Authority generally see PARAS 4, 6 et seq.

10 Building Societies Act 1986 Sch 17 para 3(1)(b) (as substituted (see note 3); and Sch 17 paras 3(1)(b), (2) (b), 4(3) amended by SI 2001/2617).

11 Building Societies Act 1986 Sch 17 para 3(1) (as substituted: see note 3).

12 Building Societies Act 1986 Sch 17 para 3(2)(a) (as substituted: see note 3). The Treasury may make regulations for the purpose of specifying the information which transfer summaries are to give: Sch 17 para 5(2) (as so substituted; and amended: see note 8). The specified information is set out in the Building Societies (Transfer of Business) Regulations 1998, SI 1998/212, reg 4, Sch 2.

13 Building Societies Act 1986 Sch 17 para 3(2)(b) (as substituted (see note 3); and amended (see note 10)).

14 Building Societies Act 1986 Sch 17 para 3(2) (as substituted: see note 3).

15 Building Societies Act 1986 Sch 17 para 4(3) (as substituted (see note 3); and amended (see note 10)).

16 Building Societies Act 1986 Sch 17 para 4(1) (as substituted: see note 3). As to the meaning of 'requisite transfer resolutions' see PARA 1927 note 6.

17 See the Building Societies Act 1986 Sch 17 para 4(1A)-(1C) (added by SI 2003/404). Where a transfer statement or transfer summary is required under the Building Societies Act 1986 Sch 17 para 4(1) (see the text to note 16) to be sent to a member in or with the notice of the meeting of the society at which the requisite transfer resolutions are to be moved: (1) in a case where notice of that meeting is given to that member electronically in accordance with Sch 2 para 22A (see PARA 1985), the transfer statement or transfer summary may be sent to him electronically only if it is sent to the same electronic address, and at the same time as the notice; (2) in a case where notice of that meeting is given on a website in accordance with Sch 2 para 22B (see PARA 1985), the requirement to send the statement or summary to that member is also treated as satisfied if the conditions set out in Sch 17 para 4(1B) are satisfied: Sch 17 para 4(1A) (as so added). As to the meaning of 'electronic address' see PARA 1883 note 24.

The conditions mentioned in head (2) above are satisfied in the case of a transfer statement or transfer summary if: (a) the society and that member have agreed that information which is required to be sent to him may instead be accessed by him on a website; (b) the agreement applies to the statement or summary in question; (c) at the same time and in the same manner as the society notifies that member of the publication of the notice of the meeting, it notifies him of the publication of the statement or summary on a website, the address of that website, the place on that website where that statement or summary may be accessed, and how it may be accessed; and (d) the statement or summary is published continuously on that website throughout the period beginning when the member is notified in accordance with head (a) above and ending with the decision of the Authority whether to confirm the transfer pursuant to s 98 (see PARA 1937): Sch 17 para 4(1B) (as so added).

Where, in a case in which head (2) above is relied on for compliance with a requirement under Sch 17 para 4(1), a statement is published for a part, but not all, of the period mentioned in head (d) above, but the failure to publish it throughout that period is wholly attributable to circumstances which it would not be reasonable to have expected the society to prevent or avoid, the failure does not invalidate the proceedings of a meeting or prevent the requirements of Sch 17 para 4(1B) from being treated as fulfilled in relation to s 98 (see PARA 1937): Sch 17 para 4(1C) (as so added).

18 Building Societies Act 1986 Sch 17 para 4(2) (as substituted: see note 3).

19 Building Societies Act 1986 Sch 17 para 4(2)(a) (as substituted: see note 3).

20 Building Societies Act 1986 Sch 17 para 4(2)(b) (as substituted: see note 3).

21 See the Building Societies Act 1986 Sch 17 para 4(2A)-(2C) (added by SI 2003/404). Where a transfer statement is required under the Building Societies Act 1986 Sch 17 para 4(2)(b) (see the text to note 20) to be sent to a member: (1) it may be sent to him electronically only if it is sent to an electronic address notified by him to the society for the purpose; (2) the requirement to send it is also treated as satisfied if the conditions set out in Sch 17 para 4(2B) are satisfied: Sch 17 para 4(2A) (as so added).

The conditions are satisfied in the case of a transfer statement if: (a) the society and that member have agreed that information which is required to be sent to him may instead be accessed by him on a website; (b) the agreement applies to the transfer statement in question; (c) the society notifies the member forthwith, on receiving a request from him for such a statement, of the publication of the statement on a website, the address of that website, the place on that website where the statement may be accessed and how it may be accessed; and (d) that statement is published continuously on that website for the period beginning with the giving of that notification and ending with the decision of the Authority whether to confirm the transfer pursuant to s 98 (see PARA 1937): Sch 17 para 4(2B) (as so added).

Where, in a case in which head (2) above is relied on for compliance with a requirement under Sch 17 para 4(2)(b), a statement is published for a part, but not all, of the period mentioned in head (d) above, but the failure to publish it throughout that period is wholly attributable to circumstances which it would not be reasonable to have expected the society to prevent or avoid, the failure does not invalidate the proceedings of a meeting or prevent the requirements of Sch 17 para 4(2B) from being treated as fulfilled in relation to s 98 (see PARA 1937): Sch 17 para 4(2C) (as so added).

Notification of transfer proposals.

1935. Notification of transfer proposals.

A building society which receives a transfer<sup>1</sup> proposal<sup>2</sup>, must send a transfer proposal notification<sup>3</sup> in respect of the proposal to every member<sup>4</sup> entitled to notice<sup>5</sup> of a meeting of the society<sup>6</sup>. A transfer proposal notification must contain the fact that a transfer proposal has been made, and the identity of the proposer, with or without other particulars regarding the proposal<sup>7</sup>. The notification is not required to be sent to members if the proposer has requested in writing<sup>8</sup> that the requisite details are to be treated as confidential<sup>9</sup>. Where such a request is made and is at a later date withdrawn in writing, the society receiving the proposal must for these purposes<sup>10</sup> treat the proposal as having been received on that date instead of any earlier date<sup>11</sup>.

A society must include in or with every notice of its annual general meeting<sup>12</sup> a transfer proposal notification with respect to any transfer proposal, other than a proposal of which notice has already been given<sup>13</sup>: (1) received by it during the period of 12 months ending with the ninth month of the last financial year<sup>14</sup> of the society before that meeting<sup>15</sup>; or (2) treated<sup>16</sup> as having been received by it during the last three months of that financial year<sup>17</sup>. The society may also include a transfer proposal notification with respect to any proposal received, or treated as received, by it after the end of either period<sup>18</sup>. It is an offence if a society fails to comply with this requirement, and the society, and any officer<sup>19</sup> who is also guilty of the offence, is liable on summary conviction to a fine<sup>20</sup>. Provision is also made in regard to transfer proposal notifications where the notice of the meeting has been sent electronically<sup>21</sup>.

Where a society sends a transfer proposal notification to its members<sup>22</sup> in connection with a meeting of the society, it must send a copy of the notification to the Financial Services Authority<sup>23</sup> at least 14 days before the date of the meeting<sup>24</sup>, and the Authority must keep the copy in the public file<sup>25</sup> of that society<sup>26</sup>. It is an offence if a society fails to comply with this requirement, and the society, and any officer who is also guilty of the offence, is liable on summary conviction to a fine<sup>27</sup>.

1 'Transfer', in relation to a building society, means a transfer of the whole of its business to a company under the Building Societies Act 1986 s 97 (see PARAS 1927-1928, 1938): s 98(1A) (added by the Building Societies Act 1997 s 30(2); and amended by SI 2001/2617), Building Societies Act 1986 Sch 17 para 5A (Sch 17 paras 5A-5E added by the Building Societies Act 1997 Sch 5). As from a day to be appointed, the Treasury has power to make by statutory instrument such modifications to the transfer provisions contained in the Building Societies Act 1986 ss 97-102D, Sch 2 para 30 and Sch 17 as it thinks appropriate to facilitate, or in consequence of, the transfer of the whole of the business of a building society to a subsidiary of a mutual society (whether or not of the same type): see the Building Societies (Funding) and Mutual Societies (Transfer) Act 2007 ss 3-5; and PARA 1942. MUTUAL SOCIETIES/(1) BUILDING SOCIETIES/(i) Constitution of Building Societies/l. MERGERS AND TRANSFERS OF BUSINESS/(B) Transfer of Business to Commercial Company/1936. Required resolutions to approve the transfer.

1936. Required resolutions to approve the transfer.

One of the requirements to be fulfilled in order for a building society to transfer its business<sup>1</sup> to its successor is that the transfer and its terms<sup>2</sup> must be approved by the requisite transfer resolutions, being resolutions passed by the members of the society<sup>3</sup> in accordance with the following provisions<sup>4</sup>. Two resolutions are required, of which one is passed as a borrowing members' resolution<sup>5</sup> and the other is passed in accordance with the requirements for a requisite shareholders' resolution<sup>6</sup>.

If the successor is a specially formed company<sup>7</sup> the requisite shareholders' resolution must<sup>8</sup>: (1) be passed as a shareholding members' resolution<sup>9</sup>; and (2) be passed on a poll on which not less than 50 per cent of the members of the society qualified to vote on a shareholding members' resolution voted<sup>10</sup>. The notice of the resolution<sup>11</sup> must specify that the resolution will not be effective unless the requirements of heads (1) and (2) above are fulfilled<sup>12</sup>.

If the successor is an existing company<sup>13</sup> the requisite shareholders' resolution must be passed as a shareholding members' resolution and must be passed<sup>14</sup>: (a) by not less than 50 per cent of the members qualified to vote on a shareholding members' resolution<sup>15</sup>; or (b) by the holders, being members qualified to vote on a shareholding members' resolution, of shares in the society to a value, on the voting date<sup>16</sup>, representing not less than 90 per cent of the total value of the shares held on that date by the members so qualified to vote<sup>17</sup>. In either case, the resolution must be a resolution in relation to which the notice of the resolution<sup>18</sup> includes a statement specifying that the resolution will not be effective unless the requirements of head (a) or head (b) above are fulfilled<sup>19</sup>.

If the Financial Services Authority<sup>20</sup> considers it expedient, in relation to a transfer of the business of a society to an existing company, to do so for the purpose of protecting the investments of the shareholders of or depositors<sup>21</sup> with the society, it may give a direction<sup>22</sup> that the requisite shareholders' resolution is to be effective if it is passed as a shareholding members' resolution<sup>23</sup>.

The Treasury<sup>24</sup> may by order amend the percentages referred to above so as to substitute for the percentage for the time being specified such other percentage as it thinks appropriate<sup>25</sup>.

2 As to the terms of the transfer agreement see PARAS 1928-1929.

6 See the Building Societies Act 1986 Sch 2 para 30(1)(b). See the text and notes 7-23.

As from a day to be appointed, the Treasury has power to make by statutory instrument such modifications to the transfer provisions contained in the Building Societies Act 1986 ss 97-102D, Sch 2 para 30 and Sch 17 as it thinks appropriate to facilitate, or in consequence of, the transfer of the whole of the business of a building society to a subsidiary of a mutual society (whether or not of the same type): see the Building Societies (Funding) and Mutual Societies (Transfer) Act 2007 ss 3-5; and PARA 1942. At the date at which this volume states the law, no such day had been appointed, and no orders had been made under ss 3, 4.

- 9 Building Societies Act 1986 Sch 2 para 30(2)(a) (amended by the Building Societies Act 1997 Sch 7 para 57(10)(a)). As to the meaning of 'shareholding members' resolution' see PARA 1981.
- 10 Building Societies Act 1986 Sch 2 para 30(2)(b) (amended by the Building Societies Act 1997 Sch 7 para 57(10)(a); and SI 1997/2714). See note 25. As to the right to demand a poll see PARA 1987; and as to the right to vote see PARA 1984.
- 11 le required by the Building Societies Act 1986 Sch 2 para 27A(b): see PARA 1981.
- 12 Building Societies Act 1986 Sch 2 para 30(2) (amended by the Building Societies Act 1997 Sch 7 para 57(10)(b)).

- 14 Building Societies Act 1986 Sch 2 para 30(3) (amended by the Building Societies Act 1997 Sch 7 para 57(11)(a)). The Building Societies Act 1986 Sch 2 para 30(3) is expressed to be subject to any direction under Sch 2 para 30(5) (see the text to note 23).
- 15 Building Societies Act 1986 Sch 2 para 30(3)(a) (as amended: see note 14). The effect is that, in contrast to the position where the successor is a specially formed company (as to which, see the text to notes 7-10), it is necessary for at least 50% of the members qualified to vote on the requisite shareholders' resolution to vote in favour of the resolution, as opposed merely to voting on the resolution (whether for or against). In either case, the requirement for the resolution to be passed as a shareholding members' resolution means that it must be passed by not less than 75% of those who vote on it: see Sch 2 para 27A(b) and PARA 1981.
- 16 'Voting date', with reference to any resolution, means: (1) the date of the meeting at which the resolution is intended to be moved, except where heads (2)-(4) below apply; (2) where voting on the resolution is to be conducted by postal ballot or by electronic ballot in the case of which not all the voting is electronic (within the meaning of the Building Societies Act 1986 Sch 2 para 33A (see PARA 1988)), the date which the society specifies as the final date for the receipt of completed ballot papers; (3) in the case of an election conducted by electronic ballot in which all the voting is electronic voting (within the meaning of the Sch 2 para 33A (see PARA 1988)), the date which the society specifies as the final date for registering votes; (4) in the case of a member appointing a proxy to vote instead of him at a meeting, the date which the society specifies as the final date for the receipt of appointments of proxies to vote on that resolution: Sch 2 para 23(6) (amended by SI 2003/404); definition applied by the Building Societies Act 1986 Sch 2 para 30(8). The power to make such orders is exercisable by statutory instrument which is subject to annulment in pursuance of a resolution of either House of Parliament: Building Societies Act 1986 Sch 2 para 30(7). MUTUAL SOCIETIES/(1) BUILDING SOCIETIES/(i) Constitution of Building Societies/I. MERGERS AND TRANSFERS OF BUSINESS/(B) Transfer of Business to Commercial Company/1937. Procedure for confirmation by the Financial Services Authority.

1937. Procedure for confirmation by the Financial Services Authority.

Application must be made by a building society to the Financial Services Authority<sup>1</sup> for confirmation<sup>2</sup> of the transfer of its business<sup>3</sup> to a company<sup>4</sup> in the manner directed by the Authority<sup>5</sup>. The society must publish a notice<sup>6</sup> of the application in any one or more of the London Gazette, the Edinburgh Gazette or the Belfast Gazette, as the Authority directs and, if it so directs, in one or more newspapers<sup>7</sup>. The notice must:

- 340 (1) state that any interested party has the right to make representations to the Authority with respect to the application<sup>8</sup>;
- 341 (2) specify a date determined by the Authority before which any written<sup>9</sup> representations or notice of a person's intention to make oral representations must be received by the Authority<sup>10</sup>; and
- 342 (3) specify a date determined by the Authority as the day on which it is to hear any oral representations<sup>11</sup>.

After the date specified in the notice in pursuance of head (2) above, the Authority must<sup>12</sup>:

- 343 (a) determine the time and place at which oral representations may be made<sup>13</sup>;
- 344 (b) give notice of that determination to the society making the transfer and any persons who have given notice of their intention to make oral representations<sup>14</sup>; and
- 345 (c) send copies of the written representations received by the Authority to the society making the transfer<sup>15</sup>.

The Authority must allow the society making the transfer an opportunity to comment on the written representations, whether at a hearing or in writing, before the expiration of such period as the Authority specifies in a notice to the society<sup>16</sup>.

Where an application is made to the Authority for confirmation of a transfer of business to a company it must confirm the transfer except where this is precluded<sup>17</sup>. The Authority must not give its confirmation if it considers that<sup>18</sup>:

- 346 (i) some information material to the members<sup>19</sup> decision about the transfer was not made available to all the members eligible to vote<sup>20</sup>; or
- 347 (ii) the vote on any resolution approving the transfer does not represent the views of the members eligible to vote<sup>21</sup>; or
- 348 (iii) there is a substantial risk that the successor will not have such permission to carry on regulated activities under Part IV of the Financial Services and Markets Act 2000<sup>22</sup>, or such permission as a result of qualifying for authorisation<sup>23</sup>, as will enable it to carry on the business which it will have as a result of the transfer without being taken<sup>24</sup> to have contravened a requirement imposed on it by the Authority under the Financial Services and Markets Act 2000<sup>25</sup>; or 349 (iv) some relevant requirement<sup>26</sup> of the Building Societies Act 1986 or the rules of the society was not fulfilled<sup>27</sup>.

However, the Authority is not precluded from giving its confirmation by virtue only of the non-fulfilment of some relevant requirement of the Building Societies Act 1986 or the rules of the society, if it appears to the Authority that it could not have been material to the members' decision about the transfer and the Authority directs that the failure is to be disregarded<sup>28</sup>. Where the Authority is precluded from giving its confirmation owing to any of the defects stated in heads (i) to (iv) above, it may direct the society making the transfer to<sup>29</sup>: (A) take such steps to remedy the defect or defects, including the calling of a further meeting, securing the variation of the transfer agreement<sup>30</sup> or securing the alteration of the approved protective provisions of the articles of association of its successor as it specifies in the direction<sup>31</sup>; and (B) furnish the Authority with satisfactory evidence that it has done so<sup>32</sup>. If the Authority is satisfied that the steps have been taken and the defect or defects has or have been substantially remedied it must give its confirmation, but if it is not so satisfied it must refuse its confirmation<sup>33</sup>.

A failure to comply with a relevant requirement of the Building Societies Act 1986 or the rules of a society does not invalidate a transfer of the business of the society, but if a society fails without reasonable excuse to comply with such a requirement it is an offence and the society, and any officer<sup>34</sup> who is also guilty of the offence, is liable on summary conviction to a fine<sup>35</sup>.

MUTUAL SOCIETIES/(1) BUILDING SOCIETIES/(i) Constitution of Building Societies/I. MERGERS AND TRANSFERS OF BUSINESS/(B) Transfer of Business to Commercial Company/1938. Effect of the transfer of business.

1938. Effect of the transfer of business.

If the Financial Services Authority<sup>1</sup> confirms the transfer of business<sup>2</sup> of a building society to a successor company<sup>3</sup> then on the vesting date<sup>4</sup> all the property, rights and liabilities of the society making the transfer (whether or not capable of being transferred or assigned), except any shares in its successor, are in accordance with the transfer regulations<sup>5</sup> transferred to and vested in the successor<sup>6</sup>. Where a society continues to hold shares in its successor after the vesting date, the consideration, if any, for the disposal of the shares together with any other property, rights or liabilities of the society acquired or incurred after that date are transferred to and vested in its successor on the date specified for the dissolution of the society<sup>7</sup>. Unless the society gives notice<sup>8</sup> of a later date for the dissolution of the society, a society which transfers its business to its successor is dissolved on the vesting date, but the transfer of all the property, rights and liabilities of the society<sup>9</sup> is deemed to have been effected immediately before the dissolution<sup>10</sup>. For the purpose of facilitating the disposal of shares in its successor, a society may include in the notice of the vesting date, to be sent to the Authority<sup>11</sup> notice of a later date for the dissolution of the society<sup>12</sup>. If it does so, the society is dissolved on that date instead of the vesting date, but the transfer of all property, rights or liabilities of the society<sup>13</sup> is deemed to have been effected immediately before the dissolution<sup>14</sup>. A society which has obtained confirmation of the transfer of its business must send to the Authority notice of the date which is to be the vesting date not later than seven days before that date, and the Authority must record the date and, if a later date is notified for the dissolution of the society<sup>15</sup>, that date, in the public file<sup>16</sup> of the society<sup>17</sup>. As from the vesting date a society which has given notice of a later date for the dissolution of the society<sup>18</sup> must cease to transact any business except such as is necessary for the purpose of securing the disposal of the society's holding of shares in its successor<sup>19</sup>.

MUTUAL SOCIETIES/(1) BUILDING SOCIETIES/(i) Constitution of Building Societies/l. MERGERS AND TRANSFERS OF BUSINESS/(B) Transfer of Business to Commercial Company/1939. Rights of joint shareholders.

1939. Rights of joint shareholders.

Where the terms of a transfer of business<sup>1</sup> by a building society to its successor company<sup>2</sup> include provision for part of the funds of the society or its successor to be distributed among, or other rights in relation to shares in the successor to be conferred on, members of the society<sup>3</sup>, in consideration of the transfer<sup>4</sup> the following provisions apply<sup>5</sup>.

Where (1) a person ('A') held shares in the society<sup>6</sup> throughout the requisite period<sup>7</sup>; (2) any shares in the society held by A were jointly held for any period (the 'joint ownership period') constituting the whole or part of the requisite period<sup>8</sup>; (3) A was the second-named holder<sup>9</sup> of the jointly held shares for the whole or part of the joint ownership period<sup>10</sup>; and (4) no person who has priority over A for these purposes held shares in the society throughout the requisite period<sup>11</sup>, the jointly held shares must be treated<sup>12</sup> as having been held by A alone<sup>13</sup>.

For these purposes the following persons have priority over A<sup>14</sup>. Where A was not the first-named holder<sup>15</sup> of the jointly held shares for any part of the joint ownership period<sup>16</sup>, any person who was the first-named holder of those shares for the whole or part of that period has priority<sup>17</sup>. Where A was not the first-named holder of the jointly held shares for any part of the joint ownership period<sup>18</sup> but was the second-named holder of those shares for part only of that period, any person who was the second-named holder of those shares for a later part of that period has priority<sup>19</sup>. Where A was the first-named holder of the jointly held shares for part of the joint ownership period, any person who was the first-named holder of those shares for a later part of that period has priority<sup>20</sup>.

If a person dies during the requisite period at a time when he is named in the records of the society<sup>21</sup> as a joint holder of any shares jointly held, the principles described above have effect in relation to any later time as if he had never been so named<sup>22</sup>.

As from a day to be appointed, the Treasury has power to make by statutory instrument such modifications to the transfer provisions contained in the Building Societies Act 1986 ss 97-102D, Sch 2 para 30 and Sch 17 as it thinks appropriate to facilitate, or in consequence of, the transfer of the whole of the business of a building society to a subsidiary of a mutual society (whether or not of the same type): see the Building Societies

13 Building Societies Act 1986 s 102A(2) (as added: see note 5). The effect is that A may therefore be treated as eligible under the terms of transfer for a cash distribution or for the grant of rights in relation to shares in the successor company, for which he would otherwise have been disqualified by the fact that he was not the sole or first-named holder of shares in the society throughout the requisite period.

14 Building Societies Act 1986 s 102A(3) (as added: see note 5).

15 'First-named holder', in relation to any shares jointly held, means that one of the joint holders who is named first in the records of the society, that is to say, the person by whom alone, apart from the Building Societies Act 1986 s 102A, those shares would, by virtue of Sch 2 para 7(5) (see PARA 1889), be treated as held for the purposes of s 100 (see PARAS 1928-1929, 1932): s 102A(5) (as added: see note 5).

MUTUAL SOCIETIES/(1) BUILDING SOCIETIES/(i) Constitution of Building Societies/I. MERGERS AND TRANSFERS OF BUSINESS/(B) Transfer of Business to Commercial Company/1940. Protection of interests of beneficiaries in the case of trustee account holders.

1940. Protection of interests of beneficiaries in the case of trustee account holders.

A trustee account holder<sup>1</sup> is to be treated by the building society and its successor as not being disentitled from sharing in a distribution<sup>2</sup> as such trustee account holder, and also in relation to another account which he may hold as a trustee account holder or in relation to another account which he may hold otherwise than as a trustee account holder, by reason only of his holding more than one account<sup>3</sup>. This principle has effect, notwithstanding anything to the contrary in the rules of the society, where the terms of a transfer of a business<sup>4</sup> of a society to its successor include provision for a distribution to be made to its members; and where more than one distribution is provided for, it has effect in relation to each of them<sup>5</sup>.

A trustee account holder is not entitled to share in a distribution as such trustee account holder by virtue of the principle described above if<sup>6</sup>:

- 350 (1) the society has notified that account holder that he must make a statutory declaration under the Statutory Declarations Act 1835<sup>7</sup> complying with the requirements listed in heads (a) to (d) below, in relation to any account as respects which he is a trustee account holder<sup>8</sup>; but
- 351 (2) the trustee account holder does not give the society that declaration before the date specified in the society's notice to him<sup>9</sup>.

A statutory declaration complies with the requirements if the person making it declares in it<sup>10</sup>:

- 352 (a) that he is a trustee account holder in respect of an account identified in the declaration<sup>11</sup>;
- 353 (b) the name and address of each beneficiary for whom he holds the account<sup>12</sup>;
- 354 (c) the reason why it is not reasonably practicable for any beneficiary to act in relation to that account himself<sup>13</sup>; and
- 355 (d) in the case where the identity of the trustee account holder changes during any period which is relevant to the distribution in question, and the account is not closed but continues to be held for the benefit of the same beneficiaries (disregarding any who have died)<sup>14</sup>, the names and addresses of all the trustee account holders of the account during that period<sup>15</sup>.

Where a person gives a society a statutory declaration complying or purporting to comply with the requirements listed in heads (a) to (d) above in response to a notice from the society<sup>16</sup> and within the time specified in that notice, that he is a trustee account holder as respects any account he holds with that society then, subject to not having made a false declaration<sup>17</sup>, the society and its successor must treat him as a trustee account holder in respect of that account, and is not liable to any other person in respect of any distribution to him (whether or not the society makes any inquiry into his eligibility before making the distribution)<sup>18</sup>.

1 'Trustee account holder', in relation to any society, is a person who is the holder of an account as respects which all the conditions in heads (1)-(3) below are satisfied and which he holds in trust for another person, but subject to the Building Societies Act 1986 s 102D(5): s 102D(2) (ss 102B-102D added by the Building Societies (Distributions) Act 1997 s 1(1)). The conditions are that: (1) he is a member of the society by virtue of holding that account; (2) the account holder is the sole account holder or the representative joint holder (within the meaning of the Building Societies Act 1986 Sch 2 para 7 (see PARA 1889)) or, in the case of a borrowing member, is not a joint borrower or is the representative joint borrower (within the meaning of Sch 2 para 8 (see PARA 1889)); (3) it is not reasonably practicable for any one or more of the persons for whom he holds the account, by reason of ill-health or old age or any physical or mental incapacity or disability, to act in relation to the account himself: s 102D(4) (as so added). As to membership see PARA 1888 et seq. As to the meaning of 'borrowing member' see PARA 1894. Any reference in ss 102B, 102C (see PARA 1941) or s 102D to the holder of an account (however expressed) includes a reference to a person to whom the society has advanced a loan secured on land: s 102D(3) (as so added). As to loans secured on land see PARA 2006. Any reference to a person holding an account in trust for any other person includes a reference: (a) to any person holding an account for another person in pursuance of any order, direction or authority made or given under the Mental Capacity Act 2005 (see MENTAL HEALTH) or under the Mental Health (Northern Ireland) Order 1986, SI 1986/595 (NI 4), Pt VIII (arts 97-109); (b) to an attorney holding an account for another person under an enduring power of attorney or lasting power of attorney registered under the Mental Capacity Act 2005 (see MENTAL HEALTH vol 30(2) (Reissue) PARA 648), or the Enduring Powers of Attorney (Northern Ireland) Order 1987, SI 1987/1627 (NI 16); and (c) in relation to Scotland (i) to a curator bonis and a judicial factor holding an account for another person; and (ii) to a person holding an account for another person under a factory and commission or power of attorney which continues to have effect by virtue of the Law Reform (Miscellaneous Provisions) (Scotland) Act 1990 s 71

(now repealed), and references to a beneficiary are to be construed accordingly: Building Societies Act 1986 s 102D(9) (as so added; amended by the Mental Capacity Act 2005 Sch 6 para 32).

Where a person holds more than one account in trust for any other person or persons and the beneficiary or any of the beneficiaries in respect of two or more of those accounts (the 'duplicate accounts') is the same then the account holder is not a trustee account holder in respect of any of those duplicate accounts except the one which was first opened, and accordingly the provisions of the Building Societies Act 1986 s 102B(3), (4) apply only in relation to that first opened duplicate account: s 102D(5) (as so added).

'Beneficiary', in relation to any account or any trustee account holder, is the person or any of the persons for whose benefit the account is held or for whose benefit the trustee account holder holds the account, as the case may be: s 102D(6) (as so added). Any beneficiary of any account who is a child is to be disregarded for the purposes of s 102D(4) unless he suffers ill-health or any physical or mental incapacity or disability which if suffered by an adult would prevent it being reasonably practicable for such an adult to act in relation to the account himself: s 102D(7) (as so added).

In any case where the identity of the trustee account holder changes during any period which is relevant to the distribution (see note 2) in question, and the account is not closed but continues to be held for the benefit of the same beneficiaries (disregarding any who have died), the trustee account holders during that period are to be treated for the purpose of s 102B and the distribution as one person: s 102D(8) (as so added).

2 'Distribution' in relation to a society means: (1) a distribution among members of the society of part of the funds of the society or its successor, other than a distribution within the Building Societies Act 1986 s 100(2)(b) (see PARA 1929); or (2) the conferring of rights in relation to shares in the successor on members of the society, in consideration of the transfer: s 102B(2) (as added: see note 1).

Where rights to acquire shares are to be conferred on one or more members of the society by reference to more than one account in accordance with the provisions of s 102B, those rights are not, without more, to be taken, for the purposes of s 100(8) (see PARA 1932), to confer rights to acquire the shares in priority to other subscribers: s 102D(10) (as added: see note 1).

3 Building Societies Act 1986 s 102B(3) (as added: see note 1) (which is expressed to be subject to s 102B(4)-(6) (see the text and notes 6-18) and s 102C (see PARA 1941)). The terms of the transfer of business in question must comply with s 102B(3): s 102B(3) (as so added). The effect of the provisions relating to trustee account holders can be illustrated by a case in which the manager of an old people's home holds separate share accounts in a building society on trust for 20 elderly residents. If the society transfers its business to a successor company, the manager (despite being the only member of the society in respect of the 20 share accounts) will not be disentitled from receiving a separate cash distribution, or a separate grant of rights in relation to shares in the successor company, in respect of each of the accounts.

As from a day to be appointed, the Treasury has power to make by statutory instrument such modifications to the transfer provisions contained in the Building Societies Act 1986 ss 97-102D, Sch 2 para 30 and Sch 17 as it thinks appropriate to facilitate, or in consequence of, the transfer of the whole of the business of a building society to a subsidiary of a mutual society (whether or not of the same type): see the Building Societies (Funding) and Mutual Societies (Transfer) Act 2007 ss 3-5; and PARA 1942. At the date at which this volume states the law, no such day had been appointed, and no orders had been made under ss 3, 4.

7 As to statutory declarations see CIVIL PROCEDURE vol 11 (2009) PARA 1024.

8 Building Societies Act 1986 s 102B(4)(a) (as added: see note 1). The Treasury may make regulations prescribing: (1) the time within which the notice required by s 102B(4)(a) must be given; and (2) the minimum time which may be specified in the notice for the purposes of s 102B(4)(b) (see the text to note 9), but, if such regulations are not made, any such notice must be given in such time, and must specify such time, as will give the trustee account holder a reasonable opportunity to make the declaration and give it to the society in compliance with the notice: s 102D(11) (s 102D as added (see note 1); and s 102D(11) amended by SI 2001/2617). Such regulations must be made by statutory instrument which is subject to annulment in pursuance of a resolution of either House of Parliament: Building Societies Act 1986 s 102D(12) (as so added). At the date at which this volume states the law no such regulations had been made. As to the meaning of 'notice' see PARA 1866 note 8. As to the Treasury see PARA 3; and CONSTITUTIONAL LAW AND HUMAN RIGHTS vol 8(2) (Reissue) PARA 512 et seq.

Where, in relation to a person who has made a statutory declaration to a building society purporting to comply with the relevant statutory requirements<sup>1</sup>, it is shown that at the time the declaration is made he is not a trustee account holder<sup>2</sup> in relation to the account in question, then<sup>3</sup>:

- 356 (1) a distribution must not be made to him<sup>4</sup> if it is so shown before the distribution is made<sup>5</sup>;
- 357 (2) if a distribution is made to him, he is liable<sup>6</sup> (a) to repay to the society's successor any funds, and surrender to it any shares or rights to any shares, which he may have received as the holder of that account<sup>7</sup>; (b) if any shares or rights to any shares are not surrendered, to pay the successor an amount equal to the relevant value<sup>8</sup> of those shares or rights<sup>9</sup>.

Where head (2) above applies, the person is also liable to pay to the successor interest (at the rate applicable to judgment debts<sup>10</sup> or, as respects Scotland, to decrees of the Court of Session) on<sup>11</sup>:

- 358 (i) any funds which he is liable to repay to the successor under head (a) above<sup>12</sup>;
- 359 (ii) the relevant value of any shares or rights which are surrendered under head (a) above<sup>13</sup>; and
- 360 (iii) any amount payable under head (b) above<sup>14</sup>, as from the day on which he received the funds, shares or rights until repayment or payment has been made<sup>15</sup>.

Where the successor receives any payment in circumstances where head (2) above applies, the amount of the payment is treated as settlement of a debt due to the successor and not as an amount due to members of the society<sup>16</sup>.

Transfer of business under the Building Societies (Funding) and Mutual Societies (Transfers) Act 2007.

1942. Transfer of business under the Building Societies (Funding) and Mutual Societies (Transfers) Act 2007.

As from a day to be appointed the following provisions have effect<sup>1</sup>. The Treasury has power to make by statutory instrument such modifications<sup>2</sup> to the transfer provisions (including certain provisions of the Building Societies Act 1986)<sup>3</sup> as it thinks appropriate to facilitate, or in consequence of, the transfer of the whole of the business of a mutual society<sup>4</sup> (the 'transferor') to a subsidiary of a mutual society<sup>5</sup> (whether or not of the same type) (the 'transferee')<sup>6</sup>.

1 The Building Societies (Funding) and Mutual Societies (Transfers) Act 2007 ss 3-5 come into force on such day as the Treasury may by order made by statutory instrument appoint, and different days may be appointed for different purposes: see s 6. As to the Treasury see PARA 3; and CONSTITUTIONAL LAW AND HUMAN RIGHTS vol 8(2) (Reissue) PARA 512 et seq. At the date at which this volume states the law no such day had been appointed, and no orders had been made under ss 3, 4.

2 'Modifications' include omissions, additions and alterations: Building Societies (Funding) and Mutual Societies (Transfers) Act 2007 s 3(9). See note 1.

3 'Transfer provisions' means, in relation to building societies, the Building Societies Act 1986 ss 97-102D, Sch 2 para 30, Sch 17 (see PARAS 1927-1941) and provision contained in subordinate legislation made under those provisions: see the Building Societies (Funding) and Mutual Societies (Transfer) Act 2007 s 3(11)(a), (d). See note 1.

4 A 'mutual society' is a building society incorporated or deemed to be incorporated under the Building Societies Act 1986 (see PARA 1856 et seq); a friendly society within the meaning of the Friendly Societies Act 1992 (see PARA 2082); an industrial and provident society registered or deemed to be registered under the Industrial and Provident Societies Act 1965 (see PARA 2394 et seq); or an EEA mutual society: Building Societies (Funding) and Mutual Societies (Transfer) Act 2007 s 3(10). See note 1. An 'EEA mutual society' is a body which is a European Cooperative Society for the purposes of EC Council Regulation 1435/2003 (OJ L207, 18.8.2003, p 1) on the Statute for a European Cooperative Society; a body which is established as a cooperative under the law of an EEA state as mentioned in that Regulation; or a body which is a cooperative or mutual undertaking of such description as the Treasury may specify by order and which is established or operates in accordance with the laws of an EEA state or any of the Channel Islands or the Isle of Man: Building Societies (Funding) and Mutual Societies (Transfer) Act 2007 s 3(12).

5 A 'subsidiary of a mutual society' is a relevant company (1) in which the society holds a majority of the voting rights or of which the society is a member and alone controls, pursuant to an agreement with other shareholders or members, a majority of the voting rights; and (2) in relation to which the society has the right to appoint or remove a majority of the company's board of directors, but the Treasury may, by order, amend heads (1) and (2) above to make the degree of control required more or less onerous: Building Societies (Funding) and Mutual Societies (Transfer) Act 2007 s 3(13). See note 1. A 'relevant company' is a company within the meaning of the Companies Act 2006 (or, before the commencement of Pt 1 (ss 1-6), the Companies Act 1985) (see COMPANIES); a company within the meaning of the Companies (Northern Ireland) Order 1986 (SI 1986/1032 (NI 6)); a body corporate which is incorporated in an EEA state other than the United Kingdom: Building Societies (Funding) and Mutual Societies (Transfer) Act 2007 s 3(14). As to the meaning of 'United Kingdom' see PARA 2 note 3.

6 See the Building Societies (Funding) and Mutual Societies (Transfer) Act 2007 s 3(1). See note 1.

An order under s 3 may make provision as to the rights (including rights of and pertaining to membership) in relation to the mutual society of which the transferee is a subsidiary of the members of the transferor and of persons who, after the transfer, become customers of the transferee: s 3(2). Such an order may confer such functions on the Authority as the Treasury thinks appropriate: s 3(3).

An order under s 3 may make such consequential, saving, supplementary or transitional provision as the Treasury thinks appropriate; and may make different provision for different purposes: s 3(4). The power to make such an order is exercisable by statutory instrument: s 3(5). An order which makes modifications of a provision mentioned in s 3(11)(a)-(d) (which include the provisions relating to friendly societies mentioned in s 3(11)(b) (see note 3), or amends s 3(13)(a) or (b) (see note 5 heads (1), (2)), (whether or not it contains any other provision) must not be made unless a draft of it has been laid before and approved by resolution of each House of Parliament: s 3(6). Otherwise, an order is subject to annulment in pursuance of a resolution of either House of Parliament: s 3(7). If a draft of an order mentioned in s 3(6) would, apart from this provision, be treated for the purposes of the Standing Orders of either House of Parliament as a hybrid instrument it must proceed in that House as if it were not such an instrument: s 3(8).

For the purposes of the Financial Services and Markets Act 2000 Sch 1 para 17 (power to charge fees) (see PARA 16) a function conferred on the Financial Services Authority by an order under the Building Societies (Funding) and Mutual Societies (Transfer) Act 2007 s 3 is to be treated as a function conferred under or as a result of the Financial Services and Markets Act 2000: Building Societies (Funding) and Mutual Societies (Transfer) Act 2007 s 3(15). As to the Financial Services Authority see PARA 1863, and also PARAS 4, 6 et seq.

An order under s 3 may provide for s 4 to have effect: s 4(1). Section 4(3) applies if the terms of a transfer to which the order applies include provision for part of the funds of the transferor or the mutual society of which the transferee is a subsidiary (the 'holding mutual') to be distributed in consideration of the transfer among the members of the transferor, the holding mutual, or both the transferor and the holding mutual: s 4(2). In such a case, the provision for the distribution must be authorised as follows: (1) it must not exceed the limits prescribed by order under s 4(4) (see below), and the distribution must be approved (in the case of the transferor) by the transfer resolution or (in the case of the holding mutual) by a resolution of such description as the Treasury specifies by order; (2) if the provision for a distribution exceeds the prescribed limits, it must be approved by each of the resolutions mentioned in head (1) above: s 4(3). 'Transfer resolution' means, in relation to a friendly society, the resolution required by the Friendly Societies Act 1992 s 86(2)(b) (see PARA 253 head (b)): see the Building Societies (Funding) and Mutual Societies (Transfer) Act 2007 s 4(5)(b). The Treasury must by order authorise distributions of funds to members by mutual societies participating (directly or through a subsidiary) in transfers to which an order mentioned in s 4(1) applies, subject to limits specified by or determined in accordance with the order: s 4(4). Expressions used in ss 3, 4 have the same meaning as in s 3: s 4(6). Section 3(4)-(7) apply to an order under s 4 as they apply to an order under s 3: s 4(7).

Her Majesty may by Order in Council provide for any of the provisions of the Building Societies (Funding) and Mutual Societies (Transfer) Act 2007 to extend with or without modifications, to any of the Channel Islands or to the Isle of Man: s 5.

(A) IN GENERAL

1943. Approval by the Financial Services Authority.

A building society must be authorised by obtaining permission under Part IV of the Financial Services and Markets Act 2000<sup>1</sup> to carry on its core regulated activities of accepting deposits and entering into regulated mortgage contracts as lender<sup>2</sup>. As an authorised person, a building society is placed under a statutory duty to take reasonable care to ensure that no person performs a controlled function<sup>3</sup> under an arrangement<sup>4</sup> entered into by the society or a contractor of the society in relation to the carrying on of a regulated activity by the society unless the Financial Services Authority approves the performance by that person of the controlled function to which the arrangement relates<sup>5</sup>. A building society will therefore need to take reasonable care to ensure that each of its directors<sup>6</sup> and each of its other officers<sup>7</sup> and employees who is responsible for the discharge of a controlled function is approved by the Financial Services Authority as a fit and proper person to perform that function<sup>8</sup>.

2 See PARA 2046.

3 le a function of a description specified in rules made by the Financial Services Authority under the Financial Services and Markets Act 2000. The Authority may only specify a description of function for these purposes if it is satisfied that the function: (1) is likely to enable the person responsible for its performance to exercise a significant influence on the conduct of the authorised person's affairs, so far as relating to the regulated activity; (2) will involve the person performing it in dealing with customers of the authorised person in a manner substantially connected with the carrying out of the regulated activity; or (3) will involve the person performing it in dealing with property of customers of the authorised person in a manner substantially connected with the carrying on of the regulated activity: see s 59(10); and PARA 367. As to the functions of the Financial Services Authority in relation to building societies see PARA 1863. As to the Authority generally see PARAS 4, 6 et seq.

4 'Arrangement' means any kind of arrangement for the performance of a function of the authorised person ('A') which is entered into by A or any contractor of his with another person, and includes in particular that other person's appointment to an office, his becoming a partner or his employment: see the Financial Services and Markets Act 2000 s 59(10); and PARA 367.

5 See the Financial Services and Markets Act 2000 s 59(1), (2); and PARA 367.

6 As to the office of director see PARA 1944 et seq.

7 As to the meaning of 'officer' see PARA 1944.

8 As to the procedure for applying for approval see the Financial Services and Markets Act 2000 ss 60-62; and PARAS 368-370. Reference should be made to the Financial Services Authority's Handbook of Rules and Guidance for the detailed specification of controlled functions and for the criteria which determine whether a person is fit and proper to perform those functions. As to the Handbook generally see PARA 22.

MUTUAL SOCIETIES/(1) BUILDING SOCIETIES/(ii) Management, Meetings and Accounts/A. DIRECTORS AND OFFICERS/(A) In general/1944. Directors and officers generally.

1944. Directors and officers generally.

Every building society must have at least two directors<sup>1</sup>; allowing the number of directors to fall below two is one of the grounds upon which a society may be wound up by the court<sup>2</sup>. One of the directors must be appointed the chairman of the board of directors<sup>3</sup>. A person under the age of 18<sup>4</sup> may not hold any office in a society<sup>5</sup>.

'Officer', in relation to a building society, means any director, chief executive<sup>6</sup>, secretary<sup>7</sup> or manager<sup>8</sup> of the society<sup>9</sup>. A corporation<sup>10</sup> is not expressly prohibited by statute from being appointed an officer of a society and it would seem that a corporation can be appointed to any office which does not involve the exercise of functions which can only be performed by a natural person<sup>11</sup>.

Any natural person is eligible to be elected a director of a society except where<sup>12</sup>: (1) there is in force a prohibition order<sup>13</sup> in relation to a person<sup>14</sup>; (2) the rules of a society preclude the election of persons who have reached a specified age<sup>15</sup>; (3) the rules of a society preclude the election of persons who do not have the requisite holding in the society<sup>16</sup>; and (4) the person is a minor<sup>17</sup>.

All officers are bound by the rules, and are taken to have full notice of them<sup>18</sup>.

The rules of a society may impose, as a condition of a person's eligibility to be or to remain a director of the society, a requirement that he must hold beneficially shares in the society not less in value than the amount prescribed by the rules, but the minimum holding required must not exceed £1,000 or such other amount as may be substituted by order of the Treasury<sup>19</sup>.

1945. Election and voting.

The directors of a building society, except in so far as they may be co-opted under the rules of the society<sup>1</sup>, must be elected to office, either on a poll<sup>2</sup> taken at the annual general meeting<sup>3</sup> of the society, or by postal or electronic ballot<sup>4</sup> of the members<sup>5</sup> conducted during that part of the financial year<sup>6</sup> of the society which precedes the date on which the annual general meeting is held, as the rules provide<sup>7</sup>. Where directors of a society are to be elected to office on a poll taken at the annual general meeting of the society, a form for the appointment of a proxy<sup>8</sup> must be sent to each person entitled to notice of the meeting<sup>9</sup>. The persons entitled to vote in an election of directors are those members who, on the voting date<sup>10</sup>, are entitled to vote on an ordinary resolution<sup>11</sup> of the society<sup>12</sup>.

Where there are more candidates than vacancies to be filled, a person entitled to vote in the election has one vote in respect of every vacancy, but cannot be required to cast all or any of his votes<sup>13</sup>. Where there are not more candidates than vacancies to be filled by the election a person entitled to vote in the election has one vote in respect of every candidate, but cannot be required to cast all or any of his votes; each vote is capable of being cast either for or against the candidate concerned; and a candidate is elected if more votes are cast for him than against him<sup>14</sup>.

10 'Voting date' means: (1) in the case of an election at a meeting, the date of the meeting, except where head (4) below applies; (2) in the case of an election conducted by postal ballot or by electronic ballot in the case of which not all the voting is electronic (within the meaning of the Building Societies Act 1986 Sch 2 para 33A (see PARA 1988)), the date which the society specifies as the final date for the receipt of completed ballot papers; (3) in the case of an election conducted by electronic ballot in which all the voting is electronic voting (within the meaning of the Sch 2 para 33A (see PARA 1988)), the date which the society specifies as the final date for registering votes; (4) in a case where a member appoints a proxy to vote at the meeting for him, the date which the society specifies as the final date for receipt of appointments of proxies to vote at the election: s 60(17) (definition amended by SI 2003/404).

1946. Nomination for election.

The rules<sup>1</sup> of a society may impose, as conditions of the validity of a person's nomination for election as a director<sup>2</sup>, requirements as to<sup>3</sup>:

- 361 (1) the minimum number of members<sup>4</sup> who must join in nominating him<sup>5</sup>;
- 362 (2) their qualifications as respects length of membership and the value of their shares or the amount of their mortgage debt<sup>6</sup>;
- 363 (3) the depositing of money with the society in connection with his candidature<sup>7</sup>, but no other requirements<sup>8</sup>.

A nomination of a candidate for election as a director of a society may be made at any time, but if made after the closing date for the nomination of candidates<sup>9</sup> for the next election of directors, the nomination must be carried forward (unless the candidate otherwise requires) as a nomination for the next election of directors after that<sup>10</sup>.

The rules made under head (1) above must not require the following numbers of members to join in nominating a person for election as a director<sup>11</sup>: (a) in the case of a society whose total commercial assets<sup>12</sup> do not exceed £100 million, more than 50 members<sup>13</sup>; (b) in the case of a society whose total commercial assets exceed £100 million but do not exceed £250 million, more than 100 members<sup>14</sup>; (c) in the case of a society whose total commercial assets exceed £250 million but do not exceed £1,000 million, more than 150 members<sup>15</sup>; (d) in the case of a society whose total commercial assets exceed £1,000 million but do not exceed £5,000 million, more than 200 members<sup>16</sup>; and (e) in the case of a society whose total commercial assets exceed £5,000 million, more than 250 members<sup>17</sup>.

The rules under head (2) above must not require a nominating member to have been a member for more than two years before the date of the nomination, or if he claims eligibility as a shareholding member<sup>18</sup>, to hold, or to have held at any time during that period, shares in the society to a value greater than £200 or, if he claims eligibility as a borrowing member<sup>19</sup>, to owe to the society, or to have owed to the society at any time during that period, a mortgage debt of an amount greater than £200<sup>20</sup>.

The rules made under head (3) above must not require more than £500 to be deposited with the society, nor require the money to be deposited before the date which, under the rules, is the closing date for the nomination of candidates for the election, and must provide for the return of the deposit to the candidate in the event of his securing either not less than five per cent of the total number of votes cast for all the candidates in the election, or not less than 20 per cent of the number of votes cast for the candidate who is elected with the smallest number of votes<sup>21</sup>.

5 Building Societies Act 1986 s 60(10)(a).

6 Building Societies Act 1986 s 60(10)(b) (substituted by the Building Societies Act 1997 s 27(5)). As to shares in relation to societies see PARA 1905 et seq. 'Mortgage debt', in relation to a loan secured on land and any time, means the total amount outstanding at that time in respect of: (1) the principal of the loan; (2) interest on the loan; and (3) any other sum which the borrower is obliged to pay the society under the terms of the loan: Building Societies Act 1986 s 119(1) (definition substituted by the Building Societies Act 1997 Sch 7 para 53(1)(k)).

7 Building Societies Act 1986 s 60(10)(c).

8 Building Societies Act 1986 s 60(10). Any rules made by virtue of s 60(10) must comply with s 61 (see the text and notes 9-22; and PARAS 1947-1951): s 60(10).

9 'Closing date for the nomination of candidates', in relation to an election of directors, means the last day of the last financial year to end before the voting date: Building Societies Act 1986 s 60(10A) (added by the Building Societies Act 1997 s 27(6)). As to the meaning of 'voting date' see PARA 1945 note 10.

11 Building Societies Act 1986 s 61(1) (s 61(1), (2) substituted by the Building Societies Act 1997 s 28(1)).

12 'Total commercial assets' means the difference between the total assets of the society as shown in the relevant accounts and the aggregate of: (1) the liquid assets of the society as shown in those accounts in pursuance of regulations under the Building Societies Act 1986 s 72C or s 72G (see PARA 1993), or in accordance with international accounting standards, as appropriate; and (2) the fixed assets of the society as so shown: s 61(3A) (added by the Building Societies Act 1997 s 28(2); and amended by SI 2004/3380). As to the meaning of 'international accounting standards' see PARA 1992 note 4. As to the meanings of 'liquid assets' and 'fixed assets' in the case of societies which produce IAS individual accounts or IAS group accounts (see PARA 1992) see PARA 2008 notes 8, 9; definitions applied by virtue of the Building Societies Act 1986 s 61(3A) (as so added and amended). 'Relevant accounts' means the accounts which, immediately before the closing date for nomination of candidates, were the accounts last prepared by the society under s 72A or s 72E (see PARA 1992): s 61(3A) (as so added and amended). The Treasury may by order vary s 61(3A) by adding to or deleting from it any provision or by varying any provision contained in it: s 61(4) (substituted by the Building Societies Act 1997 s 28(2); and amended by SI 2001/2617). At the date at which this volume states the law no such order had been made, but see note 13. 13 Building Societies Act 1986 s 61(1)(a) (s 61(1) as substituted (see note 11); and amended by SI 1999/3032). The Treasury may, by order, substitute for any amount or number specified in the Building Societies Act 1986 s 61(1), for any amount specified in s 61(2) (see the text to notes 18-20), or for any amount or percentage specified in s 61(3) (see the text to note 21), such other amount, number or percentage as it thinks appropriate: s 61(4) (as substituted and amended: see note 12). The power to make such an order includes power to make such transitional provision as the Treasury considers necessary or expedient, and is exercisable by statutory instrument which is subject to annulment in pursuance of a resolution of either House of Parliament: s 61(5) (amended by SI 2001/2617). In exercise of the power under the Building Societies Act 1986 s 61(4) the Building Societies (Nominations for Directors' Election) Order 1999, SI 1999/3032, and the Building Societies Act 1986 (Substitution of Specified Amounts and Modification of the Funding Limit Calculation) Order 2007, SI 2007/860, have been made.

MUTUAL SOCIETIES/(1) BUILDING SOCIETIES/(ii) Management, Meetings and Accounts/A. DIRECTORS AND OFFICERS/(A) In general/1947. Election addresses.

1947. Election addresses.

If, before the closing date for the nomination of candidates<sup>1</sup>, a duly nominated<sup>2</sup> candidate for election as a director<sup>3</sup> furnishes the society with an election address, or a revised election address, of not more than 500 words, then<sup>4</sup>: (1) it is the duty of the society to send a copy of the address or, as the case may require, the revised address to each member<sup>5</sup> of the society who is entitled to vote in the election<sup>6</sup>; and (2) each member's copy must be sent in the same manner and, so far as practicable, at the same time as the notice of the meeting<sup>7</sup> at which the election is to be conducted or the notice of the postal or electronic ballot<sup>8</sup> is sent out, as the case may be, or as soon as is practicable thereafter<sup>9</sup>. Provision is made for a society to comply with the requirements to send an election address by using electronic communications<sup>10</sup>. It is an offence if a society fails to comply with the requirements, and the society, and any officer<sup>11</sup> who is also guilty of the offence, is liable on summary conviction to a fine<sup>12</sup>, but the failure does not invalidate the election<sup>13</sup>.

However, a society is not required to send copies of an address or a revised address to members where<sup>14</sup>: (a) publicity for the address or revised address would be likely to diminish substantially the confidence in the society of investing members of the public<sup>15</sup>; or (b) the rights as to the circulation of addresses are being abused to seek needless publicity for defamatory matter or for frivolous or vexatious purposes<sup>16</sup>. The requirement does not arise in respect of an address or revised address which does not relate directly to the affairs of the society<sup>17</sup>. The Financial Services Authority<sup>18</sup> hears and determines any disputes as to whether publicity for the address or revised address would be likely to diminish substantially the confidence in the society of investing members of the public, whether on the application of the society or of any other person who claims to be aggrieved<sup>19</sup>.

5 As to membership see PARA 1888 et seq.

6 Building Societies Act 1986 s 61(7)(a) (as amended: see note 4). Any dispute in respect of a refusal by the society to send copies of an election address, or a revised election address, under s 61(7) may be referred to arbitration, subject to the rules of the society: see PARA 2063.

7 As to the meaning of 'notice' see PARA 1866 note 8. As to persons entitled to receive notice of meetings see PARA 1985.

8 As to postal and electronic ballots see para 1988.

9 Building Societies Act 1986 s 61(7)(b) (amended by SI 2003/404).

10 See the Building Societies Act 1986 s 61(7A)-(7E) (added by SI 2003/404). The Building Societies Act 1986 s 61(7B) applies where, in a case in which: (1) a society gives notice in accordance with Sch 2 para 22A or Sch 2 para 22B (see PARA 1985) of the meeting at which the election is to be conducted; (2) a society gives notice of a postal ballot by which the election is to be conducted by sending it electronically to an electronic address; or (3) a society gives notice of an electronic ballot by which the election is to be conducted, the copy of the election address or revised election address that is required to be sent to a member under s 61(7)(b) (see the text to note 9) is not transmitted or published at the same time as the notice: s 61(7A) (as so added). As to the meaning of 'electronic address' see PARA 1883 note 24.

Where s 61(7B) applies, the requirement of s 61(7)(b) to send a member his copy of the election address or revised election address in the same manner as the notice is satisfied if: (a) a copy of the address or revised address is made available to the member in the same way as the notice; or (b) such a copy (without being made available to the member in that way) is sent to the member in a manner set out by the society for the purpose in the notice: s 61(7A), (7B) (as so added). Where a copy of an election address or revised election address is sent to a member electronically under s 61(7B), it must be sent to an electronic address notified by the member for the purpose: s 61(7C) (as so added).

The requirements of s 61(7)(b) or head (a) above are satisfied by the publication of a copy of the election address or revised election address on a website only if: (i) the notice of the election meeting or of the electronic ballot is a notice given to that member by being published on a website; (ii) an agreement between the society and the member to his accessing information on a website applies to copies of election addresses or revised election addresses for the meeting or ballot in question; (iii) the member is notified, in a manner agreed between him and the society, of the publication of a copy of the address or revised address on a website, the address of that website, and the place on that website where the copy may be accessed, and how it may be accessed; (iv) the notification for the purposes of head (iii) above is given no later than the day after the date on which the copy of the election address or revised election address is first capable of being accessed on the notified website; and (v) that date was the same as the date on which the notice of the election meeting or of the electronic ballot was first capable of being accessed on a website or (in a case to which s 61(7B) applies) was as soon as practicable after that date; (vi) a copy of the election address or revised election address is continuously published on the notified website throughout the period beginning with the day on which it was first accessible on that site and ending with the voting date (see PARA 1945 note 10): s 61(7D) (as so added).

Where, in a case in which s 61(7D) is relied on for compliance with a requirement under s 61(7)(b) or head (a) above, nothing in s 61(7A) (see heads (1)-(3) above) invalidates the election of a director where a copy is published for a part, but not all, of the period mentioned in head (vi) above, but the failure to publish it throughout that period is wholly attributable to circumstances which it would not be reasonable to have expected the society to prevent or avoid, the failure does not invalidate the election of a director: s 61(7E) (as so added).

A person who is co-opted<sup>1</sup> ceases to hold office at the end of the permitted period unless he is elected as a director<sup>2</sup> of the society within that period<sup>3</sup>. The permitted period is the period beginning with the date of the co-opted director's appointment and ending with whichever of the following first occurs<sup>4</sup>: (1) in the case of a society which elects its directors at its annual general meeting<sup>5</sup>, the conclusion of the next such meeting following his appointment<sup>6</sup>; (2) in the case of a society which elects its directors by postal or electronic ballot<sup>7</sup>, the declaration at its annual general meeting of the result of the next such ballot conducted after his appointment<sup>8</sup>; (3) the expiration of the period of 16 months beginning with the date of his appointment<sup>9</sup>. However, a general meeting or postal or electronic ballot is to be disregarded for these purposes if the closing date for the nomination<sup>10</sup> of candidates falls before the date of the co-opted director's appointment<sup>11</sup>.

MUTUAL SOCIETIES/(1) BUILDING SOCIETIES/(ii) Management, Meetings and Accounts/A. DIRECTORS AND OFFICERS/(A) In general/1950. Retirement of directors.

1950. Retirement of directors.

The rules of a building society may require its directors to retire at a prescribed age without eligibility for re-election or re-appointment<sup>1</sup>, and if the rules make such provision a person who has attained<sup>2</sup> the prescribed age is not eligible to be elected as a director of the society<sup>3</sup>. If a person has attained the normal retirement age, which is 70 years or such lesser age as the rules of the society prescribe as the normal retirement age for its directors<sup>4</sup>, he is not eligible to be elected a director unless he has been approved as eligible for election by resolution of the board of directors<sup>5</sup>, and his age and the reasons for the board's approval of his eligibility have been notified<sup>6</sup> to every person entitled to vote<sup>7</sup> at the election<sup>8</sup>. Provision is made for a society to comply with the notification requirement by using electronic communications<sup>9</sup>. The above requirements do not apply where the compulsory retirement age is no greater than the normal retirement age<sup>10</sup>. If a society, in a case where the board of directors has approved as eligible for election a person who has attained the normal retirement age, fails to notify every person entitled to vote at the election of the candidate's age and the reasons for the board's approval of his eligibility, the society, and any officer<sup>11</sup> who is also guilty of the offence, is liable on summary conviction to a fine<sup>12</sup>. However, any such failure does not invalidate the election<sup>13</sup>.

A director of a society attaining the normal retirement age, or, as the case may be, the compulsory retirement age must, subject to any provision of the rules for earlier retirement, retire from office at the next annual general meeting of the society<sup>14</sup>.

A director of a society must retire from office:

- 364 (1) at the third annual general meeting of the society following the date of his election, unless<sup>15</sup> (a) head (2) below applies<sup>16</sup>; or (b) he is required to retire at the next annual general meeting owing to his age<sup>17</sup>; or (c) his retirement is provided for under rules relating to retirement by rotation<sup>18</sup>; and
- 365 (2) in any case where he had attained the normal retirement age at his election, at the next annual general meeting following that date<sup>19</sup>.

This is subject to any provision for his earlier retirement on the grounds of ceasing to hold the requisite shares in the society contained in the rules of the society<sup>20</sup>.

A person who holds office as, or is to his knowledge nominated for election or proposed to be co-opted as, a director of a society must not later than 28 days before he attains the normal or, as the case may be, compulsory retirement age for directors give the society notice<sup>21</sup> of the date on which he will attain that age<sup>22</sup>. A director failing to do so is liable on summary conviction to a fine<sup>23</sup> and in the case of a continuing offence to an additional fine<sup>24</sup> for every week during which the offence continues<sup>25</sup>.

The rules of a society, if they provide for the retirement by rotation of its directors, may provide that a person elected to fill a vacant seat on the board must retire at the next annual general meeting at which, in accordance with the rules for retirement by rotation, the seat falls vacant<sup>26</sup>. This applies to any vacancy arising when an elected director ceases to hold office for any reason before the annual general meeting at which (disregarding his age) the seat is due to fall vacant<sup>27</sup>.

The requirement of s 60(7)(b) to notify information to a person is satisfied by the publication of that information on a website only if: (1) the society and that person have agreed to his accessing information on a website; (2) the published information is information to which the agreement applies; (3) that person is notified before the voting date, in a manner agreed between him and the society, of the publication of the information on a website, the address of that website, and the place on that website where the information may be accessed, and how it may be accessed; and (4) the information is published continuously on that website throughout the period beginning with the giving of that notification and ending with the voting date: s 60(7B) (as so added). ### 1951. Notification of changes.

Where a person becomes or ceases to be a director of a building society<sup>1</sup>, the society must give notice<sup>2</sup> of that fact to the Financial Services Authority<sup>3</sup> within one month, stating the person's full name and address and the date on which he became, or ceased to be, a director<sup>4</sup>. The Authority must record the person's name and the date on which he began to hold or, as the case may be, ceased to hold office, in the public file<sup>5</sup> of the society<sup>6</sup>. It is an offence if a society fails to do this, and the society, and any officer<sup>7</sup> who is also guilty of the offence, is liable on summary conviction to a fine<sup>8</sup>.

In a case where the rules provide for election by postal or electronic ballot<sup>9</sup> the date of a person's election to office as a director is the date of the meeting at which the declaration of the result of the ballot is made<sup>10</sup>.

Prohibition of tax-free payments to directors.

1952. Prohibition of tax-free payments to directors.

A building society must not pay a director remuneration (whether as director or otherwise) free of income tax, or otherwise calculated by reference to or varying with the amount of his income tax, or to or with any rate of income tax<sup>1</sup>. Any rule of a society and any provision of any contract, or in any resolution of a society, for payment to a director in breach of this provision has effect as if it provided for payment, as a gross sum subject to income tax, of the net sum for which the rule, contract or resolution actually provides<sup>2</sup>.

Disclosure of interest in contracts and other transactions.

1953. Disclosure of interest in contracts and other transactions.

It is the duty of a director of a building society who is in any way, whether directly or indirectly, interested in a contract or proposed contract with the society to declare the nature of his interest to the board of directors of the society<sup>1</sup>. In the case of a proposed contract, the declaration must be made at the meeting of the directors at which the question of entering into the contract is first taken into consideration, or, if the director was not at the date of that meeting interested in the proposed contract, at the next meeting of the directors held after he became so interested<sup>2</sup>. In a case where the director becomes interested in a contract after it is made, the declaration must be made at the first meeting of the directors held after the director becomes so interested<sup>3</sup>.

A general notice<sup>4</sup> given to the directors of a society by a director to the effect that<sup>5</sup>: (1) he is a member of a specified company or firm and is to be regarded as interested in any contract which may, after the date of the notice, be made with that company or firm<sup>6</sup>; or (2) he is to be regarded as interested in any contract which may after the date of the notice be made with a specified person who is connected with him<sup>7</sup>, is deemed a sufficient declaration of interest in relation to any contract made after that date with that company, firm or person<sup>8</sup>. A director need not make a declaration or give a notice by attending in person at a meeting of the directors if he takes reasonable steps to secure that the declaration or notice is brought up and read at the meeting<sup>9</sup>.

These requirements<sup>10</sup> apply in relation to any transaction or arrangement as they apply in relation to a contract, and for these purposes, a transaction or arrangement of a kind capable of falling within the relevant provisions<sup>11</sup> and made by a society for a director, or a person connected with a director, is to be treated (if it would not otherwise be so treated, and whether or not prohibited by those provisions) as a transaction or arrangement in which that director is interested<sup>12</sup>.

A director who fails to comply with these requirements<sup>13</sup> is guilty of an offence and is liable on conviction to a fine<sup>14</sup>.

- 1 Building Societies Act 1986 s 63(1). There is no provision governing the effect of non-disclosure on the validity of a contract; but see Hely-Hutchinson v Brayhead Ltd [1968] 1 QB 549, [1967] 3 All ER 98, CA, concerning a similar statutory provision governing companies (non-disclosure was held to make the contract voidable). MUTUAL SOCIETIES/(1) BUILDING SOCIETIES/(ii) Management, Meetings and Accounts/A. DIRECTORS AND OFFICERS/(A) In general/1954. Substantial property transactions with directors.

1954. Substantial property transactions with directors.

Subject to the exceptions mentioned below, a building society must not enter into an arrangement whereby<sup>1</sup>: (1) a director of the society, or a person connected with<sup>2</sup> a director of the society, acquires or is to acquire one or more non-cash assets<sup>3</sup> of the requisite value from the society<sup>4</sup>; or (2) the society acquires or is to acquire one or more non-cash assets of the requisite value from a director of the society or a person so connected<sup>5</sup>, unless the arrangement is first approved by a resolution of the society passed at a general meeting<sup>6</sup>. For this purpose a non-cash asset is of the requisite value if at the time the arrangement in question is entered into its value is<sup>7</sup>: (a) where the last balance sheet of the society showed reserves amounting to less than £1,000,000, not less than the higher of £2,000 or the amount which represents ten per cent of the reserves so shown<sup>8</sup>; or (b) in any other case not less than £200,000<sup>9</sup>.

An arrangement entered into by a society in contravention of this provision, and any transaction entered into in pursuance of the arrangement, whether by the society or by any other person, is voidable at the instance of the society unless<sup>10</sup>: (i) restitution of any money or other asset which is the subject matter of the arrangement or transaction is no longer possible or the society has been indemnified<sup>11</sup> by any other person for the loss or damage suffered by it<sup>12</sup>; or (ii) any rights acquired in good faith for value and without actual notice of the contravention by any person who is not a party to the arrangement or transaction would be affected by its avoidance<sup>13</sup>; or (iii) the arrangement is affirmed by the society at a general meeting held not later than the next annual general meeting<sup>14</sup> after the entry into the arrangement<sup>15</sup>.

If an arrangement or transaction is entered into with a society by a director of the society or a person connected with him in contravention of this provision, that director and the person so connected, and any other director of the society who authorised the arrangement or any transaction entered into in pursuance of such an arrangement, is liable<sup>16</sup>: (A) to account to the society for any gain which he has made directly or indirectly by the arrangement or transaction<sup>17</sup>; and (B) jointly and severally with any other person so liable, to indemnify the society for any loss or damage resulting from the arrangement or transaction<sup>18</sup>. This is without prejudice to any liability otherwise imposed, and is subject to the following two exceptions<sup>19</sup>. If an arrangement or transaction is entered into by a society and a person connected with a director of the society in contravention of this provision, that director is not liable if he shows that he took all reasonable steps to secure the society's compliance with this provision<sup>20</sup>. In any case, a person so connected and any other director who authorised the arrangement is not so liable if he shows that, at the time the arrangement was entered into, he did not know the relevant circumstances constituting the contravention<sup>21</sup>.

3 'Non-cash asset' means any property or interest in property other than cash and a reference to the acquisition of a non-cash asset includes the creation or extinction of an estate or interest in, or a right over, any property and also the discharge of any person's liability, other than a liability for a liquidated sum: Building Societies Act 1986 s 64(5).

The power to make such an order is exercisable by statutory instrument which is subject to annulment in pursuance of a resolution of either House of Parliament: Building Societies Act 1986 s 64(4). MUTUAL SOCIETIES/(1) BUILDING SOCIETIES/(ii) Management, Meetings and Accounts/A. DIRECTORS AND OFFICERS/(A) In general/1955. Restrictions on loans and other transactions.

1955. Restrictions on loans and other transactions.

A building society must not<sup>1</sup>:

- 366 (1) make a loan to a director or a person connected with<sup>2</sup> a director of the society<sup>3</sup>;
- 367 (2) dispose<sup>4</sup> of property by way of lease or hire to a director or a person connected with a director of the society<sup>5</sup>;
- 368 (3) make a payment on behalf of a director or a person connected with a director of the society in connection with the provision of any service of a kind which is provided by societies for individuals in the ordinary course of business<sup>6</sup>;
- 369 (4) enter into a guarantee or provide any security which is incidental to or connected with any such loan, disposal of property or payment<sup>7</sup>; or
- 370 (5) take part in any arrangement whereby another person enters into a transaction which, if it had been entered into by the society, would have contravened any of heads (1) to (4) above, and that other person, in pursuance of the arrangement, has obtained or is to obtain any benefit from the society or a subsidiary of the society<sup>8</sup>.

The prohibition in head (1) above does not apply to:

- 371 (a) any loan of an amount which, when aggregated with any other relevant<sup>9</sup> loans, does not exceed £10,000<sup>10</sup>;
- 372 (b) any loan made in the ordinary course of the society's business and of an amount not greater and made on other terms not more favourable than it is reasonable to expect the society to have offered to a person of the same financial standing but unconnected with the society<sup>11</sup>; or
- 373 (c) any loan, the amount of which, when aggregated with any other relevant loans, does not exceed £200,000, made for or towards the purchase or improvement of a dwelling house used or to be used as the director's only or main residence if he is an executive director<sup>12</sup> and loans of that description and on similar terms are ordinarily made by the society to its employees<sup>13</sup>.

The prohibition in head (2) above does not apply to:

- 374 (i) any lease or hiring of property the value of which, when aggregated with the value of any other relevant leases or hirings, does not exceed £20,000<sup>14</sup>; or
- 375 (ii) any lease or hiring made in the ordinary course of the society's business and on terms not more favourable than it is reasonable to expect the society to have offered to a person unconnected with the society<sup>15</sup>.

The prohibition in head (3) above does not apply to:

- 376 (A) any payment amounting, when aggregated with any other relevant payment, to no more than £10,000 in respect of which the person on whose behalf it is made is under an obligation to reimburse the society within a period not exceeding two months beginning with the date of payment<sup>16</sup>; or
- 377 (B) any payment of an amount not greater and on other terms not more favourable than it is reasonable to expect the society to have offered to a person of the same financial standing but unconnected with the society<sup>17</sup>.

A society is not precluded<sup>18</sup> from doing anything to provide a director with funds to meet expenditure incurred or to be incurred by him for the purposes of the society or for the purpose of enabling him properly to perform his duties as a director of the society, nor is the society precluded from doing anything to enable a director to avoid incurring such expenditure<sup>19</sup>. However, this applies only if one of the following conditions is satisfied: (aa) the things must either be done with the prior approval of the society given at a general meeting at which the requisite matters are disclosed, or be done on condition that, if the approval of the society is not given at the next annual general meeting<sup>20</sup>, the loan is to be repaid, or any other liability arising under the transaction is to be discharged, within six months from the conclusion of that meeting<sup>21</sup>; and (bb) the amount provided, when aggregated with any other relevant provision of funds, does not exceed £40,000<sup>22</sup>. The requisite matters which must be disclosed for the purposes of head (aa) above are the purpose of the expenditure incurred or to be incurred, or which would otherwise be incurred, by the director, the amount of the funds to be provided by the society, and the extent of the society's liability under any transaction which is or is connected with the thing in question<sup>23</sup>.

The Treasury<sup>24</sup> may by order made by statutory instrument substitute for any of the sums specified above a larger sum specified in the order<sup>25</sup>.

1 Transactions or arrangements which contravene the provisions of the Building Societies Act 1986 s 65 are voidable and the society and its directors may be guilty of an offence: see PARA 1956.

2 As to the meaning of 'connected with' see PARA 1961.

3 Building Societies Act 1986 s 65(1)(a) (s 65(1)(a), (c) amended by the Building Societies Act 1997 Sch 7 para 24(1)).

8 Building Societies Act 1986 s 65(1)(e). For these purposes, 'subsidiary' has the same meaning as in the Companies Act 1985 s 736 (prospectively repealed) (see COMPANIES vol 14 (2009) PARA 25) (as to replacement provision see the Companies Act 2006 s 1159): Building Societies Act 1986 s 65(10) (definition added by the Building Societies Act 1997 Sch 7 para 24(2)(b)).

9 'Relevant', in relation to a transaction of a description falling within head (1), head (2) or head (3) in the text, means an outstanding or, in the case of a lease or hiring, current transaction of that description (whether entered into by, or by arrangement with, the society) not being one authorised by any other authorising provision: Building Societies Act 1986 s 65(10). 'Outstanding', in relation to loans, means outstanding in respect of principal and interest and, in relation to the provision of funds subject to a condition for repayment or discharge of any other liability, means unpaid or undischarged to any extent: s 65(10). 'Authorising provision' and 'authorised', in relation to a transaction of a description falling within head (1), head (2) or head (3) in the text, mean respectively any provision of ss 65(2), 65(3) (see the text to notes 10-15) or s 65(4) (see the text to notes 16-17) or constituted by s 65(5) (see the text and notes 18-19) and any transaction or thing done to which the relevant provision does not apply or which is not precluded from being done by virtue of that provision: s 65(10). 'Provision of funds' includes anything else which, by virtue of s 65(5), a society is not precluded from doing by s 65(1): s 65(10) (definition amended by the Building Societies Act 1997 Sch 7 para 24(2)(a), Sch 9).

1955 Restrictions on loans and other transactions

NOTE 8--In definition of 'subsidiary' reference to Companies Act 1985 s 736 now to Companies Act 2006 s 1159 (see COMPANIES vol 14 (2009) PARA 25): Building Societies Act 1986 s 65(10) (definition amended by SI 2009/1941).

Halsbury's Laws of England/FINANCIAL SERVICES AND INSTITUTIONS (VOLUME 48 (2008) 5TH EDITION, PARAS 1-589; VOLUME 49 (2008) 5TH EDITION, PARAS 590-1619; VOLUME 50 (2008) 5TH EDITION, PARAS 1620-2586)/8. MUTUAL SOCIETIES/(1) BUILDING SOCIETIES/(ii) Management, Meetings and Accounts/A. DIRECTORS AND OFFICERS/(A) In general/1956. Sanctions for breach of prohibition on loans and other transactions.

1956. Sanctions for breach of prohibition on loans and other transactions.

If a building society enters into a transaction or arrangement in contravention of the prohibition on loans and other financial benefits to directors or any person connected with a director<sup>1</sup>, the transaction or arrangement is voidable at the instance of the society unless<sup>2</sup>: (1) restitution of any money or any other asset which is the subject matter of the arrangement or transaction is no longer possible, or the society has been indemnified<sup>3</sup> for the loss or damage suffered by it<sup>4</sup>; or (2) any rights acquired in good faith for value and without actual notice of the contravention by a person other than the person for<sup>5</sup> whom the transaction or arrangement was made would be affected by its avoidance<sup>6</sup>.

Where a transaction or arrangement is made by a society for a director of the society or a person connected with such a director in contravention of such prohibition, that director and the person so connected and any other director of the society who authorised the transaction or arrangement (whether or not it has been avoided in pursuance of head (1) or head (2) above) is liable<sup>7</sup>: (a) to account to the society for any gain which he has made directly or indirectly by the transaction or arrangement<sup>8</sup>; and (b) jointly and severally with any other person similarly liable, to indemnify the society for any loss or damage resulting from the transaction or arrangement<sup>9</sup>. This is without prejudice to any liability otherwise imposed, but is subject to the two exceptions set out below<sup>10</sup>. Where a transaction or arrangement is entered into by a society and a person connected with a director of the society in contravention of the prohibition, that director is not liable under head (a) or head (b) above if he shows that he took all reasonable steps to secure the society's compliance with that provision<sup>11</sup>. In any case, a person so connected and any such other director is not so liable if he shows that, at the time the transaction or arrangement was entered into, he did not know the circumstances constituting the contravention<sup>12</sup>.

A director of a society who authorises or permits the society to enter into a transaction or arrangement knowing or having reasonable cause to believe that the society was thereby contravening the prohibition on loans and similar benefits to directors or any person connected with a director is guilty of an offence<sup>13</sup>.

A society which enters into a transaction or arrangement for one of its directors in contravention of such prohibition is guilty of an offence unless it shows that, at the time the transaction or arrangement was entered into, it did not know the circumstances constituting the contravention<sup>14</sup>.

A person who procures a society to enter into a transaction or arrangement knowing or having reasonable cause to believe that the society was thereby contravening such prohibition is guilty of an offence<sup>15</sup>.

A person, other than a society, guilty of an offence under these provisions is liable on conviction to imprisonment or a fine or both<sup>16</sup>. A society guilty of an offence under these provisions is liable on conviction to a fine<sup>17</sup>.

5 A prohibited transaction is made 'for' a person if: (1) in the case of a loan, disposal or payment within the Building Societies Act 1986 s 65(1)(a), s 65(1)(b) or s 65(1)(c) (see PARA 1955), it is made, in the case of s 65(1)(a) or s 65(1)(b), to him or, in the case of s 65(1)(c), on his behalf; (2) in the case of a guarantee or security within s 65(1)(d) (see PARA 1955), it is made as an incident of or in connection with a loan or disposal to him or a payment on his behalf; and (3) in the case of an arrangement within s 65(1)(e) (see PARA 1955), the transaction to which the arrangement relates was made for him: ss 65(11), 70(5).

Halsbury's Laws of England/FINANCIAL SERVICES AND INSTITUTIONS (VOLUME 48 (2008) 5TH EDITION, PARAS 1-589; VOLUME 49 (2008) 5TH EDITION, PARAS 590-1619; VOLUME 50 (2008) 5TH EDITION, PARAS 1620-2586)/8. MUTUAL SOCIETIES/(1) BUILDING SOCIETIES/(ii) Management, Meetings and Accounts/A. DIRECTORS AND OFFICERS/(A) In general/1957. Transactions with directors and persons connected with them.

1957. Transactions with directors and persons connected with them.

Where a building society enters into a transaction<sup>1</sup> the parties to which include: (1) a director of the society<sup>2</sup>; or (2) a person connected with<sup>3</sup> such a director<sup>4</sup>, and the board of directors, in connection with the transaction, exceed any limitation<sup>5</sup> on their powers by reason of anything included in the society's constitution, that is to say, its memorandum and rules<sup>6</sup>, the transaction is voidable at the instance of the society<sup>7</sup>. Whether or not the transaction is avoided, any such party to the transaction as is mentioned in head (1) or head (2) above, and any director of the society who authorised the transaction, is liable to account to the society for any gain which he has made directly or indirectly by it, and to indemnify the society for any loss or damage resulting from it<sup>8</sup>. These provisions do not exclude the operation of any other enactment or rule of law by virtue of which the transaction may be called in question or any liability to the society may arise<sup>9</sup>.

The transaction ceases to be voidable if: (a) restitution of any money or other asset which was the subject-matter of the transaction is no longer possible<sup>10</sup>; or (b) the society is indemnified for any loss or damage resulting from the transaction<sup>11</sup>; or (c) rights acquired bona fide for value and without actual notice of the directors' exceeding their powers by a person who is not a party to the transaction would be affected by the avoidance<sup>12</sup>; or (d) the transaction is ratified by the society in general meeting, by ordinary or special resolution or otherwise as the case may require<sup>13</sup>.

1 'Transaction' includes any act: Building Societies Act 1986 s 66A(8) (s 66A added by the Building Societies Act 1997 s 38).

2 Building Societies Act 1986 s 66A(1)(a) (as added: see note 1).

3 As to the meaning of 'connected with' see PARA 1961.

4 Building Societies Act 1986 s 66A(1)(b) (as added: see note 1).

5 The reference to limitations under the society's constitution includes limitations deriving from: (1) a resolution of the society passed at a general or special meeting or on a postal or electronic ballot; or (2) any agreement between the members of the society: Building Societies Act 1986 s 66A(8) (as added (see note 1); and amended by SI 2003/404). As to the constitution of societies see PARA 1856 et seq. As to membership see PARA 1888 et seq. As to meetings and resolutions generally see PARA 1974 et seq. As to postal and electronic ballots see PARA 1988.

6 Building Societies Act 1986 s 66A(1) (as added: see note 1). As to the meaning of 'memorandum' see PARA 1873 note 2.

Section 66A does not affect the operation of s 5(8), Sch 2 para 17(1) (see PARA 2038) in relation to any party to the transaction not within s 66A(1)(a) (see the text to notes 1-2) or s 66A(1)(b) (see the text to notes 3-4): s 66A(7) (as so added). But where a transaction is voidable by virtue of s 66A and valid by virtue of Sch 2 para 17(1) in favour of such a person, the court may, on the application of that person or of the society, make an order affirming, severing or setting aside the transaction on such terms as appear to the court to be just: see s 66A(7) (as so added). As to the meaning of 'court' see PARA 1871 note 6.

7 Building Societies Act 1986 s 66A(2) (as added: see note 1).

8 Building Societies Act 1986 s 66A(3) (as added: see note 1). A person other than a director of the society is not liable under s 66A(3) if he shows that at the time the transaction was entered into he did not know that the directors were exceeding their powers: s 66A(6) (as so added).

9 Building Societies Act 1986 s 66A(4) (as added: see note 1).

10 Building Societies Act 1986 s 66A(5)(a) (as added: see note 1). As to restitution generally see RESTITUTION.

11 Building Societies Act 1986 s 66A(5)(b) (as added: see note 1).

12 Building Societies Act 1986 s 66A(5)(c) (as added: see note 1).

13 Building Societies Act 1986 s 66A(5)(d) (as added: see note 1). As to the meaning of 'ordinary resolution' see PARA 1983; and as to the meaning of 'special resolution' see PARA 1980.

Halsbury's Laws of England/FINANCIAL SERVICES AND INSTITUTIONS (VOLUME 48 (2008) 5TH EDITION, PARAS 1-589; VOLUME 49 (2008) 5TH EDITION, PARAS 590-1619; VOLUME 50 (2008) 5TH EDITION, PARAS 1620-2586)/8. MUTUAL SOCIETIES/(1) BUILDING SOCIETIES/(ii) Management, Meetings and Accounts/A. DIRECTORS AND OFFICERS/(A) In general/1958. Records of loans, etc for directors.

1958. Records of loans, etc for directors.

A building society must maintain a register<sup>1</sup> containing a copy of every subsisting transaction or arrangement (other than an excepted transaction or arrangement) which falls within the provisions<sup>2</sup> relating to loans and other financial benefits to directors or any person connected with<sup>3</sup> a director, and is a transaction or arrangement for<sup>4</sup> a director or a person connected with a director of the society during the current financial year<sup>5</sup> or any of the preceding ten financial years<sup>6</sup>. If a transaction or arrangement is not in writing a written<sup>7</sup> memorandum setting out the terms must be kept in the register<sup>8</sup>. A society must make available for inspection by members<sup>9</sup>: (1) at its principal office<sup>10</sup> during the period of 15 days expiring with the date of its annual general meeting<sup>11</sup>; and (2) at the annual general meeting<sup>12</sup>, a statement containing the requisite particulars of the transactions and arrangements within the prohibition which were included in the register at any time during the last complete financial year preceding the meeting<sup>13</sup>.

The requisite particulars are particulars of the principal terms of the transaction or arrangement including (but not limited to)<sup>14</sup>:

- 378 (a) a statement of the fact either that the transaction or arrangement was made or that it subsisted during the financial year<sup>15</sup>;
- 379 (b) the name of the person for whom it was made and, where that person is or was connected with a director of the society, the name of that director<sup>16</sup>;
- 380 (c) in the case of a loan or any related guarantee (i) the amount of the mortgage debt<sup>17</sup> or corresponding liability both at the beginning and at the end of the financial year; (ii) the maximum amount of that debt or liability during that year; (iii) the amount of any interest which, having fallen due, has not been paid; and (iv) the amount of any provision made in the accounts in respect of any failure or anticipated failure by the borrower to repay the whole or part of the loan or to pay the whole or part of any interest on it<sup>18</sup>;
- 381 (d) in the case of a disposal of property by way of lease or hire (i) the value of the property; (ii) the amount of any rental which, having fallen due, has not been paid; and (iii) the amount of any provision made in the accounts in respect of any failure or anticipated failure by the lessee or hirer to pay the whole or part of the rent<sup>19</sup>;
- 382 (e) in the case of any payment made on behalf of the director or person connected with him, the amount of the payment<sup>20</sup>; and
- 383 (f) in the case of a guarantee or security (i) the amount for which the society was liable under the guarantee or security both at the beginning and at the end of the financial year; (ii) the maximum amount for which the society may become liable; and (iii) any amount paid and any liability incurred by the society for the purpose of fulfilling the guarantee or security (including any loss incurred by reason of its enforcement)<sup>21</sup>.

Two copies of the statement must be sent by the society to the Financial Services Authority<sup>22</sup> on the date on which the statement is required to be first made available to members, and the Authority must keep one of them in the public file of the society<sup>23</sup>. A copy of the statement must also be sent, on demand and on payment of such fee<sup>24</sup> as the society may from time to time determine, to any member of the society<sup>25</sup>. Provision is made for a society to comply with the requirement to send a copy of the statement by using electronic communications<sup>26</sup>.

There are excepted from the obligations imposed by the above requirements on a society with respect to a financial year all transactions or arrangements made or subsisting during that year for a person who was at any time during that year a director of the society or was connected with a director of the society if the aggregate of the values of each transaction or arrangement made for that person, less the amount, if any, by which the value of those transactions or arrangements has been reduced, did not exceed £2,000 at any time during that year<sup>27</sup>. There are also excepted from the obligations with respect to a financial year all transactions or arrangements of a specified kind<sup>28</sup> made during that year for a person who was at any time during that year a director of the society or was connected with a director of the society if the aggregate of the values of each such transaction or arrangement so made for that director or any person connected with him, less the amount, if any, by which the value of those transactions or arrangements has been reduced, did not exceed £10, 000 at any time during that year<sup>29</sup>.

It is an offence if a society fails to comply with these provisions<sup>30</sup>, and the society, and any officer<sup>31</sup> who is also guilty of the offence, is liable on conviction to a fine<sup>32</sup>.

26 See the Building Societies Act 1986 s 68(6A), (6B), (11A) (added by SI 2003/404). Where a copy of a statement is required to be sent to a member under the Building Societies Act 1986 s 68(6) (see the text to note 25): (1) it may be sent to him electronically only if it is sent to an electronic address notified by the member for the purpose; but (2) the requirement to send it is also treated as satisfied if the conditions set out in s 68(6B) are satisfied: s 68(6A) (as so added). As to the meaning of 'electronic address' see PARA 1883 note 24.

The conditions mentioned in head (2) above are satisfied in the case of a copy of a statement if: (a) the society and the member have agreed that information that is required to be sent to him may instead be accessed by him on a website; (b) the agreement applies to the statement in question; (c) the member is notified, in a manner agreed between him and the society, of the publication of the statement on a website, the address of that website, and the place on that website where the statement may be accessed, and how it may be accessed; and (d) a copy of the statement continues to be published on that website throughout the period of 21 days beginning with the day on which the society notifies the member in accordance with head (c) above: s 68(6B) (as so added).

Where, in a case in which head (2) above is relied on for compliance with a requirement of s 68(6), a statement is published for a part, but not all, of the period mentioned in head (d) above, but the failure to publish it throughout that period is wholly attributable to circumstances which it would not be reasonable to have expected the society to prevent or avoid, no offence is committed under s 68(11) (see the text to note 32) by reason of that failure: s 68(11A) (as so added).
